Big-city school systems in many places may be facing, because of a lack of funds, the same sort of massive cut-backs that have struck the public schools in New York City. # SWEDISH SOCIALISM FACING TEST TODAY

Ruling Party Is Under Challenge on the Costs of 'Welfare State' After 44 Years in Power

By BERNARD WEINRAUB

GOTEBORG, Sweden, Sept. 18—Prime Minister Olof Palme, winding up tonight a sharply fought campaign, predicted a narrow triumph in tomorrow's general elections and said that Sweden's sweeping social changes were threatened if vocation parties position parties.

At rallies across this gray damp port city and industrial center, the 49-year-old Socialist leader emphasized that Sweden's voters faced a critical choice whether to reject the policies of the Social Democratic Party which has graywhether to reject the posteries of the so-cial Democratic Party, which has gov-erned Sweden, either alone or in coali-tion, for 44 years, or to advance Socialist policies that have buoyed the economy, kept unemployment at 1.5 percent, im-proved working conditions in factories

ers and a priority program to build day-care centers for children.

Asked if 44 years were too long for one party to govern, Mr. Paime said at a news conference here: "I don't think I should lie flat on my back out of com-passion for the opposition."

He said with a smile: "The country was run by the bourgeois parties for hun-dreds of years. We've just had our first 44."

High Taxes a Campaign Issue

Mr. Palme, speaking to foreign journal-ists in the auditorium of a trade union headquarters, said that high taxes were cleanly a campaign issue, and he briefly discussed the case of Ingmar Bergman, the film director who left Sweden last spring after charging that he had been hounded by tax authoraties and the spring after charging that he had been hounded by tax authorities and the bureaucracy.

"The bureaucracy usually deals with real tax swindlers and Ingmar Bergman is most certainly impocent," said Mr. Palme, who is a friend of the director. "It is a cultural clash. Basically it is a case of an individual—a great artist and an extremely sensitive person—and the tax collector. I certainly express my sympatities for his feelings."

Mr. Palme added: "I don't think it will have a great impact on Swedish voters."

The election, expected to be one of the closest in years, pits Mr. Palme's Social Democrats against a coalition of three moderate parties that have campaigned on such issues as the "mhealthy" longevity of Socialist rule, excessive taxes, concentration of power, growing hureaucratization of the "cradle-to-grave" welfare state and, in recent growing hureaucratization of the "cradleto-grave" welfare state and, in recent weeks, the Government's nuclear energy policy. It is this issue, Mr. Palme said today, that may prove pivotal.

"I don't know if I've won the people on the issue," he said. "We have taken our position. Nearly 70 percent of our energy supply comes from oil, which is expensive, makes us dependent and has even greater risks that nuclear energy."

Mr. Palme's Government has pushed through a program to build 13 atomic reactors to supply 40 percent of Sweden's electricity by 1985. This would make Sweden one of the world's biggest per capita consumers of nuclear energy.

A Swing to Social Democrats

His key opponent, Thorbjorn Falldin, the Center Party leader and probable Prime Minister in any non-Socialist gov-ernment, has said that nuclear energy was dangerous and that he would kill the reactor program lest "the lives of future generations were placed at risk." Mr. Falldin, a sheep farmer with broad appeal in rural areas, has urged energy savings in the environment-conscious na-tion and research into alternative forms or energy.

The campaign itself has witnessed a sharp swing in support in favor of the Social Democrats, although the result is expected to be very close. Last spring, following the tax troubles of Mr Bergman, colored and the many series. opinion polls showed the non-Socialists as having the support of 54 percent of the voters, against only 38.5 percent of the Social Democrats and 4.5 percent for the Communists. It was the sharpest drop for the Social Democrats in more than

A CONTRACTOR OF THE PARTY OF India Is Lifting Rules on Press For Foreigners

By WILLIAM BORDERS

NEW DELHI Sept. 18—The Indian Government, in a gesture of good will toward foreign correspondents working here, announced today that it was withdrawing the censorship regulations that it has tried for the past year to impose them.

There was no indication, however, of any lessening of the rigid control that the Government has exerted over Indian newspapers in the 15 months since censorship was imposed under Prime Minis-ter Indira Gandhi's sweeping declaration ter Indira Gandhi's sweeping declaration of emergency.

The withdrawal of the so-called "censorship guidelines" has little immediate practical effect, since, as the Government knows, most of the Western reporters here have been ignoring them anyway. However, both sides regarded it as a significant gesture. And the tone of the meeting at which Information Minister V. C. Shukla amnounced the changes today was dramatically different from his earlier meetings with the foreign press; his mood was conciliatory, friendly and understanding.

"We do not expect you to sing our praises," Mr. Shukla said, as he sat sipping a soft drink with two dozen correspondents. "I don't think your papers have sent you here to praise this country. What we expect of you here is only faithful reporting of the events, and accurate reporting."

He did indicate, though, that foreign publications would continue to be barned to India if they contain "something extremely objectionable."

Mr. Shukla said there was a possibility, that the Government might permit the return to India of some of the seven for-

Mr. Shukla said there was a possibility, that the Government might permit the return to India of some of the seven foreign correspondents, five Americans and two Bratons, whom it expelled in the seven months immediately following the emergency declaration in June of 1975. "Let the individual cases come before us and we hhall examine them," he said. "Each case will be treated on its merits. There is no prejudice, no predetermined attitude about any particular paper."

One Outright Ban

In the past, Government officials have said privately that in the case of The Washington Post at least there was an touright ban.

Lewis M. Simons, The Post's resident correspondent, was expelled four days after the emergency declaration, and no other Post correspondents have been per-mitted to work here. In the case of The Los Angeles Times and The Associated Press, by contrast, new resident correspondents have been permitted in to take the jobs of colleagues who had been expelled.
The other publications whose correspondents were expelled were Newsweek, spondents were expelled were Newsweek,

The Far Eastern Economic Review, The Daily Telegraph and The Times of London, The British Broadcasting Corporation correspondent withdrew voluntarily last year, and finally announced last month that it was closing down its office here because of censorship restrictions.
Asked if the B.B.C. might now remain after all, Mr. Shulka said: "If they make a request, we shall certainly consider it.
B.B.C. went out of this place on their own; we didn't throw them out."

The guidelines that the Government abrogated today were pieced together in a rush during several hectic days in July 1975, after the Government discovered a rish during several heetic days in July 1975, after the Government discovered its inability to control the way the foreign press covered the envergency declaration and the suspension of civil liberties. They prohibited the reporting of any political arrest or of the name of any of the thousands of political prisoners, or of any opposition actipities, rablies or speeches, including even speeches in Parhament.

Deportation Threatened

The Government delivered the guide-lines to all the foreign correspondents and asked them under pain of deportation and asked them under pain of deportation to sign a piedge that read: "I undertake to comply with the censorship guidelines for the press and instructions issued thereunder." Most of the correspondents balked, and it was at this point that the correspondents of Newsweek, the Telegraph and The Times of London were expelled for reforing to sign.

But a few days later the Government modified the wording of the statement it wanted correspondents to sign: "I have received the censorship guidelines of the Government of India," the new statement declared. "I agree to undertake full responsibility for my reports in regard to these guidelines and other instructions issued thereunder by the responsible authorities."

Many correspondents, including those of The New York Times, agreed to sign this modified statement. A. M. Rosenthal. managing editor of The Times, explained the paper's view of the new wording. "In our opinion, it amounts simply to acknowledgement of receipt of a Government document and a statement by the correspondent that he will be responsible for whatever he writes. This is obviously true of all our correspondents every. true of all our correspondents every-where. In our view, this involves no com-mitments by our correspondents in India that would prevent them from writing what they consider full, accurate and fair reports."

TAIWAN ANALYSTS PREDICT INSTABILITY FOR CHINESE

Special to The New York Times

TAIPEI, Taiwan, Sept. 18—Chinese Nationalist analysts here believe that the death of Chairman Mao Tse-tung will plunge China into a period of prolonged political instability that will ease some of the pressure on Taiwan in foreign rela-

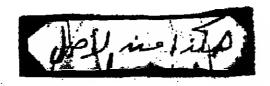

. In their view, conflicts between the radical and moderate factions in the Chinese leadership are not only too deep to be reconciled, but can now be expected to intensify.

"Mato's death, the loss of his patronage, is a tremendous blow to the radicals," said Warren Kuo, a deputy director of the Institute of International Relations, "since they had not had time to consolidate their position. Now the moderates, who were unable to organize themselves as long as Mao was edive, will begin to coalesce to insure their survival."

The only atternative the analysts see is that one faction will attempt to wrest control by force, leading to even more turnoil. From Nationalist China's perspective, either development would be welcome, since a mainland Government besieged by internal problems should have less time to pursue policies simed at isolating Taiwan.

750,000 IN PEKING ATTEND MAO EULOGY

afternooo, with all participants standing for three minutes in sileot tribute to Chairman Mao—everyone in China had been asked to do that. The wailing of sirens and factory whistles filled the air of Peking.

The whole city seemed to stand still. The only visible movement was that of smoke rising from the chimneys of factories whose workers had been ahla to interrupt their chores only momentarily.

No reference was made at the memorial rally to the final disposition of the hody of Chairman Mao, to which 300,000 paid their respects at the Great Hall of People following his death at 82 on Sept. 9. It was still uncertain whether the body would be preserved, entombed, or would be cremated as many of China's other revolutionary heroes have been.

Earlier in the afternoon there were scenes throughout Peking that must have been duplicated everywhere in China. Small knots of people gathered outside their homes to listen to the radio and await the three minutes of tribute at 3 P.M.; larger, organized groups sat down in froot of television sets set up outdoors by oeighborhood committees, or marched solemnly to memorial railies at schools and places of work.

Oo television, Tian An Meo Square was calm, nrdered and decorous. Oo the magenta-colored rostrum, decorated and surrounded by evergreens, flowers, wreaths and funeral bunting, stood virtually the entire Chinese leadership. Arrayed io the square, before the leaders, were blocks of mourners—long rectangles of army men in green tunics, whiteshirted schoolchildreo and blue-shirted workers and peasants.

Only the Select Attend

An official announcement said that 1 million people had attended the rally, but that might have represented a rounding-out of a somewhat smaller figure. An independent calculation suggests, that the attendance was approximately 750,000 persons. The rally was not open to the general public; only members of selected groups were allowed to attend.

throughout the 30-mionte rally. Soong
Ching-ling, the 86-year-old, Uoited Stateseducated widow of China's first republican President, Sun Yat-sen, sat in a chair and leaned on a cane.

As Prime Minster Hua delivered the memorial speech in his thick Shansi accent, the picture that Chinese television viewers saw on their screens was of two men—Mr. Hua and Wang Hung-wen. Mr. Wang, the second-ranking member of the Communist Party, known for his radical Shanghai background, stood beside and just behind the Prime Minister, silently and intently following the text that Mr. Hua was reading aloud.

The Achievements of Mao

As the three minutes of silence began, an army hand struck up the chords of the Funeral March that the people of China have heard countless times during the last 10 days. Then, after the National Anthem and the Internationale were played, Mr. Hua hegan hi s funeral oration, which was hroadcast live through-

He saluted Mao as "the founder and wise leader of the Communist Party of China, the Chinese People's Liberation Army and the People's Republic of China."

"It was under Chairman Mao's leadership that the Chinese people who had long suffered from oppression and exploitatioo, won emancipatioo and became masters of the country," Mr. Hua said. "It was under Chairman Mao's leadership that the disaster-plagued Chinese natioo rose to its feet. The Chinese people love, trust and esteem Chairman Mao from the bottom of their hearts."

The Long Road to Victory

He reviewed Mao's revolutionary career, which saw him lead a ooce small and embattled group of Communists to the point, a quarter of a century ago, when they achieved victory and theo unified all of mainland China Mr. Hua did not gloss over Chairman Mao's struggles with other leaders in the Communist Party; he credited him with victory over a long line of "opportunists" and "counterrevolutionary" leaders up to and including Teog Hsiao-ping, the powerful Deputy Prime Minster who was purged earlier this year.

For the future, the underlying message of Mr. Hua's speech seemed to be one of continuity in the ideological line that has emerged during the past several months. He called explicitly for a continuation in the criticism of Teng Hsiao-ping, but he also issued a plea for an end to factionalism, employing an old quotation from Chairman Mao.

'The whole Party, the whole Army and the people of all nationalities throughout the country must respond to the call of the Party Central Committee, actively turn grief into strength, carry on the cause left by Chairman Mao:

'Practice Marxism, not revisionism; unite and doo't split; be open and above board; and doo't intrigue and conspire,' and, under the leadership of the Party Central Committee, carry through to the end the cause of the proletarian revolution in China that Chairman Mao pioneered."

Bows, and 'The East Is Red'
"Eternal glory to the great leader and teacher, Chairman Mao Tse-tung," Mr. Hua concluded. He then led the people in three bows to the black-and-white photographic portrait of Chairman Mao which stood at the center of the Gate of Heavenly Peace. As Wang Hung-wen called out the timing of the bows, everyone in the entire area hent from the waist in unison.

Then, with the playing of "The East Is Red," which has becomine the anthem of Chinese Communism, people began weeping. A moment or two later they were told they could rest and, as they sat down, many huried their faces in their arms.

Within 30 minutes groups of mourners were being marched away to the assembly points beyond the cordoned-off area where trucks and huses awaited them. Some marched, some ran, but the sceee was quiet and orderly.

Lineup of Leaders for Mao Eulogy Indicates an Attempt at Continuity

HONG KONG, Sept. 18—Today's carefully organized memorial raily in Peking for the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung appeared designed to reinforce a sense of continuity in China's leadership and policies according to applicate lace.

Was confirmed over the centuries when China's contacts with the outside world were limited to what Chinese considered barbarians on their borders.

This ethnocentricity was reinforced continuity in China's leadership and policies, according to analysis here.

As expected, China's surviving senior party leaders, headed by Prime Minister Huz Kiro-feng, appeared in strict party rank on the rostrum above Tien An Men, the Gate of Heavenly Peace. Mr. Hua's delivery of the culogy, befitted his job as first deputy chairman of the Communist Party, now the highest-ranking post in the country.

This ethnocentricity was reinforced under the Communists by Chairman Mao's insistence on "self-reliance," building up China without depending on the imperialist powers that humiliated the nation over the past 100 years.

Chies to Succession Still Dim

The funeral rally, televised live

The appearance of Mr. Huz and the other party leaders in correct hierarchical order followed a series of other appearances, also in proper rank, that China's leaders have made at memorial tryices since Mao died on Sept. 9. Similarly, Mr. Hua's call for continuance of Mao's cause and unity behind the party leadership echoed an appeal in a major editorial in Peking newspapers this week to heed a Mao injunction to "act according to prin-ciples laid down."

A Collective Leadership Seen

On the basis of such evidence, scant on the basis of such evidence, scant as it may be, most analysts here believe Mr. Hua will head a collective leadership team for the immediate future and will generally follow current policies. But the analysts were acutely aware, too, that at the funeral for Prime Minister Chou En-lai last January, the eulogy was read by Teng Hsiao-ping, then the Prime Minister.

At the time Mr. Teng seemed certain to succeed to the nation's leadership. But it was the last time he has been seen in public, and in April he was ousted from all his posts after being accessed of ethnocentricity that still exists in China. The very name, in Chinese, for death makes calling a new party congress the country—Chung-kuo, or central cou

The funeral rally, televised live throughout China and monitored here in Hong Kong, offered few ether clues to the many puzzles of who will now emerge as Peking's leaders, or what actu-al policies will be pursued. "There were no surprises today, which is what they probably intended," said one analyst here.

The television broadcast from Peking memorial was followed by one of a similar mass ceremony in Canton; presided over by the few remaining provincial party leaders who did not go to Peking this mask

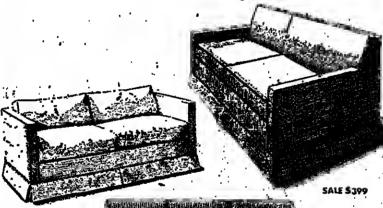

At first it was thought that virtually all of the 176 surviving members of the party's Central Committee had made the journey to the capital and hence a party meeting could already be under way oo the question of succession. But the Canton service, in a large stadium, showed that two regular members of the Central Committee and one alternate member were still in Canton.

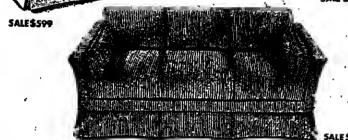

However, that did not rule out the pos-sibility that these and other Central Committee members who might have staved in public, and in April he was outed from all his posts after being accessed of being a rightist.

The deliberate decision to invite no foreigners to the ceremony today seemed another example of the strong tradition congress in 1973.

A Jailed Black Relays Warning To Kissinger

By JOHN F. BURNS

JOHANNESBURG, Sept. 18 - While Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger was meeting in Pretoria today with a group of nonwhite representatives bundreds of more radical black leaders were in' jail cells, under indefinite detention without trial.

Many of these leaders have vigorously opposed the United States decision to deal directly with Prime Minister John Vorster and have warned that future American relations with a black-ruled South Africa may be jeopardized by the Kissinger-Vorster talks, which are widely regarded by black radicals as reinforcing the position of the white Government

One of the most prominent detainees Steven Biko, spoke to this reporter some weeks ago about what he would tell Mr. Kissinger if he had the opportunity-to meet him. At the time Mr. Biko was under a Government hanning order, forbidding him to give interviews for publication.

Steven Biko photographed in King William's Town, South Africa, shortly before he was arrested.

He agreed that his remarks should be published if he was arrested. Recently, he was seized by the security police at his home in Kingwilliamstown, 450 miles south of Johannesburg.

On the question of relations between South Africa and the United States, be said that black radicals bere would like to see "less of the Kissinger-Vorster type."

to see "less of the Kissinger-Vorster type of talks and more explicit support, both morally and money-wise, for the liberation struggle in Azania," the name given to South Africa by black nationalists.

Urges an Ultimatum

In particular, he said, the United States should issue an ultimatum to South Africa to abandon apartheid, its policy of racial separation, or face a complete trade, sports and cultural boycott. It should make "a more realistic use" of its vote in the United Nations, supporting moves to oust Sonth Africa from the world hody and its agencies, he said.

On the question of American invest-ment in South Africa, involving more than 300 companies and a total of more than $2 billion, Mr. Biko said that the United States should ban any further investment and take steps to force those companies now operating here to leave. The attitude of a hlack government toward future relations with the United States, he said, would be governed by the readiness of the United States to take these and other restrictive measures dur. these and other restrictive measures dur-ing the present stage of the black strug-

"I don't think that relations between America and Azania would necessarily be jeopardized, but I think our attitude would be heavily influenced by the attiwould be heavily influenced by the atti-tudes that America takes towards the present process of change," he said.
"America simply cannot afford to prop up the system at a time when it is being seriously challenged by progressive forces. If they do, and it is a question that has been raised in our minds by the Kissinger-Vorster talks it means insothe Kissinger-Vorster talks, it means, ipso facto, a reassessment of our attitude towards future relations between us."

Mr. Biko's remarks took on new signifi-cance after a number of black organizations issued statements before Mr. Kissinger's talks warning that they were likely to reinforce the suspicious because those invited to the talks were mostly black leaders who cooperate in one way or another with the Government. If Mr. Rissinger wanted to hear the true voice of black South Africa, these groups maintained, he should have insisted on meeting some of the black leaders that the Government has detained, most of whom operate outside Government - created

More Than 850 Blacks Detained.

Altogether more than 850 blacks have heen detained without trial since the anti-Government upheaval in hlack townships began three months ago. Of these, about 250 belong to the so-called black-consciousness groups, formed in recent years to carry the fight against apartheid.

Mr. Biko, aged 29, is widely regarded as a key figure in these groups. He was founder and first president of the South African Students' Organization, a black university group, and a major figure behind the Black People's Convention, the closest thing to a functioning black political party.

His discussion with this reporter took place at the offices of the Black Com-munity Program, a self-belp group in Kingwilliamstown. Mr. Biko's manner was mild, his responses laced with humorous accounts of brushes with authorities. He spoke of black rule in South Africa as an eventual certainty and indi-cated that he expected to play a role

He made it clear that a government formed around the black-consciousness groups would follow a policy of black socialism, placing ssevere restraints on private enterprise and sharply cutting, if teliminating, foreign investment.

Under the Government's plan, an-nounced last week, both the House of Deputies and the Senate would be elected by universal suffrage. Royal appointees, a prominent feature of the institutions devised by Franco, would be kimited to a fifth of those elected to the Senate during any four-year term.

here's a saying around here: "It's not how little (or how much) you spend, it's what you get for your money that matters."

So let's see exactly what you're getting today.

- 1. The rich, thick, nappy luxury of genuine suede leather.
- 2. Today's sleek, slim silhouette.
- 3. Full-length side zippers so these slender ones go easy-on, easy-off.
- 4. Well-stacked heels set you a little bit above the crowd.
- 5. Non-skid soles make the walking safer, whatever the weather.
- 6. New stitching details with a way-out-West look that's subtle enough for any city-scape.
- 7. Even the linings are luxurious: nylon tricot with a soft, silky feeling that strokes your legs and protects your panty-hose.
- 8. The fine, boot-maker construction you expect from Sandler of Boston.
- 9. Seven super-fashion shades: black, dark green, gray, wine, brown, rust, or navy.
- 10. Or, if you'd rather have calf: shining black or brown.

F.B.I. BEGAN INQUIRY OF CARSWELL IN '70

Agents Apparenty Failed to Tell Nixon Aides About Family Ties to a Teacher Later Slain

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18-The Federal Bureau of Investigation apparently failed to pass on to Nixon Administration officials information about the family connections of former Federal Judge G. Harrold Carswell that might have raised questions about his nomination for a seat on the Supreme Court.

The information, much of it circum-stantial or hased on rumor, was produced in an investigation begun on the hureau's own loitiative shortly after Judge Car-swell's nomination to the high court was announced on Jan. 19, 1970, according to a number of well-placed sources.

The information concerned a link be-tween the Carswell family and John Pack, a homosexual high school teacher who was found slain two weeks after the omination was announced.

Law enforcement sources in Florida said the information was brought to the F.B.I.'s attention well before the Senate debate on the nomination of Mr. Carswell, then a Federal Appeals Court judge.

But former high officials in the Nixoo Administration who had been responsible for overseeing the comination process said the information had not been reported to them.

Indicted Last June

Mr. Carswell, who retired from the Federal bench in 1970 after the Senate narrowly rejected his nomination, was in-dicted in Tallahassee last June on a charge of having made a homosexual approach to a vice-squad officer in the mens' room of a shopping mall there.

Mr. Carswell has denied any wrongdoing in that case, and disposition of the case

House counsel who, as a Justice Department official in 1970, was involved with the Carswell nomination, said in a recent telephone interview that the publicity arising from Mr. Carswell's recent arrest was the first indication he had had that the former judge-might have been a

Mr. Dean also said he did not know why the F.B.L bad investigated Mr. Cars-well on that occasioo at all, since the White House had not asked for a back-ground check on the judge prior to his Supreme Court nomination.

The reason, he said, was that the bureau had cooducted an extensive exami-nation of Mr. Carswell's background less than a year before, when he was appointed to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, and that "no fresh ### input" was deemed necessary. File Called 'Up to Date'

Egil Krogh Jr., then the White House official in charge of the Supreme Court selection process, said that he, too, had seen nothing suggesting anything abnor-mal in the F.B.I. file compiled earlier on

Mr. Carswell, which he said had been presented to him as "up to date."

Nonetheless, sources interviewed by The New York Times during a month-long inquiry said that, after the announcement. of Mr. Carswell's nomination, the F.B.L's Tallahassee office was instructed by burean headquarters to assemble all available information on the judge's back-

That investigation amounted to little more than the checking of newspaper files, the sources said, until Feb. 1, 1970, when John Pack's hody was found in his Tallahassee apartment by deputies of the Leon County Sheriff's Department. Mr. Pack had been shot three times with a .45-caliber pistol.

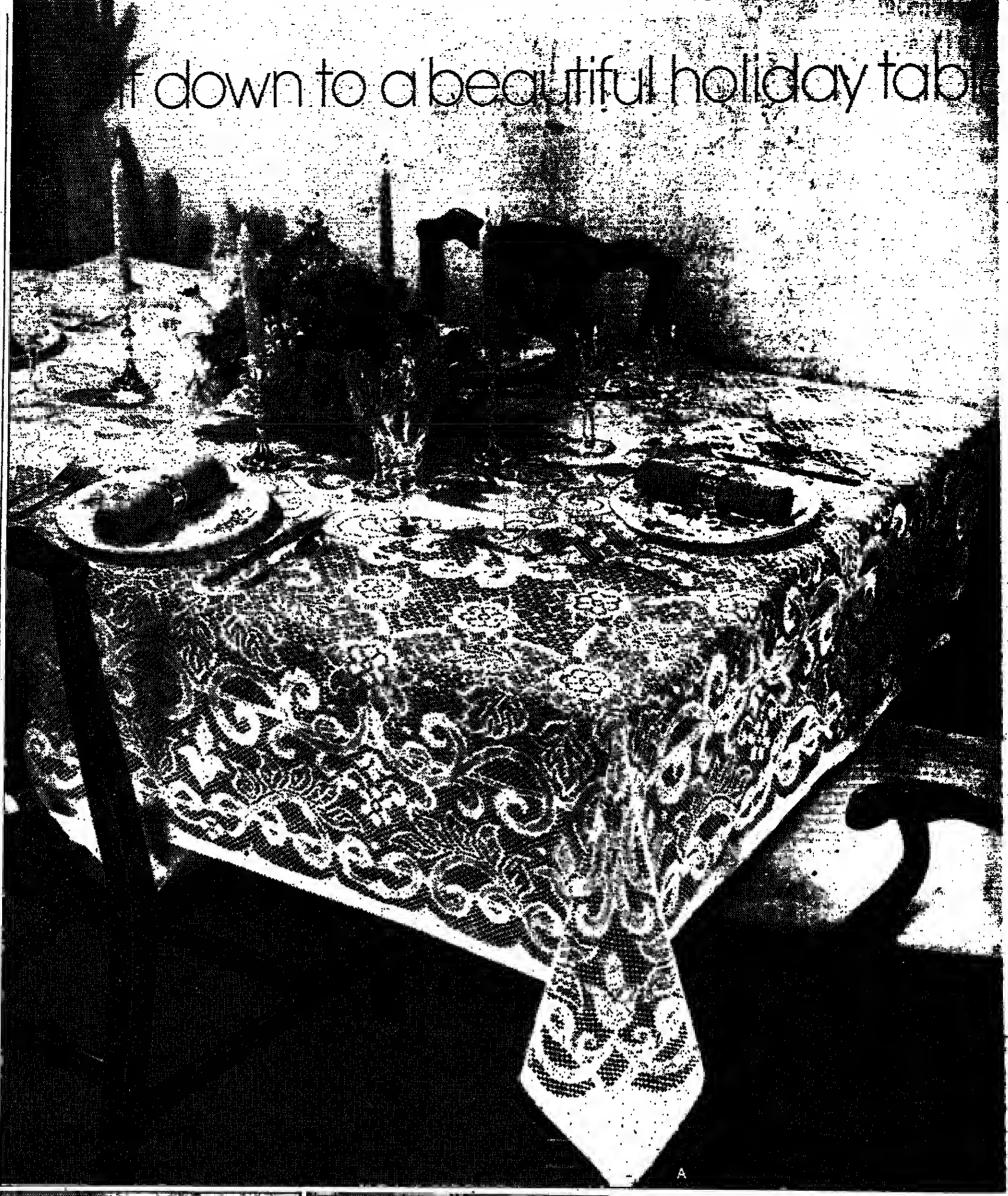

Larry Campbell, the deputy who first searched the Pack apartment, said that among the items he found there was a photograph of the teacher taken in front of a North Tallahassee house he had rented the previous summer. The house was adjacent to the Carswell residence.

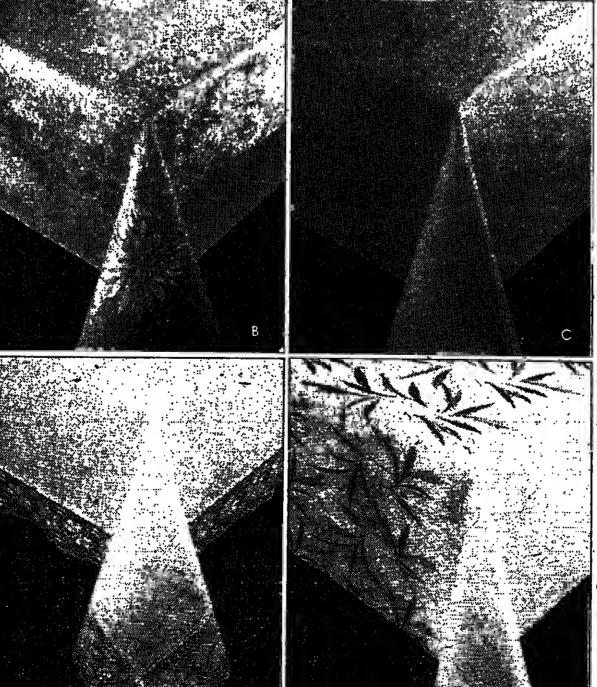

Also in the apartment, Mr. Campbell said were "letters and things of that nature" that made it apparent to him that Mr. Pack had been a homosexual. Mr. Campbell later testified to that fact.

Within a week of the murder, he said officials in the Sheriff's Department dis-covered that a watch, apparently stolen from Mr. Pack's body by the person who killed him, had been obtained for the teacher by Scott Carswell, one of the judge's sons, who had been a student at the high school where Mr. Pack taught.

Mr. Carswell's attorney, who asked not to be identified, said he did not wish to comment on whether the former judge had ever known Mr. Pack, or any other aspect of the story.

When he first talked to The Times, Mr. Campbell said that he recalled having told Robert Clark, then head of the F.B.I.'s Tallahassee office, about the tenuous connections between Mr. Pack and the Carswell family, as well as a "rumor around town" that Mr. Carswell had been involved in a homosexual incident some years earlier.

tax burden must be borne by the longtime resideots of the town. The supervisor of Hardenhurg, Lester Bourke, a reflective, pipe-smoking man, joined Mr. Crary at a table in the diner. He talked about the town's financial problems and the ordination movement, which he had encouraged, to fight the present property tax laws.

Like many other communibes in the Catskill area, Mr. Bourke said, more and more of the land in Hardenhurgh is being bought hy religious and educational organizations and thereby removed from

All are tax exempt, and the burden of supporting the schools as well as the meager town and county services, falls upon the residents, who earn an average income, Mr. Bourke said, of $6,000 to $7,000 a year. Most are subsistence farmers, loggers, or have jobs outside of town. School Costs Are High

The total assessed value of property in Hardenburgh is $21 million, and $5 million of that is tax-exempt. But almost all of the tax-exempt land is in the southern half of the town, Mr. Bourke said. Children in that section attend schools in Livingston Manor. Last year, only 25 Hardenhurgh children used that school, but taxes paid to the Livingston Manor district in 1975 grew to $134.250. That amount equals $5.370 for each student.

I respect everybody's religion, but if that's what they want, that's what they helieve, let them pay

Before resorting to ordination, the residents had tried other methods, Mr. Sourke said. A petition to a mend the tax law was sent to Governor Carey's office in April but Mr. Burke sai, "it probably went into the circular file somewhere."

THE BLIND TAUGHT ART OF SELF-DEFENSE

Policeman Who Taught Thousands Emphasizes Preventive Tactics and Turning Handicap to Use

Dark city streets and empty subway cars may be a frightening prospect for the average New Yorker, but for the blind the possibility of unexpected attack looms even larger.

Yesterday at the Ne wYork Association for the Blind, Police Officer Liddon Griffith, who has taught self-defense tactics to thousands of elderly people in the last two years, conducted a seminar for the blind in yhich he emphasized "preventive self-defense" and "turning the handicap of being blind into a plus."

Officer Griffith picked up his expertise from talking to muggers on the street and in jail, including ooe who said be had committed 200 muggings, and from questioning crime victims in hospitals. He has five documented cases in which elderly people have saved their lives through means learned in his class.

Yesterday's course, attended by 30 blind persons and a handful of seeing-eye dogs, was inspired by Officer Griffith's grandfather, who was 83 and partly blind when he was mugged four years ago, and who then asked the police officer why be had never taught him self-defense.

'Use Element of Surprise'

"It's in your favor to say, Mr. Mugger, I'm hlind and can't identify you," said Officer Griffith, "which increases the chance he won't barm you." He also advised the blind to use their highly developed sense of touch to break out of wrist grips or other holds an attacker might

A mugger often relies on "putting the fear of God into you," Officer Griffith warned, and may use obscenities and ethnic slurs to get a victim off his guard. "But use the element of surprise," the police officer said. "Just as you don't know how the mugger will react, he doesn't know how you will defend yourself."

Pete Shivers, a 47-year-old former mugger who worked with Officer Griffith during the seminar, said that muggers lonked for people with money, and that such people usually showed they have money.

"You notice that people who have a lot of money on them like to touch or pat it as they walk along," be said. "And they're constantly looking around. Women tend to clutch their handbzgs a little tighter if they're carrying money."

2 Vulnerable Areas

In defense against attacks by a man, Officer Griffith said, a mugger's two most vulnerabl areas are the eyes and the groin. "Some of you who are blind may be squeamish about attacking someone in the eyes," he said. "But this is a matter of life and death."

Officer Griffith advised giving in to a mugger armed with a knife.

"if some guy has a knife at your throat, don't scream," he said. "You might panic him. And if he says to take off your pants, guess what? You take them off fast, very fast."

Ooe woman attending the course, who had been raped two times, said that unless an attacker had a lethal weapon, the victim should not give in. She added:

"The best way to confront a rapist is not to be afraid, to stand up to him. I avoided getting raped a third time that way."

The woman, who is partly blind, said she takes the same precautions sighted people might, such as not going out after dark and staying away from dangerous neighborhoods.

Albert Jorwa, who is legally blind, defended himself five years ago against three muggers in Paterson, N. J., by using techniques be had learned in a karate class. Not able to see his attackers, Mr. Jorwa received a knife wound before escaping. "I took karate to protect myself because I can't depend on the police to guard me, the way things are now," be

Although Officer Griffith demonstrated self-defense methods, his ultimate rule for fighting crime had little to do with tactics or criminal psychology.

"My solution to combating crime," be said, "is to look out for one another."

National Forests Clear-Cutting Approved by House, 305 to 24

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (UPI) — The House has approved a bill to allow some "clear-cutting" of timber in national forests

The bill would set guidelines for commercial cutting and replanting of young trees or seeds in the 187-million acre national forest system.

After passing the bill, 305 to 24, the House sent it to conference to be reconciled with Senate-passed legislation.

The bill would allow "clear-cutting," which is a method of stripping all timber in an area of the forest Environment.

Regents' Chancellor Says Suburban Education Falls Prey to 'Outside Forces'

Special to The New York Times

GARDEN CITY, L.L., Sept. 18—Theodore M. Black, the Chancellor of the Board of Regents of the State of New York, told a group of educators today that suburban education was at the mercy of "unpredictable and uncontrollable outside forces and external decisions."

"Who could have told us two years ago that by 1976 major decisions effecting public schools and colleges of New York would be made not by educators, legislators or city administrators, but by a small group of cold-eyed financial experts?" Dr. Rlack asked.

Picturing New York City and the state as in the "economics of decline," Mr. Black castigated "the profligate past of the City of New York," which he said drove the world's greatest metropolis to the brink of bankruptcy. He noted that the domino effect reached up to the state itself, adding millions of dollars in higher rates to already heavily tax-burdened New Yorkers.

Politicians Are Denounced

As the keynote speaker at the day-long conference sponsored by Adelphi University's Institute for Suburban Studies. Dr. Black denounced the politicians who, he said, 10 years ago fought for the honor of having done the most for the school system. Today, the Chancellor said, they are all vying to determine who can denounce most fiercely the same schools as "ungovernable, wasteful education mills producing illiterate amoral generations."

Acknowledging both the changed economic circumstances of the 70's and the culpability of education, Dr. Black said that a combination of the economic squeeze and the growing dissatisfaction by the public with an educational product many taxpayers felt to be inferior helped hasten record budget defeats in 1976.

"The school system is accountable," he said, adding "the American people are not accustomed to buying things they don't get."

Characterizing New Yorkers and "especially Long Islanders" as people wanting the best and most of everything in the way of public services, Dr. Black urged his audience to face the fact that this desire had aided in pushing all taxes to record levels.

"Our state and our region have the dubious honor of leading everyone in terms of state-local tax levies," he noted.

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M., Sept. 18—The United States Attorney's office filed a brief in Federal District Court here this week stating that the Mescalern Apache Tribe has the right to sell alcoholic beverages at the new 140-unit resort and recreation center in the southern New Mexico Mountains without having to acquire a

Mr. Jaramillo denied the tribe's application to transfer a tribally owned liquor license from the Apache Summit restaurant to the Inn of the Mountain Gods, both on the Mescalero Apache Reservation. # SHIFT OF SPACE CENTER SCORED IN NASA STUDY

HOUSTON, Sept. 18 (AP)—A study presented to a Congressional subcommittee says that relocation of crew training and mission control functions from the Johnson Space Center in Texas to Cape Canaveral in Florida could cost as much as $842 million.

Representative Don Fuqua, a Florida Democrat who is a member of the House Committee on Space, Science and Technology's subcommittee on manned space flights, requested last June that the National Aeronautics and Space Administration conduct the study.

The agency's report said that "no management, technical or budgetary advantages" would be realized in such moves. It said the moves could cause a two-year delay in the space shuttle program.

"The relocation would seriously affect a smoothly functioning, highly efficient organization at the Lyndon B. Johnson Space Center and would cause either an unacceptable schedule gap in the space shuttle program or require duplicate facilities and personnel to eliminate the gap," the report said.

The study estimated that relocation

The study estimated that relocation of crew training and the control center would cost $722.2 million in 1980 or $842.8 million in 1983.

It said that moving the crew training only would cost $412.5 million in 1980 and $487.1 million in 1983, Relocating only the control center would cost $573.7 in 1980 and $688.7 in 1983, it said.

The report added that these funds would not be recoverable.

Every third Thursday, the Rev. C Brownlow Hastings and six other South ern Baptist ministers drive a few miles from downtown Atlanta to a secluded Trappist monastery. There, with three Roman Catholic monks, they speed the day reading the New Testament in Greek For three years, since the first such session, the monthly routine has been what Dr. Hastings, a church official, calls "one of my most satisfying experiences." It also represents the kind of easy communication between members of the two powerful religious groups that was virtually unknowo a decade ago. History of Antipathy

A heavy overlay of distrust and antipathy has, io fact, darkened relations between them for most of the nation's bistory. Significantly, the legacy of this feuding has been injected into the current Presidential campaign, particularly in terms of the impact of Jimmy Carter's Southern Baptist identity among Roman Catholics. Recent polls have found con-cern by Catholic voters about the religioo of Mr. Carter, the Democratic

Moch of the consequent discussion has centered on the images each religious group has held of the other. Despite efforts to erase the past, the negative

Baptists and Catholics, usually isolated from one another, have viewed each other across a solid barrier of disagreement, confusion and animosity.

To a Catholic, the Baptist was often portrayed as a fanatical follower of a superficial, revivalistic faith who has strayed from the historic church. Moreover, the stereotype was of a straight-laced moralizer for whom the Bible was almost an object of worship.

Another Stereotype

Many Baptists, on the other hand, were reared to regard Catholics as puppets of the Pope for whom personal faith in Jesus Christ counted less than reliance on church formulas for salvation. Furthermore, Catholic belief in the intercessory role of the Virgin Mary and the saints often looked like idolatry to

Meanwhile, each church proudly beld itself up as the true way. Generally, neither Baptist act Catholic could imagine

Though these impressions remain, especially in Baptist rural areas and Catholic urban areas, the ecumenical age, among other things, is bringing about a transformation of attitudes.

Baptists and Catholics are now going on spiritual retreats together, working on joint projects in such areas as evangelism, examining differences oo issues like abortion and the meaning of cooversion, and, perhaps most importantly, just getting to know one another.

Brothers and Sisters'

A CLASSIC FOR COMFORT

"We are movingly encountering each other as brothers and sisters in Christ," says Bishop Bernard F. Law of the Springfield-Cape Girardeau, Mo., diocese, who was a priest for many years in Mississippi. "We simply were not able Some Distrust Remains to do that previously."

According to Bishop Law, who has attended several regional conferences sponsored by the two churches in recent years, certain stereotypes begin to crumble as lay people and clergymen exorcise the demons of the past.

Snuthern Baptists often say they come away surprised by the Catholic commitment to Bible reading, prayer and per-sonal faith in Jesus Christ, hallmarks of Baptist traditioo.

Catholics report being amazed to find Baptists who do' not believe that being "saved" implies spiritual development

"Catholics are learning that the term born again' doesn't have to be an expression of arrogance," a Catholic observer says. "It doesn't necessarily mean the person thinks everything is just fine and that he thinks he's got a place staked out in beaven."

Factors in Change

Several factors have made these first steps possible. The Second Varican Counemphasis on interchurch relations and its declaration on religious liberty was a major development. Another has back an amendment that would prohibit been the gradual openness of Southern abortion, mirroring Jimmy Carter's own stated position. cburches.

"Ecumenism itself is still a dirty word in some places in the church," says Dr. Claude Broach, director of the Catholic-Baptist Ecumenical Institute in Winston Salem, N.C., "primarily because it im-plied a move to homogenize all Christions into one.

But leaders of the Southern Baplist Convention have been able to convince many of their co-religionists that conversations could be held with other courches without risking theological compromise.

"We have beco able to develop unity," says Dr. Hastings, who has become the Southern Baptist observer at most large atholic gatherings, incloding the Synod of Bishops in Rome, without having to resolve all the doctrinal differences that have come down over the years."

Wide Differences

In practice, the churches are poles apart. For example, Catholicism works within a highly complex hierarchy, while among Baptists each church is autono-mous. Baptists treat baptism as an initiation for those old enough to "believe," while Catholics baptize new born infants.

The greatest differences arise over their respective coocepts on the meaning of ern communities now include Catholic selvation. This issue, perhaps more than priests. another other, has led to the deepest levels of suspicion.

'Iuner Circle' of Agreement

"If clergy get together it means a lot," says Bishop James D. Niedergese of the Nashville diocese where Catholics num-

Many Explore Ideas and wation as an initial conversion or "born again" experience in which the person feels a commitment to Christ. "In our evangelical tradition," Dr. Broach explains. "it simply signifies your personal decision to be a Christian."

While some say the moment was a dramatic, even supernatural, experience, most, including Jimmy. Carter, describe it as an outwardly unspectacular but inwardly peaceful sense of resolve. At that time, according to Baptist thinking, God confers forgiveness and grace.

Stress on Sacraments

Catholics, by comparison, hold that the sacrameots are the vehicles of grace and that the baptized infant has already received the fruits of salvation that are strengthened over the years through continued participation in the sacraments. Do Catholics have something akin to conversion experiences? Participants in the Catholic-Baptist dialogues conclude "saved" implies spiritual development the Catholic Baptist managues conclude ends there but rather, as one priest put that many do, though not in "converit," that there is need for continual forgiveness and growth," a sound Catholic concept.

At a recent dialogue in California, for instance, a history outlined his confirmation and decision to become a priest io a way that reminded Baptists of their own moments of decision. The two traditions disagree sharply on a number of issues, among them abortion and aid to private schools. As perhaps the nation's staunchest defender of church-state separation, Southern Baptists vigorously oppose Government sup-port of private schools. On abortion though Southern Baptists are generally opposed as individuals to the practice hey have as a convention refused to

The Rev. Will Steinbacher, a Jesuit priest who works with the Glenmary Missioners, a mission agency to the rural South, says that "while Catholics frequently don't talk about their experiences, they've often had them."

Father Steinbacher, in an attempt to create better interfaith understanding, became the official Glenmary ambassador to the Southern Baptist Convention and spent three years traveling throughout five Southern states meeting with church groups, attending worship and listening

He left this summer, replaced at his Newnan, Ga., residence by another priest with tha same mission. He says that be came to respect Southern Baptist integrity and adds that he was received with "warmth and acceptance." Father Steinbacher's initiative is one of many efforts being made to open channels of commu-

of the Manzano Mountains to the east. According to local realtors, unde-veloced land in the vicinity sells for no more than $40 an acre. But a suit filed in Angust by the New Mexico Attorney General recuses Horizon Cornoration of selling single-family-home sites in the subdivision for an everage of $6,000 an acra ard commercial lots for an average of $24,000 an acre.

The suit argues that most of the property is unimoroved grazing land worth less than $200 eo acre by any standard. It also says that most of it has no reads or utility lices. There is also a cuestion of whether water would be available to serve some homes. Thus the suit contends, the hungrs have heen cheated into paylog inflated prices.

The New Mexico suit, the first ever filled by the state against a land sales company, uses a new tactic aimed et curbing what Attorney General Toney Anaya believes is widespread land swindles. It charges that not only is Herizon violating consumer protection laws but that it is also violating state securities that it is also violating state securities laws.

· In Arizona, a similar suit, based only oo consumer protection laws, was filed against Horizon last June by Attorney General Bruce Babbitt. Meanwhile, the Federal Trade Commission has also

JERSEY 'TEA PARTY' PLANNED FOR BYRNE

Politicians and Protesters Gather in Trenton for March on Princeton to Complain About Tax Law

TRENTON, Sept. 18—More than 5,000 people from throughout New Jersey gathered here to stage a protest calling for the recently enacted State Income Tax Law.

State Income Tax Law.

Following the four-hour rally, protesters began marching to Princeton, the site of Governor Bynne's official residence, where they planned to drop off several thousand tea bags in an attempt to liken their complaints about taxation here to the Boston Tea Party in 1775.

The Bicentennial motif was contanued during the afternoon here as Arthur J. Caceglir of Wood-Ridge wso identified himself as a member of the Ad Hoc Committee to Repeal the New Jersey In-

"We press for real tax relief and reasonable economies so that we may be pree of the oppressions visited upon us by runaway officialdom."

Tigher Fiscal Control Urged

In successive speeches, half a dozen conservative state legislators suggested tighter fiscal controls over the entire State Government and closer supervision of the public schools, which receive funds from the disputed income tax.

The schools were closed on July 1 under orders from the State Supreme Court, which had ruled that the old method of school-financing was unconstitutional because it relied too heavily on property taxes that discriminated against poorer districts.

The high court said that his method of raising money had violate the constitutional mandate of a "thorough and efficient education for all students."

Within a week, the State Legislature had passed the income tax law by a minimum vote over the protests of many of the lawmakers who spoke here today.

Senator Anthony Imperiale of Newark, an independent declared: "There is no more government of, for or by the people. It's all for the politicians themselves," he and cheers.

Assemblyman John Dorsey, Republican of Morris County, said that he would introduce a bill to repeal the tax, in an attempt to "give the people the power they deserve." One of two Constitutional amendments that Mr. Dorsey plans to introduce would provide for the recall of public officials by citizens dissatisfied by their performance in office.

Truancy Cases in Busing Protest

Expected to Drop in Louisville

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 18 (UPI)—The number of truancy cases against Louisville area parents who withhold their children from school to protest court-orderd busing will fall far short of last year's total, an official said yesterday.

But nearly 300 busing-related truancy cases from last year have not yet been heard by the courts and that number is absenteeism this year, according to David Espin, an associate superintendent of the Jefferson County school system.

Jefferson County school system.

Enrollment in the Louisville-Jefferson County school system has reached more than 99 percent of the 117,000 students officially projected. Mr. Espin said, however, that some busing opponents were continuing their classroom boycott activities. More than 15,000 students are being bused this year for desegregation proposes.

From her seat on the reviewing stand at 69th Street, she waved to the thousands of marchers, many of whom not only waved back but paused to record her presence with their cameras. And a few marchers even walked up to the stand to seek Miss Ford's autograph, causing momentary stirs among the Secret Service men.

It was her first campaign visit to the city and for nearly an hour before the parade started at 12 noon, Miss Ford moved about on the side streets off Fifth Avenue and mixed with the marchers as they assembled for the

"The President,"Mr. Duval said, "had only one very strong feeling—that the debates be serious and focus on the substantiva positions of the candidates. The format we have agreed on does that."

Jody Powell, press secretary for Mr.

Carter, said: "It was everyooe's feeling that by introducing an audience you in-

Presidential candidates. Deterred by Coogress

The networks had originally wanted to organize and sponsor the debates them-selves, as they had done in the Nixon-Kennedy debates in 1960, but were de-terred when Congress refused to repeal Section 315 of the Federal Communica-tions Act. Under that section, the networks contend they would have had to provide equal time to all other announced Presideotial candidates, however small their party. The League of Women Voters volunteered to sponsor and organize the de-bates as news events, which escape the requirements of section 315—an offer accepted by the two candidates.

In explaining the demands being made by the networks, one highly placed campalan official, who declined to be identified, said, "The idea of having a debate they do not run and control and direct drives them up the wall."

Another concern of the networks, this official acknowledged, is that if they restrict their television coverage, they may be confronted by legal suits contending that the debate was not a booa-fide news event and that equal time should be provided to other Presidential caodidates.

Some time later the barteoder, fascinated, walked around and took a stool oext to bis new customer. "You know," the bartender said, "we don't have many bears in bere." The bear replied: "I doo't suppose you do at $4.95 a bottle."

Was that a comment on inflation, on consumer fraud, or on the bearish polls on the Ford-Dole ticket? "Now there's a moral to that story," Mr. Dole told a St. Louis fund-raising dinoer the other night, "and we're working on it, and if you bave any suggestions, send them to Jimmy Carter's headquarters in Peanutville, America."

What the Dole Campaign Is Like

What the Dole Campaign Is Like

The "Bob Dole Campaign Express" is more than a little like the bear story—giddy, repetitive, relaxed about absurdity, high-spirited but quite uncertain whither it is heading, in November or even a day or two ahead of time.

Senator Dole's tour often seems to have been planoed, if at all, by a prankster— "visual" events like the Senator's factory "visual" events like the Senator's factory visit with black machinists io Birmingham, Ala., last night, and his march me the American Legion parade in Trentoo late this afternoon, tend to get scheduled at the wrong time of make televisionn news, A high-domed press bus got stuck finder a low bridge in Boston Thursday night. Gremlins put typographical errors in his speech text, as this morning, when Mr. Dole stumbled over a lime denouncing Democrats for throwing taxpayers' money into "the gaping maw of oew social and make-war programs." He meant to say, "make-work."

But Bob Dole is a campaigner who revels in jokes, including unplanned ooes and jokes oo himself. Before the Chamber of Commerce in Lexingtoo, Ky, last week and jokes oo himself. Before the Chamber of Commerce in Lexingtoo, Ky., last week he observed, "The only union that ever supported me was the Womeo's Christian Temperance Union—and tbey're baving second thoughts."

That may be a stock line for business groups. But the typical Dole cracks at Mr. Carter, the Democrats' Presidential candidate, and bis running mate. Senator Walter F. Mondale ("Mondale, Tuesdale and all those folks"), seem to rattle forth spootaneously. He will try any line once: "Now we've had the New Deal and the Fair Deal and the Fast Deal, aod we're about to have the Or-Deal if Carter's elected," he said in Boston.

Putting Down Democrats:

Putting Down Democrats.

And, Mr. Dole continued, when he stepped into the Senate chamber last week, "Senator McGovern was making a speech. He said, "Gentlemen, let me tax your memories" and Ted Kennedy"—the Massachusetts Democrat who bad led the liberal forces on the tax bill "forces or the said." liberal forces on the tax bill—"jumped up and said, "Why baveo't we thought of that before?"

Mr. Dole's audieoces likeit best when the lines tumble pell-mell after each other as if they were out of control-as in Bir-

At the Kansas City coovention, be went on he and his wife were staying in a room next to John B. Connally's suite. He underlined the different accommodations for Mr. Coonally in a series of laughs. When he had heard the corridor commotion on the morning of the Vicecommotion oo the morning of the Vice-Presideotial selection, he said, "I said to Elizabeth: Put your ear to the door and find out what they're saying. "Would you buy a used peanut from Jimmy Carter?"

'Pick-Up' Campaign Sqoad

Senator Dole's brief meeting with President Ford at the White House this morning seems to have coofirmed a feel-ing among the pick-upcampaign squad around the Vice Presidential candidate that his travels oeed a sharper focus. James Baker, President Ford's campaign manager, referred to Senator Dole's schedule last week as one of the "rough spots" he wants to eliminate.

Arriving at Newark Airport this after-noon, Mr. Dole told reporters who had traveled 15,000 miles with him last week. traveled 15,000 miles with him last week, twice from coast to coast, that his emphasis henceforth would be oo rural America, small towns and particularly the South.

"Carter's support in the South is eroding, it's very soft," Senator Dole said, ideclining to elaborate on poll figures Mr. Ford shared with him this morning.

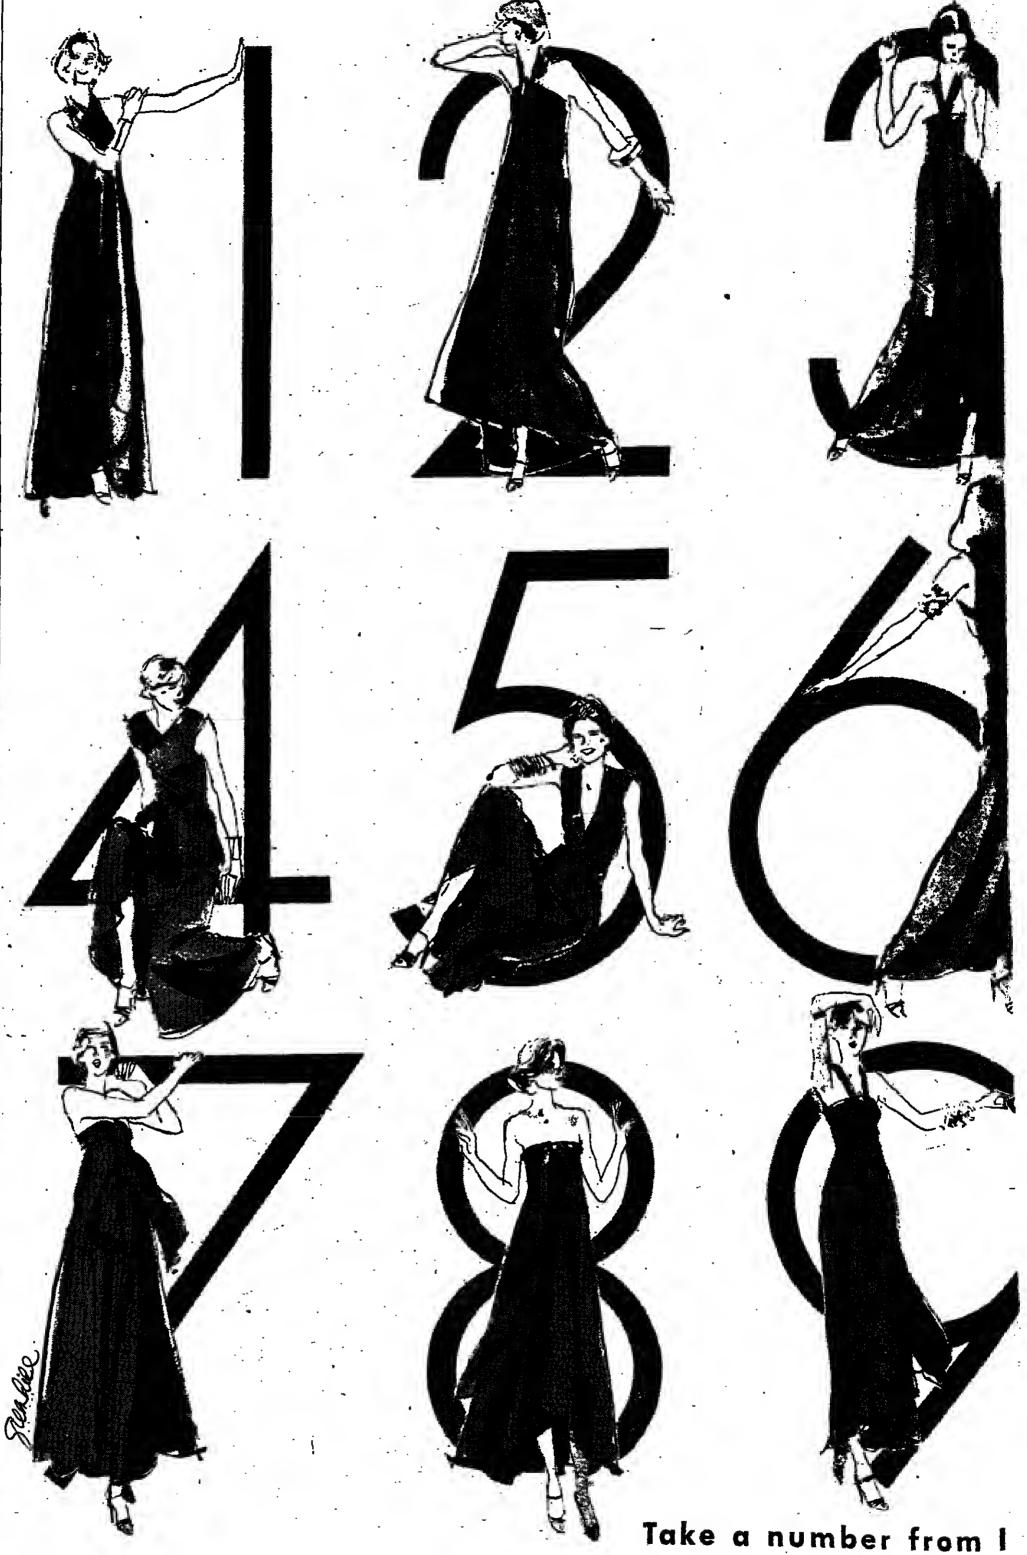

In the South too Mr. Dole's main

In the South, too, Mr. Dole's maio weapon is ridicule—an ancient political device that Representative Morris K. Udall of Arizona and Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California both used effec-tively against Mr. Carter io Democratic primaries lastspring.

Dole's Joke About Carter

In Birmingham last night Mr. Dole said he had telephoned Mr. Carter recently n Plains, Ga., and found that the Demo-rat had three phooe numbers—"like everything else," Mr. Dole said. "He's got hree positions on every issue." President ord and Mr. Carter will havethree desates, Mr. Dole keeps saying, so that Mr. Carter can give three answers to each

South Florida Is Stirred by Study Indicating That Boom Has Ended

By B. DRUMMOND AYRES Jr.

FORT MYERS, Fla., Sept. 18-When Prof. Howard T. Odum came to town one da capital, bave long worried that not night this week and procounced that the enough was being done to control the boom in south Florida just might be over, he was immediately assailed as a dreamy academic, if not the rankest heretic in

But there this professor was, a softspoken environmental scientist from the University of Florida, daring to suggest to the Plaoning Commission of the fastest-growing town in the country that the energy crisis had left south Florida "at or near" its growth potential and that "this is the optimistic view. He offered many charts and complicated calculations relating energy units to the cost of living and moving about, but no magic elixir to cure the energy shortage.

What made Mr. Odum's theory particularly hard for growth advocates to swallow was the koowledge that it was the result of a five year, $3.5 million study sponsored, not by the professor, but by the United States Government and the State of Florida, It carried a certain ca-

Mr. Odum was not deterred. He said that acceptance of his theory of a dying boom would make it possible to plan ahead, "so you won't build a lot of condominiums that will never fill up."

There are already thousands of unsold coodominiums in Fort Myers and eisewhere in south Florida. Developers say they are the result of overbuilding, but Mr. Odum suggested that the energy shortage might have shut off the flow

The Government's Role

The Federal Government's role in the study is somewhat unusual, since there is no Congressional mandate for Federal involvement in local and state land use

"We put up money for this one," Mr. Sudia said. "because the arc of growth in southern Florida curves around Federal holdings in the Everglades and the Cypress Forest. We're worried about what effect growth is having on thiogs like water flow and atmosphere."

Mr. Odum said that a slowdown or halt in growth in southern Florida would give the region a chance to repair some of the damage done earlier by dredging and propole.

Creation of Jobs Is Held by Study To Be Way of Reducing Welfare

A new federally financed study of how it seems that comprehensive efforts to families go off welfare has called for straulate employment would have making job creation a top national prigreater impact on welfare case-closings ority, along with encouraging two-parent families and seeking to discourage family breakup.

To promote two-parent families, the

The new study dealt with families that study suggested equalizing welfare beneuit welfare because their need for relief help had been reduced—a group that it said made up only 28 percent of 100,-000 New York City case-closings in the year ended in March 1975.

Other case-closings were attributed mainly to the recipients' failure to comply with rules or to administrative errors, leading shortly to reopenings — the so-called "churning" phenomenon.

Jobs a Major Factor

Of the "true" closings resulting from reduced need, the study sampling indicated that 48 percent had gotten new or better-paying jobs, and 17 percent had a father or mother return to the family or a new marriage occur.

The new report, "Former Welfare Families: Independence and Recurring Dependency" was the work of a staff under Anne N. Shkuda, senior research associate of the Center for New York City Affairs of the New School for Social Research. It was contracted for by the Social Security Administration.

Interviews were carried out with a random sample of families with children whose New York City welfare cases were closed because of improved situations in the six months ended in January 1975. There were 354 families reached within one month of case-closing, 300 of them located again six months later.

The families had advantages—cent had both a mother and father present, compared with only 14 percent of all welfare families. They had a small-er proportion of younger children. The parents had more education. Few Need Public Help

They usually found jobs on their own-51 percent through advertisements or friends, 28 percent going back to pre-vious employers. Only 17 percent reported jobs found through the WINwork Incentive—or other training programs. Only three persons found jobs through the State Employment Service.

Those returning to former jobs, the study said, had used welfare as a temporary aid. For others, the study said, lead used welfare as a temporary aid. ilies than when two parents are present. "To the extent that this equalization would encourage families to stay together," the study said, "benefit pey-ments would be reduced by the addition of the incomes of working families.

The presence of both parents would also increase the likelihood of the families-becoming independent of welfare in the future."

Fifteen percent of closings based on reduced needs were attributed to receipt of other benefits, such as unemployment insurance or Social Security.

The study said welfare officials should consider the possibility of such benefits when applicants show up, and help them for eligibles instead of simply looking to uncover unreported income. Four percent of closing resulted from getting support payments from absent parents, aimost all after court orders.

Within six months of leaving the welfare rolls, 17 percent of the sampled families came back. One-third of these reopenings resulted from loss of jobs or reav. 17 pay, 17 percent because a spouse had left.

A first broad-scale attempt to determine how many persons may be harmed by their participation in federally funded medical research has indicated that the risk of injury is similar to that faced in ordinary living.

The study, done by a study group of the United States Department of Health.

The study, done by a study group of the United States Department of Heaith, Education and Welfare, comes at a time of mounting concern about protection of research subjects and how to inform them properly of the risks they may tace.

The study findings are preliminary and, since they are based on interviews with research should be compensated for searchers, they may not represent the ectual incidence of injury as would be detected through a case-by-case analysis.

Public Reassurance Seen

However, the findings, as described in the Sept. 16 issue of The New England Journal of Medicine, suggest that the rate of injury may not be as great as some persons have feared.

maintenance expenses, in an effort to protect instructional programs.

The authorities are trying to avoid dismissing the administrators and teachers. They are using attrition letting positions go unfilled as personnel die or retire-rather than remove people from existing Attrition is an especially painful policy because, with enrollments falling, the public schools had boped to take advantage of the decline to lower class sizes by maintaining instructional strength at previous levels, an objective that now seems out of reach.

New York Feared as Example

Concern is growing that New York City's plight may be a harbinger for other large school systems. New York has enlarged its classes, diminated 5,000 in-structional positions, shortened its school day, reduced the number of elective subjects, slashed pupil tampportation sub-sidies and pared services in such key areas as guidance, libraries and remedia-

The sample truth is that time has run out and the New Orleans public schools are trapped in a fiscal vise that will continue closing until additional revenues can be found," Superintendent Gene

"We had to make some serious cuts,"
Dr. Geisert said of the system's $95.1 million budget. "We had to cut off some arms, legs and beads. We decided to keep athletics another year, but I don't know how much longer we can go until we have a system of body reading, writing and arithmetic."

Chicago's situation is perhaps illustra Chicago's stituation is permaps interfactive of what is happening to those school systems that feel most threatened by insolvency. The local tax base, which furnishes 41.8 percent of the school district's $1 billion budget, has been steadily croded as real estate has slipped in assessed walter.

A revised state funding formula that was supposed to deliver $428 million in aid to the Chicago public schools this year has been scaled down to the point that the school system is expected to receive only $363 million.

John Chosen Over Raise

"Without this settlement we would the union president, "Even a 3-percent raise would have cost the system $15 million and it would have meant firing 1,000 teachers to find the money."

Chicago's tactic of trying to reduce staffs through attrition instead of outright dismissals is being used in many of the major school districts.

Philadelphia has eliminated 159 teaching positions without a dismissel, trans-ferring some teachers and leaving vacancies unfilled Cleveland lost six ele-mentary school principals to retirement, but replaced only one, assigning some principals to cover more than one school. The efforts to realize savings through deferred of plant maintenance have be-come a standard feature of most budgets. Los Angeles, which has a backlog of $80 million in repains, has had to certical some classes because of leaky roofs.

New Orleans Uses Plywood New Orleans has issued sheets of plywood to a school with 330 broken win-dows because the system could not afford immediately to replace the glass pane with tough vendel-resistant plastic. Philadelphia's new budget has meant the dismissal of 211 costodial helpers, 25 custodians, 28 custodial assistants and 29 maintenance workers, representing an ex-pected savings of $2.9 million in salaries. Pittsburgh plans to peint school build-ings every 10 or 11 years instead of every seven years.

Connecticut Is Blocking U.S. Antipollution Funds To New York and Jersey

HARTFORD, Sept. 18 (UPI)—Connecticut is holding up almost $21.4 billion in Federal funds for New York and New Jersey because of differences in air pol-lutioo standards, the state's Environ-mental Commissioner, Joseph N. Gill, said yesterday.

Mr. Gill said the five members of the state delegation to the Tristate Regional Planning Commission had withheld approval Thursday of a resolution acknowledging consistency between air quality plans for the three states.

The commission is composed of five members from each of the three states and approval of a majority of each's state delegation is needed to approve the resolution. The Federal aid is dependent on approval of the resolution.

The matter was put off until Nov. 18, when the panel meets again. Mr. Gill said he was hopeful that a compromise could

Mr. Gill said Connecticut was scheduled to get only 0.5 percent of the $21.4 billion that would go to the three states over five years. He said Connecticut's decision to bold up the money for its neighbors was "the only practical way of getting everyone's attention."

He said Connecticut's chiesting was

He said Connecticut's objection was that less stringent air pollution standards for New York and New Jersey caused smog in Connecticut because the pollutants were carried there by the wind. The difference in standards, he said, is because Connecticut belongs to the United States Environmental Protection Agency's region one, while New York and New Jersey belong to region two. The problem is the health of the people of the state of Connecticut," Mr. Gill said. This seemed a good time to bring it to the attention of the pepole who created the problem.

"They [New York and New Jersey] are generating the pollution and we are the recipients of it. We ought to play by the same rules." Mr. Gill said the $21.4 billion was to be used for transportation projects that would belp alleviate air pollution. He said Lyno Alan Brooks, another of Connecti-cut's representatives on the commission, had proposed an alternate plan that would commit the panel to alleviate the in-He said representatives of the two

The smoker's guide low tar cigarettes.

With all the controversy about smoking going on, lots of smokers are deciding to switch to low 'tar' and nicotine cigarettes.

But which low 'tar' and nicotine cigarette should a switcher switch to?

Well, for every smoker who has ever considered switching, here's an easy guide to low 'tar' and nicotine cigarettes.

First, there are super low, low 'tar' and nicotine cigarettes. They're fine if low numbers are all you want. Because their scientific filters work so well, they filter out most of the taste.

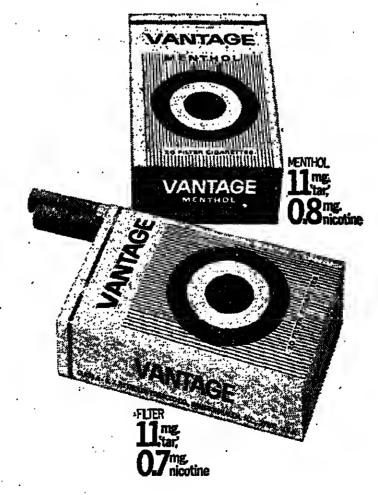

Next. The low 'tar' and nicotine cigarettes that claim to deliver flavor. If you've ever tasted one of them, you've probably been disappointed. Empty of promises and empty of taste. That's what these cigarettes are often made of.

Finally, there's Vantage. The low 'tar' and nicotine cigarette that's different from all the others.

Vantage isn't a watered down version of a cigarette. Because from the very beginning, Vantage was specially designed to deliver flavor like a full flavor cigarette. Without anywhere near the 'tar' and nicotine.

So if you'd like to switch to a low 'tar' and nicotine cigarette, try Vantage first. You might save yourself a lot of searching. Because Vantage will probably turn out to be the only low 'tar' and nicotine cigarette you'll enjoy smoking.

Synthesizer Duo and Computer

The downtown new-music season got under way officially Friday night with two interesting concerts of electronic music—Ear Food, a live synthesizer duo at Environ, 476 Broadway, and Laurie Spiegel's computer music as the beginning of a new late-night weekend series of contemporary concerts at the American Theater Laboratory, 219 West 19th Street.

Synthesizers, computers and their assorted electronic brethren still elicit brooding suspicion among many music-lovers. The whole notion of a music made by machine is humanistically anathema to some, and others find synthesized music somehow "unnatur-al"—which, of course, it is.

But Friday's two concerts, for all their dissimilarities, reaffirmed a couple of things about this new and still very young medium. One is that the colors and sound-shapes at composers' command through electronic means are capable of the most varied sensuous delights. The other is that composers, electronic and otherwise, are continuing in their steady rejection of the highly chromatic pointilism so popular just a few years ago.

The more impressive of the two concerts was Miss Spiegel's. Trained in the most approved manner and the recipient of many grants and commissions, Miss Spiegel at the age of 30 is fast emerging as one of our most promising electronic composers.

Her work on Friday ranged from an illusion of continuous acceleration to a xylophonish rhythmic study to an young medium. One is that the colors extremely pretty and pleasing contra-puntal effort, full of quick-moving independent parts, to two longer, more meditative pieces. These last were both less immediately clear from a formal standpoint and more mystically involv-ing as sheer sound, yet neither lapsed into sheer wallowing in effects.

Ear Food consists of Dana McCurdy, who is 24, and Brian Flahtve, 27. Mr. McCurdy has done extensive work in commercial music, programming synthesizer tracks for the likes of Roberta Flack and Dizzy Gillespie, and teaches synthesizer at the New School; he and Mr. Flahive, who is also a graphic artist, have collaborated as Ear Food for nearly two years.

Mir. Fisalive, who is also a graphic artist, have collaborated as Ear Food for nearly two years.

What the two do is manipulate their two ARP synthesizers, their Electrocomp synthesizer, a tape recorder and ancillary odd percussive effects in the service of mostly precomposed, partly improvised music.

The pieces on Friday—this observer had to miss the last two in order to get to Miss Spiegel's concert—betrayed a quite remarkable range of idiom and mood, from popsy sound-effect collages to modal mood-pieces to cutsey-poo gimmicks to jazzish interactions.

It was all pretty facile; only one piece, "5 A.M.," struck this listener as coherent and evocative enough to be really attractive. But binding it all together was a wonderful grabbag of exotic sounds, a real facility in bending the synthesizers to lively effects and a demonstrable love of these frisky new sound-making toys.

Stylistics Confronted by Mishaps

It takes professionalism to overcome obstacles of the sort that confronted Stylistics at their Felt Forum show Friday. Russell Thompkins, whose plangent high tenor is the group's lead voice, was limping about the stage, his right foot in a cast. Aarion Love, the right foot in a cast. Agrion Love, the Stylistic's second lead, walked to the lip of the stage to sing "The Way We Were" and, as the houselights went down, he walked too far and fell into the audience:

Worst of all, the public-address sys-tem's monitor speakers, which allow performers to hear themselves onstage, were malfunctioning, and some of the were manufactioning, and some of the group's harmonies were out of tune as a result. But the five Stylistics carried on, and the audience's recognition of their hits—a melodic bunch of sweet soul ballads—ended up being as warm as any reaction this reviewer has seen

The Stylistics represent the sleeker, easy listening side of black pop, but Double Exposure, which preceded them at the Felt Forum show, is a grittier, more gospelish group. The problematic monitors and a malfunctioning vocal microphone gave them trouble, but Double Exposure was impressive none-theless. The four-man group seems to theless. The four-man group seems to have combined the slick trappings of the Philadelphia sound with a preach-ing intensity reminiscent of Sam and

The Salsoul Orchestra, a large group of Philadelphia session musicians led by a veteran arranger named Vince Montana, opened the Stylistics concert with a series of lushly orchestrated but with a series of mumbers.

The Paris Opera's unusual not to say peculiar, production of "Faust" was given two performances at the was given two performances at the Metropolitan Opera House. And in the second, on Friday night, there was a new tenor in the title role. He was Alain Vanzo, a native of Monte Carlo and French trained, who had not previously sung on New York's opera's stage.

He was of definite value to the per-formance. He had an ingratiating voice, which he handled, for the most part, with ease. He sang with style, par-ticularly in his famous garden-scene aria, "Salut! Demeure chaste et pure." He managed some fine high pianissimos that were just this side of sounding falsetto. If the direction did not require any acting of him, Mr. Vanzo at least cut a decent stage figure. Relatively short, he has a large, well-shaped head that oddly resembled the familiar por-

New Jersey Chamber Symphony Has Ambitious New York Debut

The Chamber Symphony of New Jersey, which made its New York debut at Camegie Recital Hall last Sunday night, has much in its favor. The play-ing is vigorous and rhythmically alive, the conducting is spirited and sensitive to the basic of 18th-century style, and the programming is more imaginative than it would have to be.

The group was founded by G. L. Natr, its conductor, in 1973, and has its head-quarters in Metuchen. Like many lessthan-top-line ensembles of this sort, the biggest weakness is in the strings, and string sound dominates most of this repertory, particularly that from the 18th century. At decent cohesion, pitch

But if they aren't adequately prepared, the sound fragments abrasiyely, and such was the case with the opening Locatelli "Introduttions teatrale" in D (Op. 4, No. 5) and Mozart Divertimento in F (K. 138) on Sunday.

in F (K. 138) on Sunday.

Matters improved with Bach's wedding Cantata, "Weichet nur, betrühte Schatten" (BMV 202). The strings sounded more secure, and the ensemble's excellent wind players had a chance at less—Joshua Siegel, ohoe, and Randolph Haviland, bassoon. In addition, the sources soloist Pessy. addition, the soprano soloist, Peggy Pruett, offered a small-scaled but otherwise nicely bright and mellow bit of singing, complete with an easy trill.

Repertory for chamber orchestras tends to divide between the 18th and 20th centuries, and such was the case on Supday. Debussy's "Danses sacrée et profane" went by smoothly, with Marjoria Mollenauer as the harp solo-ist, and Norman Dello Joio's Lyric Fanist, and Norman Dello Joio's Lyric Pan-tasies for viola and string orchestra sounded at least inoffensive—Alica Lindsay was the rather shaky viola soloist here. The concert ended with Hindemith's Five Pieces for String Orchestra (Op. 44, No. 4), attractive music attractively dispatched.

David Barron in Americana

JOHN ROCKWELL

Though Charles Ives is not primarily known as a composer for voice, his best songs may be as impressive as anything he undertook, combining the brawny poetry of his symphonies and sonatas with a real flair for structure sonates with a real flair for structure and concision. Certainly the Ives songs that David Barron sang last Tuesday night at Carnegie Recital Hall—a set of five ranging from the stunning repose of "The Housatonic at Stockhridge" to the boiserous patriotism of "Old Home Day"—were the high point of his "Evening of American Songs." Otherwise, Mr. Barron's program concentrated on the likes of John C.

Baker, Arthur Farwell, Henry Russell and John Whitaker. Dating from the 19th and early 20th centuries, their music for the most part moved unassuming, genteel, sentimental and utterly delightful.

Of particular interest were three songs by John Philip Sousa. "Blue Ridge! I'm Coming Back to You" was rousing in the familiar Sousa style But "In Flanders Fields the Poppies Grow" was a grim tribute to fallen soldiers:
And "Smick Smack Smuck" celebrated the unlikely intensity of one young man's first kiss—"We kept it up more than a week/Until her teeth came through her cheek? (the lyrics are Sousa's own).

Mr. Barron, who is currently prepar-ing a volume of American vocal music, possesses a light bass-baritone with a shallow bottom. On this occasion, his New York recital debut, his inventive. programming, lively presence and splendid enunciation were more to the point, Both Mr. Barron and Neely Bruce, his accompanist, were at their best in the Ives songs, where it mattered

With one exception, the Sonata No.

1 by the contemporary Weish composer William Mathias; Mr. Goldenzweig's program consisted of sturdy staples from the keyboard repertory: a sonata by Haydn, Mozart's Fantasy in C manor and a group of short pieces by Chopin and Brahms.

Perhans Mr. Goldenzweig's sympathies lie with the modern school, for the Mathias Sonata, in its United States premiere, proved to be the most satisfying performance of the evening. Couched in a conservative idiom but harmonically lean and full of attractive rhythmic and melodic ideas, the piece received a sharply profiled and manually rhythmic and melodic ideas, the piece received a sharply profiled and warmly committed interpretation.

In the more familiar works, Mr. Goldenzweig left a more unsettled impression almost as if he were wholly detached from the music. Technical matters were generally under good control, and the planist elucidated textures crisply and cleanly. The Mozart and Haydn pieces, however, tended to proceed in fits and starts, while the Chopin-Brahms portion of the program sounded too remote and monochromatic.

Dance: The Mobius Company

By DON McDONAGH

The sense of puzzlement aroused by Mobius a company of skilled dancers and limited creativity was epitomized in a dance called "Really, Really (Truly) Really" on Friday evening at 579 Broadmysteriously self-involved and ultimate ly vacuous. The trio of women, Sarah Rebecca Elgart, Anne Marie Maragni, and Bryn Alison McCornack followed a program of movement that brought them together, burst them asunder and ended with Miss McCornack dropping white paper discs in her wake as she exited. The interaction of the three was as close to random activity as any devotee of chance could hope for and the effect was about as chaotic. The dancers flashed carnestly and eagerly through the limited phrases of the piece as if hoping that it might all add up to some thing, but it never did. The energy was expended for its own sake and remained as mute testimony to effort desperately seeking vindication. In "Ice," the choreographer Michael In "Ice," the choreographer Michael J. Sullivan designed a duet for himself and Miss Elgart to the raw sounds of wolf howlings. At times their scrabbling with paw-like hands and feet suggested four-legged predators, but their uitimate squabbling was more like a domestic quarrel than life in the wild.

"Flags," which opened the program, paired Miss Elgart and Miss Maragui in a little world of tentative approaches

a little world of tentative approaches and inevitable isolation that just seemed to happen, rather than evolve. But then the whole program suffered from a sur-feit of beautifully articulated happen-

Margie Gillis Dances

Soft country and western music, deaccompanied Margie Gillia's dances Thursday evening at Appelby Studio. It was a solo program of raw emotional expression without much intervening

Miss Gillis is a strong dancer whose security and clearly launched gestures underline a happy physicality. Her arms, in particular, have a purposeful bent that expresses gentleness and firmness without bombast. She turned easily and melted from one position to another with utter confidence. For the most part though, as the choreographer of the program, she gave herself, as the performer, little artistic support.

The six solos had a stylistic similarity that made them blur tito virtually one long dance. "Woman, La Lune" did have a clock and in "Words" she re-cited and "The Dream" was form by shricks, but the quality of the movement was so much the same that it hardly reflected the various titles of

"Sombrero Sunday" and "Love Song," which opened and closed the program, respectively, both showed a surging lyricism that could be Miss Gillis's strongest quality if it were disciplined and expressed with a larger gestural

Miron Yampolsky, Cellist, in Debut

Miron Yampolsky, a Russian cellist who studied with Mstisiav Rostropovich for 16 years, then emigrated to Israel in 1972 and to this country in 1974, where he is now assistent principal cellist of the Baitimore Symphony, made his New York recital debut at Alice Tully Hall on Thurs-day night. With Jeffrey Chappell at the piano, he played a Frescobaldi Toccata. Beethoven's Sonata No. 2 in G minor, Schumann's Pieces in Folk Style, Rachmaninoff's Vocalise, Shostakovich's Sonata (Op. 40) and a Stravinsky arrangement of a ballet pas de deux.

When his playing was at its best, Mr. Yampolsky produced shapely phrases in which relatively small-scaled tone was inflected to produce affecting shadings of

Unfortunately, the cellist's performances were uneven, and passage of pleas: if not completely finished technician and ing quality were too often followed by those in which squeaky tones, pitch values or other flaws intruded. This ratherestatic cello-playing contrasted sharnly with Mr. Charmeline. erratic cello-playing contrasted sharply Bach, Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Chopin with Mr. Chappell's piano-playing, which and Lizzt, Miss. Otherwise, there were limitations to Mr. Draper's art. Fast figurations were not always evenly articulated and there were other minor technical problems. Stylistically, the guitasist stretched out 16th- and 17th-century pieces so that it was hard to perceive their shape, while Bach's music was slightly romanti-

Today, the liberation extends to the shape of clothes. Almost every designer includes a loose dress on the order of a chemise in his collection, along with a loose shirt-like top and a pair of pants. By the same token, almost everyone shows a number of full skirts in the crisp silk usually called sibilant or in

So you pick the shape of your clothes, along with their color, according to your mood-you cinch your waist or ignore it-and everybody hopes that the days of uniform dressing are past,

Bill Blass remains an exponent of the tailored look, showing his share of pinstriped suits or blazers with pants, but at the same time he's still got a mean eye for a ruffle.

Even his tailored clothes have a touch of softness about them—his pin-striped suits are in red and white, instead of suits are in red and white, instead of navy and white. The cashmere camisole top of a striped evening dress is sybaritic and also in red, but that doesn't mean red is the only color. There are plenty of others. Purple and yellow and pink and navy. The navy shows up mainly in taffeta, with spiraling tiers or pleated underskirt and it's Mr. Blass's low-keyed version of the romantic look.

Herbert Kasper who was elected to

Herbert Kasper, who was elected to fashion's Hall of Fame this year, re-mains an eclectic, mixing elaborately bouffant dresses with sleekly clinging ones for Joan Leslie. Besides his peasant dresses—petticoats prop their bouf-fant skirts—he shows slim white ones. Besides stiff taffeta, he shows supple

Sophisticated sheaths alternate with

It's a difficult time for women who insist on being told what to wear.

Richard Assatly, in his collection for Gino-Snow, a company that is not yet a year old, made one of the most perceptive fashion discoveries. It happens to be the age-old truth that when colorful clothes are rampant, a woman can attract a lot of attention in black and

So while he advoitly touches a lot of other bases, his most devastating clothes happen to be white silk shirts mated with black taffeta skirts. It's a combination to keep in mind.

Albert Capraro's major revelation is the power of all white dresses, some long, some short, all wickedly demure with eyelet edgings, lace insertions,

But remember, it's oot the time for one-oote collections. So Mr. Capraro, who is one of Betty Ford's favorite designers, and whose company is called Jerry Guttenberg, shows a generous assortment of aproped peasant dresses, tiered taffeta styles and paisley chiffons in very muted colors. He mixes hisin very muted colors. He mixes his prints, shows quilted jackets, and has ouite a few bright red dresses. But don't get misled. It's oot a one-color

At Last, the Complete 'Porgy and Bess'

hortly after he had started composing "Porgy and Bess," George Gershwin was buttonholed by Leonard Liebling in a crowded theater lobby. What, demanded the editor of the Musical Courier, was the character of this new project that was keeping Gershwin so busy. "American, of course, in the modern idiom," replied Gershwin, "but just the same a cross between Meistersinger and Madame Birtterfly." And then with a mischievous smile, he added, "Are those models good enough?"

To many of Gershwin's contemporaries, the idea of depicting Catfish Row and its black inhabitants in grand opera terms was absurd-certainly too difficult for a 1930's audience to accept. And so Gershwin's vision was whittled and rearranged until it coincided with the prevailing concept of Broadway musical theater. But Gershwin refused to surrender the hope that someday audiences would be able to hear "Porgy and Bess" as he originally conceived it. The Sherwin M. Goldman Houston Grand Opera production that opens Tuesday at the Uris Theater marks the first theatrical presentation of the score virtually as Gershwin wrote it.

Like Arthur Sullivan and Victor Herbert, the more successful Gershwin became as a composer for the popular theater the more he longed to write a serious opera. Early in his career, "Blue Monday," a 20-minute verismo "blues opera, set in a Harlem nightclub, was part of George White's "Scandals of 1922"—for one performance that is. Although it had attracted favorable critical opinion, White thought the piece was too gloomy for a musical revue and cut it from the show. Later, Paul Whiteman programmed the opera as part of a 1925 Carnegie Hall concert. Retitled "135th Street," it generated a lukewarm response. Gershwin's grasp of form was still immature in 1922, and "135th Street" is really a series of songs, loosely strung together by recitatives that only hint at the tightly integrated sung dialogues of

When Gershwin read DuBose Heyward's novel "Porgy" in a single, sleepless night in 1926, the triangle of the crippled. hlack beggar Porgy, the powerful stevedore Crown, and the beautiful Bess struck him as perfect material for an opera. Often humorous, frequently stark, always shrouded in the atmosphere of the surreptitious, Brassai's pictures of whores and hoodlums and homosexual hangouts, of bars and cabarets and opium dens and street life, are never merety picturesque. Shunning all temptations to romance, they give us an unforgettable account of the mundane routine in lives given over to low-life vocations and pastimes. In some of these pictures, indeed, especially the brothel scenes, the only discernible emotion is that of boredom, and beauty is remarkable for its scarcity. Yet this is clearly world that Brassaï adored, and it is in this curious mixture of love and benign detachment that these pictures have their Napoleon, I've met my Waterloo," he says, kneeling in front of her.

"You know, a lot of people didn't want me to play this role," said Williams, who was wearing a tan shirt, blue jeans and a small gold chain around his neck. "They thought because of the black Clark Gable' thing. I wasn't serious enough, that I was a personality. But I think I'm one of the few actors who can play the role. It requires an actor who is into all those esoteric, spiritual, cosmic places. Dr. King understood the connection between the political, the moral and the spiritual, and I think I do, too.

"Back in 1964, I got involved with a Buddhist woman who helped me understand those things, through Eastern philosophy and Western philosophy, everything from Buddhism to Jung. She was my first teacher. She was an exaddict and an exprostitute who had gone through so much, and she pulled herself out of it, and helped me, too. I had a sense of desperation during the 60's because I couldn't get any parts; I was either too dark or too light. Once I even put my head under a sunlamp to try to make myself darker, and all I got was a bad sunburn. There were lots of problems during those years for people who have a lot of mongrel; like Williams, who two years ago turned down a screen version of Dr. King's life written by Abby Mann, said higher forces had "directed" him to do the stage version. "I went to an Armenian lady in California who reads tarot cards and coffee grounds," he said. "She said, "I keep seeing this thing you're going to do, a religious leader leading thousands of people." She told me the same thing when I went back six months later. Then my agent, Shelly. Burger, came to me with the play and said I had to do it, and he's really all big bucks and very cynical. That, to me, was some sort of sign.

There were other signs, too. My picture appeared on Ebony magazine; next to a headline about a Dr. King story that said, 'Monument to a Martyr.' And Dr. King was 39 years old when he was killed and I bad my 39th birthday on the day the play opened in Washington. So I've always regarded this whole experience as something I had to do, a calking. I really believe I'm surrounded by fantastic spirits and positive voices that guide and direct me."

Does be have any objections that a white man, Robert Greenwald, conceived and directed "I Have a Dream," which is described as "a musical evening based on the words and writings of the late civil rights leader"?

"Oh, no," Williams quickly replied,
"he directed 'Me and Bessie' on Broadway, and he knows what he's doing.
He's a very good director, a very fine director, and being young, he doesn't have a lot of cliches. And a lot of black people don't understand black people, you know."

When asked to describe his creative process, Williams, who studied the Method system, replied: "Whatever I feel at the moment is the way I go. I came out of the Stanislavsky school, but I don't use it today. I go in any direction I want to go. I take whatever's happening to me in any given day, and I take that moment. If I feel sad one day, I take that feeling into what I'm doing, and that takes me into another feeling. The whole thing is to be in tune, and that's what I'm doing."

Sometimes in preparing for a part, Williams said he thinks of James Cagney and/or Bette Davis for inspiration. "Both of them were able to create characters that weren't always likable." he said, "but somehow the audience was always able to relate to those characters, and find redeeming qualities in them, and feel them and like them and go with them."

Billy Dee Williams and his twin sister, Loretta, were born in Harlem on April 6, 1937, to a mother who had dreams of becoming an opera singer and a father who supported the family working as a cook and janitor. The twins grew up on 110th Street between Fifth and Lenox Avenues, in a neighborhood be describes as "a red light

Williams was able to survive the ghetto, he said, "because my family always had an interest in education and culture, and my sister and I were always painting since we were very young. I played ball and hung out with the guys on the street, hut unlike my friends, I was always stepping in and stepping out."

Williams, who first appeared on Broadway at the age of 7 in Kurt Weill's "The Firebrand of Florence," later attended the High School of Music and Art and then the National Academy of Fine Arts and Design. He toyed with the idea of becoming a portrait painter, but gave it up at the age of 24 after he received good notices as the sailor in the Broadway play, "A Taste of Honey."

In his latest film, "The Bingo Long Traveling All-Stars and Motor Kings," a surprise summer hit about the black baseball leagues of the 1930's, Williams plays the prototype of the legendary black pitcher, Satchel Paige. The film is strictly entertainment, but Williams thinks it has some value, too.

"It shows a part of history that many people don't know anything about," he said, "and that's valuable. It also talks about Uncle Tomming, and shows why it was done—all because of survival."

He thinks his upcoming TV movie about Scott Joplin, the black turn-of-the-century composer of ragtime music, will also bave "historical value." "It's all there," he said, "his struggle, and the fact he had to work in a bordello to survive, and how he died of syphilis because there was no cure in those days. As a rule I don't do television anymore, but when I read the script, I thought it was beautiful and I wanted to do it."

Williams said he hoped to do more historical movie roles, notably Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, Alexander Pushkin, the Russian poet who was half black, Hannibal and King Solomon "and other great classical figures who have never been done hy men of my hus"

Although Williams doesn't quite have the lofty lifestyle one might expect from "the black Clark Gable"—he says he is a loner who lives in a "modest" four-hedroom ranch-style home in Hollywood with his third wife, Teruko, and their three children—he does like to be described in that manner.

"I didn't look for it, but I enjoy it," be said, flashing a dazzling movie star smile. "It tells you what's happening to the world, and how a lot of thinking has changed. The fact that I, a black man, can emerge as a matinee idol in films is quite a step. It's nice to know that young black and white kids can relate to me the way I used to relate to Alan Ladd and all those guys."

What starts in the whole world's lap.

I've noticed, two things not immediately related. The first is this. Oo several recent occasions playwrights have specified that their plays must be done in workshop situations even when more completely professional productions were open to them. During my visit to the Performing Garage on Wooster Street, where Steve Gooch's "Female Transport" will be playing its final performances this week, I was informed that Mr. Gooch, having had some success with his piece in a tiny London house, had turned down offers from commercial producers and insisted on an intimate, remote, low-risk mounting. And within the week I came across a casual note in the press indicating that Roger L. Stevens, in Washington, was doing yet another play not in the Kennedy Center, where he'd like to have put it, but in a miniature house especially leased for the occasion, Again the author had insisted.

Well, good enough. A playwright has got to mature at his own idiosyncratic rate, and sometimes it's plain common sense to keep small work in small environments, safely away from demands it doesn't mean to meet yet. No writer has to tangle with a thousand listeners in a thousand seats, or with the economic pressures that start up the minute a stage (all that scenery) or the auditorium (all that overhead) gets larger. Not until he's ready for it, braced, ripened, reasonably confident.

Mr. Gooch, for instance, is undoubtedly wise to continue circling the fringes for a while. His "Female Transport" has to do with six shackled women in the sunless hold of a convict ship carrying them to Australia in 1815. Though it contains effectively managed scenes—a newly shipped sailor lad wanting to ask one of the manacled girls for sex but sorely abashed by the eternal presence of five onlookers it is a virtual catalogue of stock slave-ship images. The bloodied lass who has taken 26 lashes on her back; the storm at sea that sets the lot of them reeling dangerously (the director has kept them all on their feet so that they can reel, proving that there is indeed a storm raging above, though most of them would seem to have intelligence enough to get down on the floor and anchor themselves to the fixed bedposts); the morose member of the group who hangs herself during the night; the impoverished doctor who'd like to insist upon more humane treatment but whn can be bribed to silence. And, at the moment, the play lacks a center of emotional interest, an omission that robs it of its possible suspense. Any other six women would have done as well. In all likelihood, "Female Transport" will retain its workshop standing, while Mr. Gooch goes on to write another and let us hope fresher play.

There is, however, a danger in contenting oneself with what may be called sheltered productions. A writer can freeze himself at the tryout, or small-audience, or not-quitedeveloped level, protecting himself from the slings and arrows of larger confrontations, persuading himself that so long as he is producing material for what finally becomes a coterie audience, he is growing. Undoubtedly he is growing, for a given length of time—an indeterminate length of time, since it is, as I've said, different for each man and woman. The trick is to know when you've hit it, when it's time to get out and go to the mat with more complex materials, the more complex reactions of great hig andiences, the demands of full-scale, no-allowances-made

I'm stressing the point today because we've spent so much time lately asking ourselves whatever happened to the so promising young writers of the 1950's and 60's, only a few of whom have hitched up their shoulders, forcibly added cubits to their stature, and resoundingly delivered what was expected of them. Just a few weeks ago Elenore Lester was raising the issue again in these columns, running through the possible answers—the strongest of which was that Broadway, the "big" theater, remains steadfastly inhos-Continued on Page 20

'Trilogy' Director

"Knights of the White Magnolia" and "The Oldest Living Graduate," Schneider said, are both set in 1962 and explore the decline of traditional Southvestern colture, "Knights" depicts the final get-together of the aged members of a fading patriotic order, "Graduates" dramatizes the clash between a World War I veteran and his cynically calculating son. 'Today we are examining ourselves as never before," Schnelder continued. "People are asking, What happened to America?'-the dream, the spirit. In these plays, Prestoo is letting us experience esthetically what happened, where we made the wroog choices, where our values went wrong.

"These are marvelously truthful and human works. Look at some of the other plays drawing audiences in New York. 'Streamers'-it rocks people, whether you like David Rabe as a playwright or not. The same is true of 'For Colored Girls.' Or 'A Chorus Line'we're not all members of a chorus line, obviously, but something moves us in that show—the ring of truth.

Schneider, a prime exponent of the ayant-garde in the theater of the 60'sincluding ownerous works by Beckett and Pioter—says his commitment to the naturalistic mode of "A Texas Triogy" does not really signal a shift in his directorial taste. "People are always trying to type me," he observed. "But oo playwright I've ever dealt with has ever said anything to me other than 'This is a realistic play —lonesco, Beck-ett, Pinter, Tennessee Williams or Preston Jooes-all are somehow painting life. The strokes may be those of Gauguin or van Gogh or Picasso or Klinethe textures are different-but they're all trying to get to the essence of life. No playwright sets out to be avant-garde or existencialist or absurdist. He writes about his vision of life.

"Which is not to say that the avantgarde is dead-it just keeps changing, keeps moving in cycles. I think 'A Texas Trilogy is avant-garde in that it's restoring to us something we had before, and lost, some fundamental perceptions about ourselves and our myths. In a lecture recently, the psychologist Rollo May said that our myths our spiritual essence are our greatest reality, laying hare the soul of our society. According to May, the myths contained to our art are the only thing that can save our civilization from decline."

"Isn't the success of Jones's trilogy somehow related to the recent surge of interest in the lifestyles and values of the South and West, from country and western music to CeeBee radio to the rise of Jimmy Carter? "It's true that Preston does come from the socalled Suobelt," Schneider mused, "but I don't see this regional shift as terribly cosmic. More to the point is that, in theater, the whole pattern has changed. No serious play has come to Broadway over the past several years without having been tried out elsewhere first, whether in New Haven or Washington, D.C., or at Joe Papp's Public Theater.

"Today, Broadway is just too expensive to fool around with. Where once shows traveled from New York to the regions, now they come from the regions to New York. At this point, I think all theater is regional—New York is just one of the regions. The growth of theater outside of New York is not only inevitable, it is necessary, because it is making theater part of our national consciousness."

A very important part, according to Schneider, who took his Arena stage production of "Our Town" oo a successful tnur of the Soviet Unioo in 1974. "The theater unites people in ooe place on one evening in a way that no other art form-movies or ballet or painting—can do. It brings us to-gether with a sense of what it's like to be here at this particular time. Our major problem with theater is that we're so fragmented—as a country, as a society, as individual members of an audience—that it takes a lot of emotional cement to unite us."

Cement which, Schneider said, a work like Edward Albee's "Virginia Woolf' provided in the 60's. (Schneider won' a Tony for his stagiog of that play in 1962)-"making an entire audience face truths about marriage it had never faced before." The experience, he said, has been provided all too rarely on Broadway of late. "I saw a hit New York show the other night—it doesn't matter which one—and balf the audieoce was asleep. The wives had to wake up the husbands at intermission. This is something you almost always see at 'popular' plays.

"I think Broadway audiences are ready and waiting for plays that will reach them. Out-of-town audiences have felt that they have seen their lives onstage in the trilogy. Isn't that what theater is supposed to do? Prestoo is called a regional playwright by some, but he's regional only in the seose that he has no intention of moving to New York. Most playwrights can be called regional. Tennessee Williams is from St. Louis. Arthur Miller is a regional playwright from Brooklyn, if you like, If there's fundamental truth in Preston's plays about Bradleyville. Texas, then that truth will be perceptible everywhere."

The Demise Of a 'Theater For the People'

he City Center of Music and Drama, as we have known it, has passed away and no one seems It is a sign of our times—of the change in attitude toward the arts as public service—that so little attention has been paid to the transformation of the country's most vital performing arts center into a holder of real estate leases on two theaters.

As a legal entity, the City Center of Music and Drama. Inc., still exists. It is a private nonprofit corporation that has a lease from the city on the City Center 55th Street Theater. It also operates the New York State Theater, which it leases from the city through Lincoln Center. The New York City Ballet and the New York City Opera are still called constituents of the City Center.

Yet, anyone who has observed both what has happened and what has not happened at the City Center since the summer of 1975 can only conclude that it is not the old populist arts sponsor it used to be. It has dropped its functions of producer and impresario. It no longer spreads an umbrella, with subsidy, over a variety of drama, music and theater groups. Its populism appears limited to a relatively low-priced ticket policy but even the once-sacred tenet of a single top price is no longer firm.

In response to this curtailing of activity and the virtual abolition of their own subsidies from the City Center, the Joffrey Ballet and the Alvin Ailey Dance Theater (the 55th Street Theater's resident dance companies) moved this spring to assume control of the 55th Street house. This month, the theater comes under the management of a new nonprofit corporation, the 55th Street Dance Foundation, which, in effect, hands over the booking, operating and financial respoosibility of the theater to four dance companies for one year. In addition to Joffrey and Ailey the sponsoring companies are American Ballet Theater and the Eliot Feld Ballet.

It is too early to speculate on the prospects for success of this unique venture. But it is not too soon to suggest that this same venture is a pragmatic bid for survival by the dance companies at a time when the City Center has ceased to play its traditional role.

"In brighter days, a cultural beehive"

This change in direction bas gone unannounced, but ithas taken place. Until 1974, the governing image of the City Center was that of "a theater for the people." The idea of a popular-priced performing arts center came from Mayor Fiorello La Guardia in 1943. But it was Newbold Morris, then the City Council president, who suggested that this center's site be the former 55th Street Shriners auditorium that the city had already acquired for nonpayment of taxes.

In the decades that followed, Newbold Morris and Morton Baum, long the center's chief executive, were the practical visionaries who never lost sight of the democratic ideal proclaimed for the City Ceoter at its inception.

It is not irrelevant to point out that the first-organiza-

So for those whose insatiable appetite for dance remains unsatisfied, here is a suggestion: visit the wonderful archive of films at the Dance Collection at Lincoln Center's Library and Museum of the Performing Arts (a branch of the New York City Public Library). Here, even during the end-of-summer doldrums, ooe can see Natalia Makarova. Erik Bruhn, Suzanne Farrell and Rudolf Nuruyev-oo film, and free of charge.

The collection's real value, of course, is not as a substitute for live performance, but rather as a means of preserving on film that which can no longer be seen live - those performances which would simply vanish (or at least recede into the dim and unreliable recesses of memory) were it not for the technology of film. Known officially as The Jerome Robbins Film Archive (because Robbins donated a fixed percentage of bis yearly earnings from "Fid-dler on the Roof" for the maintenance of the collection), this cinematic treasure chest cootains at last count-1,433 films (well over one million feet of footage) and 287 videotapes.

For the price of a phone call, one can arrange a private screening on one of the library's two Steenbeck viewing machines (a combination projector and screeo approximately the size of a large portable television). A number of films can only be seen with the permis-sion of the choreographer or donor (since copyright laws do not as yet apply to dance, many choreographers are justifiably fearful of plagfarism).

And a small number of films and tapes -fewer than 7 percent-are closed to the public because of union restrictions. But the great bulk of the collec-tion is available to anyone wishing to One of the nicest things about the

The real gems in the collection are those films which cannot be rented commercially or seen elsewhere. Where else, for example, could one hope to see footage of Leonide Massine's work for the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo? Among the collection's Ballet Russe films are excerpts of Massine, Alexandra Danilova and Frederic Franklin in "Petrouchka," as well as snatches of Massine and Tamara Toumanova in "The Three-Cornered Hat."

Some of the most charming films in the collection acquired their significance retroactively—that is, they rou-tinely recorded the dancing of some talented, unknown youngster who subsequently went on to achieve international prominence. For example, the archive owns a Leningrad Kirov Ballet School film of Nureyev's graduation exercises completed just before he went on to become a featured soloist with the Kirov. Similarly, the Joffrey's Gary Chryst and Christian Holder can be glimpsed in their pre-professional days as fellow students at the High School cf the Performing Arts.

'Watercolorgate' -Whimsy, Fakery And Esthetic Trutk

LONDON

By BERNARD WEINRAUB

t's been a melancholy summer and early autumn in London. The drought has withered the grass on Hampstead Heath, emptied the sprays on Trafal-gar Square and sparked pleas for restrictions on washing dishes and taking baths. There was the worst racial violence in years near Portobello Road, the pound has begun to drop again, the chimes of Big Ben collapsed at 3:45 one afternoon-a case of metal fatigue and the British Government was asked by Pakistan to return one of the most valuable gems in the world, the 109-carat Koh-l-noor diamond, which was set in Queen Victoria's crown, and served, in its own dazzling way, to symbolize British imperialism. ("Greece will be on about the Eigin Marbles again any time," muttered The Financial Times). cial Times).

"Watch It All Come Down" - the title of John Osborne's newest and dreariest drama—seemed the bywords. An American woman saw a mouse camper across the bar of the Ritz Hotel. The man who was proclaimed the Brain of Britain—after respooding, with ease, to an alarming a The fact that I'm unemp symbolizes the national m Thomas Dyer, a teacher a "We don't really know win our brains."

In the midst of this sull pered mood, a lone figure emerged to delight and fas paper readers, stun the a raise intriguing questions rate art from artifact.

The figure is 59-year-ol. restorer and painter, who is that he flooded the British with 2,000 fake paintin which fetched tens of thou lars from reputable gallerie

With disarming frankr. has said that he duped t with 13—and possibly far tions of Samuel Palme whose landscapes are sought-after of the Eg painters. He also imital Goya, Gainsborough, Can Degas and Turner. Continued on Page 12.

What has oot yet emerged—and what fascinates and frightens the British art world-is the potential scale of the art forgery racket, and the possibility that influential dealers and galleries were involved in it. One oewspaper has called it the "Watercolorgate Affair." There are rumors of other painters selling forged works of art.

"The question is, Who were the peo-ple responsible for the forged pedigrees, the false inscription on these paintings'," said Hugh Leggatt, one of London's most respected dealers. "Who verified these paintings? We're only a quarter of a way through this story." Although rumors have surfaced for years that Palmer fakes were being sold-one of Keating's reported forgeries sold at Sotheby's in 1973 for £15,000, a record for Palmer—that scandal erupted when Geraldine Norman, The Times of Loodon's auctionroom correspondent, found Keating in his cottage in Dedham over the summer and began unraveling the story.

Keating finally wrote a letter of confession to The Times: "I flooded the market with the 'work' of Palmer and many others, not for gain (I hope I am oo materialist) but simply as a protest against merchants who make capital out of these I am proud to call my brother artists, both living and

In seeking to expose the phoneyness of the art world, Keating said that on each canvas, under the painting, he wrote the word "fake," or his own name or a "rude remark." Nonetheless, the paintings were auctioned at high prices, and since Keating made little money from then, emerged who did pro-Keating himself spoke dlemen who turned to buy fakes for £20.

sine" is a love story of the kind that not made since the golden age of Hollywood's , and though "Cousin, Cousine" is hardly dy, it shares with those films "My Man pened One Night," "The Awful Truth" and ry" — a frank, direct, lyrically comic, y approach to love. In those Hollywood transpareot, artificial pride was the thing s apart, though there was never any doubt Solve of something that the growth into fully coms into interest, turns into delight and then :knowledged love that is maintained for a ic affair, not because of any particular it because the lovers want to have this families and friends who immediately asbe a steamily sexual one.

"Cousin, Cousine," Marthe (Marie-Chris-Ludovic (Victor Lanoux) are not separated rs. When they first meet at the wedding of Marthe's mother to Ludovic's uncle, Marthe and Ludovic are very much married to other spouses, though oot happily. Marthe's husband is a compulsive philanderer and Ludovic's wife is a pretty, hird-brained neurotic who takes periodic sleep cares. Marthe and Ludovic are drawn together when Marthe's husband zeros in on Ludovic's wife simply because she's there, but with no more interest than he has in the bus driver, the sales clerk, the family councillor and all the other women with whom he's maintaining liaisons more dopey than dangerous. However, the only real barrier to Marthe and Ludovic is the determination that each must discover within in order to take decisive action.

As written by Tacchella, Marthe and Ludovic are immensely winning characters, rigorously honest, kind without being stupid, witty, each completely in charge of himself/ herself and thus in no need to rush into affairs or into sleep cures to cope with or avoid the world outside. They are so practically perfect that they might be impossibly saintlike without the humor, intelligence and revivifying spite that Miss Barrault and Mr. Lanoux bring to their roles. She is a of heing the sort of man who has seen most of life's idiocies. identified them and refused to despair if only because he wants to see what new idiocy will turn up next. Actors and characters are so beautifully matched that it's no-contest with anyone else in the film. There's no doubt about what will happen, only how.

Mr. Tacchella's method is steadfastly sunny. Most of "Cousin, Cousine" takes place in spring and summer in the verdant banlieue of Paris. The autumn days we see are brisk and clean, and when the season turns wintry, it's not just any winter day but Christmas Eve. The affair of Marthe and Ludovic is not isolated but contained within a large, loving, tightly knit family group that is prepared to forgive all trespasses. These are the details by which such romantic comedies are created, but if the film were not so essentially comic, the details would be merely decorative.

When it opened in July, "Cousin, Cousine" received fayorable notices, but so have a cumber of other imported films equally unknown to the general public-which have gone on to die fast deaths at the box offices. It's apparent that andiences are keeping this one alive, a factor that's almost as refreshing as the film itself. It should give backbone to movie distributors and theater owners who, like producers, are inclined to read their balance sheets and think that the only way to stay in business is to show machine-made. schlock. Not so.

Not all the films coming in from abroad these days are great, but people who have given up on the domestic stuff should give consideration not only to "Cousin, Cousine," but to another French import, Bertrand Tavernier's "The Clockmaker" featuring Phillipe Noiret's extraordinary-performance, Peter Watkins'a "Edvard Munch," a fine, very socially conscious hingraphy of an artistic temperament, that of the great Norwegian Expressionist painter, and, from Japan, Masaki Kobayashi's "Kaseki," a dour but monumental film about a man, and a nation, to whom fate hands a queen of spades.

'I Am Not Movie Star! I Am Only Man From Street!'

By ROWLAND BARBER

oday is the 21st day of shooting of "The Turning The company, having completed its location work in New York. bas moved west to take over Stage 15 at the Twentieth Century-Fox studios. The milieu of "The Turning Point" is the ballet, and the screenplay by Arthur Laurents is concerned with the continuity of the art, and the steep, emotional price that dedication to it exacts from its artists. A woman can't be a ballerina and raise a family, too; it's either/or. In the film, Anne Bancroft is the either-the star ballerine; Shirley Maclaine's the orthe Texas housewife. Miss MacLaine's daughter, played by oswcomer Leslie Browne, has reached the moment of that decision—the turning point—that her mother faced 20 years before:

Although Herbert Ross, the film's director, is known for his low-key approach, there is a decided air of tension on the set today. For this is the day that Mikhail Baryshnikov will go before the camera to play his first dramatic sceoe as a screen actor. And to a lot of people, the charismatic Russian dancer is what this movie is truly all

The great media leap-from another arena into the movies has atways been a risky box-office move. Jack Dempsey didn't make it. Neither did Amos and Andy, nor Joe Namath. Geraldine Farrar and Oscar Levant bad slightly happler landings. But Moira Shearer was stopped dead in her tracks after making the grand jets from ballet to silver screen. What, then, is the prognosis for Mikhail Baryshnikov, or Misha, as he is called by his friends

"I think Misha has already made the transition from dancer to actor," said Ross. 'He was very nervous during the first read-through of the script. But he has the intelligence and instincts of a superior artist, and he sensed at once the difference between projecting a role on stage and behaving naturalistically in front of a camera. He did improvisations during rebearsals, and amazed me; his ad libs were right on the point. Misha has something that very few dancers have-wit. And charm, in the movie-star sense.

We were chatting in Ross's little trailer, office inside the sound stage, waiting for the crew to set up the lights for Baryshnikov's scene. Former ballerina Nora Kaye, who is Mrs. Ross in private life, remarked that Baryshnikov might be approaching a turning is out," she said, "he's going to get offers to act I wonder if he will take.

Suddenly Baryshnikov was with us, wearing flared jeans, a black tee shirt and western boots that brought him up to a full five feet, five inches. Offstage, without make-up, he looks much younger than his 28 years until seen close-up, full face. There is an over-ripe look around his blue-gray eyes that hints at unreported night-time pleasures. Waiting to be summoned to the set, Baryshnikov sat with me outside the trailer and talked about film making. "It is still strange, very strange to me," he said. "So much waiting, not moving. Difficult for dancer. I want to be good whatever I do, but I cannot understand specifics of this work, so I cannot tell what is good, what not good. In ballet I can control my art, is different law than be actor in movie. For me especially is language problem also, I have like computer working in my head, to translate English to Russian to English. I must learn what is point of every phrase I speak, oot just

But now he is a movie star, and it is time to face the camera. The sceoe being shot is an eocounter in a rehearsal hall between Baryshnikov (as Yuri, a dancer who is something of a tutuchaser) and Miss Browne (as Emilia, Shirley Maclaine's 17-year-old daughter, a hallerion just rising from the ranks of the corps de ballet). Although it will not last more than a minute-anda-half on the screeo, it embodies the resolution of this story, of backstage conflict. As they rehearse a pas de deux, Yuri urges Emilia to resume their affair, broken off after she had discovered him with another ballering. Emilia bad mistakeo his ardor for true love. and now she is unforgiving. After a bittersweet final kiss, she ohliterates everything from her mind except dancing. It is her point of no return.

Baryshnikov's second line, in the scene, spoken when he comes upon Miss Browne as she dances alone, is: How is it possible to work without a partner?" On the seventh take it came out, "Har is parsible work wissout passner?" After Ross yelled "Cut!" the embarrassed dancer ran to Nora Kaye and said, "I am sorry! My mouse is full of garbage!" Ross bowever, told him not to worry, adding warmly: "Misha, this scene is beginning to work. You are becoming absolutely passionate." Baryshnikov was puzzled. "Passion-

"You know," said Ross, "emotional." Baryshnikov stood there, eyes wide mouth agape, furiously brushing the sides of his hair with his palms -a tic that seems to be triggered whenever his language computer is jammed. Then, silently, he walked away.

I caught up with him and told him what a remarkable job I thought he was doing how he was underplaying perfectly for the camera and seemed to be a completely natural movie actor. He stared at me for a momeot, apparently wondering if I was putting him on. Then, giggliog and almost choking on his words, he said, "No! I am oot movie star! I am not actor! I am only

Ross called for still more takes of the rehearsal-hall scene, shooting it from every conceivable point of view. "Just an inch more to your right, Misha," he would say. "Hold it . . . now walk a little toward Leslie. Put more of your weight on the left foot this time when you kiss. And pause just a bit looger before Leslie's line. Remember, Misha, try to make her smile after you kiss her —and doo't forget to watch that shadow oo Leslie's cheek. Too far, Misha, go back to your left a tiny, tiny hit. There! Hold iti

Leslie Browne, a lovely, fawn-eyed girl, is nine years younger than Baryshnikov and has had to struggle to overcome her awe of him. And, like Baryshnikov, she was nervous about the scene to be shot the next day, an explicit bedroom scene which will be closed to everybody except Ross and the key

Oo Thursday, the day after the bedroom scene, Miss Browne arrived on the set looking bright-eyed and bouncy, with oew color in her cheeks. When she was asked how the scene bad gooe, she replied, "No problem, It went very well for me. But Misha —Misha was trembling all through it."

Wheo Baryshnikov appeared, one of the Ballet Theater dancers asked, "Well, Misha, were you magnificent? How was the great love scene?"

"Such a question," answered Baryshnikov coolly, letting the subject drop.

Just then a publicity man brought io the new issue of s weekly magazine. In its gossip column there was an item on Baryshnikov, reporting that he would be appearing in the movie version of "Hair."

"Why they print such fantastical lie?" he said when he had read the item. "Why?

Then be shrugged and grinned a boy-ish grin, "Ah, well," he said, handing the magazine back to the publicist, "there is old saying io Russian, 'Dog bark, but wind hlow it away.'"

Half an hour later, on the set, he was still laughing about the magazine item and as he laughed, he spoke into an imaginary hand-mike and danced about, tripping over the mike's invisible cord. "Look-it! 'Hair'! I pop star! I rock star!" Even dancing in jest, his control was breath-taking. Uodoubtedly, there will be many movie offers —from "Hair" to there. But the odds are that they will be blown away with the barking, and Baryshnikov will keep on doing what ha does best, perhaps better than anybody else in the world.

Since approximately 40 percent of The Deep's" action literally takes place in the deep, all of the film's actors and technicians have had to learn to ply their crafts at depths that have ranged to 80 feet. The entire unit, consisting of 100 men and 4 women, spent a month off the coast of the British Virgin Islands, where they accom-plished a total of 1,485 dives, gathering almost 1,000 hits of usable film in the

Now the company is spending a second month under the hot Bermude sun performing in a man-made million-dollar "pool" that Columbia Pictures describes as "the largest underwater set ever constructed." This concrete excavation is 120 feet long and 30 feet deep, contains a million gallons of salt waterand has been stocked with a thousand salt-water fish. The interior of a sunken Spanish gaileon as well as "the cave of the giant Moray eel" are two of the five underwater "interiors."

Nolte and Bisset finding treasure in "The Deep"

Waterlogged or oot, "The Deep's" actors and crew have become remarkably adept at roaming through this underwater maze, achieving the most spectacular effects with total ease. Perhaps that's why an air of placidity has settled over the entire set. That placidity, however, has not dampened the ebullience of producer Peter Guber, a sun-tanned man in his mid-thirties who immediately launches into a description of the technique he used in getting his three stars into the water.

"I knew that I had to get one star under the water," be says. "The ego and pride of the other two would not allow them to thick that they couldn't do it, It's been awesome to see these actors who have oever dived before slip into their wet suits, air tanks, snorkels and flippers and go down - and stay down - there. Of course, there have been mishaps. The first week Nick Nolte was learning to dive, he ran out of air and had to make a rapid 80-foot ascent to the surface, and that's not easy. If you become frightened and do the wrong thing, you can easily suffer an embolism—an air bubble in your heart or brain-and Embolism seems to be the furthest thing from Jacqueline Bisset's mind as she attends a briefing session on the deck over the set. The session is being conducted by director Peter Yates, a jolly, balding man best known for his direction of "Bullitt." Yates addresses himself not only to his heautiful star, but also to the crew that surrounds her-three cameramen a director of photography, a lighting designer, an assistant director, a props man, and a dive master and his four-man dive support team whose function is to supervise the diving and hreathing equip-

"Look for Nick," contioues Yates, making more frantic swimming motions, "It's so dark! So dirty! You can't see Nick! Look for him! Look! Look!"

As soon as Miss Bisset understands what is expected of her, she and the other actors doo their gear and descend into the water. Chubby cameramen dart about below the surface, gracefully executing frog kicks as they push lightweight cameras before them. Suddenly, the "script woman" rises to the surface and points to a waterproof slate on which she has written a message with a waterproof grease pencil: "Jackie's weight belt is showing."

Dear George, John, Paul and Ringo,

You have made the world a happier place to live in. Your music has found its way into the hearts of millions of people in every corner of the world. For almost ten years now, your dedicated old friends, and countless new friends-have hoped, have waited, and patiently watched for a signal from you-that you might play from one stage, just one more time, individually, or together.

In a world that seems so hopelessly divided, engaged in civil war, scarred by earthquakes, and too often living in fear of tomorrow's encore of tragic headlines -- more than ever, we need a symbol of hope for the future. Simply by showing the world that people can get it together.

Let the world smile for one day. Let us change the headlines from gloom and hopelessness to music and life and a worldwide message of peace. You four are among the very few who are in a position to make the dream of a better world come together in the hearts of millions in just one day.

The burden of the world is not on your shoulders—we all share that responsibility. This proposal is made for your consideration-only if you can find the time—and the strength to put it together.

We out there would welcome your return.

Your appearance on one stage; whether you play individually or collectively, or both, would be seen by an audience of millions Moderately priced tickets would be sold in advance, at every theatre, auditorium, concert hall, and arena where closed circuit television cables could be placed.

On the day of the event, ticket holders would be required to bring, in addition to their ticket of admission a can of food, or an article of new or useful clothing, to be deposited in boxes at each facility. These gifts could feed and clothe an impoverished nation for years.

A 'volunteer' foundation or worldwide organization such as CARE or UNICEF could lend their resources to pick up these life-giving gifts, the day after your concert, and distribute them five days later to an area, changed over-night into a nation of hope and life.

THE POSSIBLE

REVENUES:

$100 million from the sale of an album recorded 'live' of this event... $40 million from the sale of seats at a moderate ticket price to every closed-circuit venue around the world ... $15 million for TV rights around the world; to be shown the next day, or the next week, free, to all who couldn't buy tickets, the night of the concert...$60 million from a movie of the event itself, and an equal amount of footage devoted to each of you-to talk, play, or share in your own way, your lives as individuals-with your friends who want to see you ... $15 million from the sale of program books and souvenirs.

New Year's Day or Easter 1977.

released the first three-disk installment of Michael Ponti's survey. Volume Three of Ruth Laredo's single, disk series appeared recently, containing her most effective performances to date. This set does not appear destined to become a classic survey on the order of Gieseking's complete Debussy or Landowska's Bach, but Miss Laredo has an intuitive understanding of Rachmaninoff's style and her competent technique enables her to give many individually persuasive readings and, in Vol-ume Three, several memorable ones.

Toree years ago, Vladimir Ashkenazy recorded the Etudes-tableaux, Op. 39, the first recording to combine percep-tive readings of the individual etudes and a performance of the whole set as a dramatic unity. This sort of unity is missing in the new recordings of the preludes by Miss Laredo and Agustin Anievas (whose set also includes the first recording of three juvenile nocturnes). Both artists play well and make many telling musical points, hut they fall to emphasize the cyclic qualities of the sets, particularly in the 13 Preludes, Op. 32.

This set is in many ways like a song cycle without words, built on a mere handful of thematic and rhythmic elements, which only emerge when the entire set is persuasively performed. Problems of unresolved, shifting tonalry posed by one prelude (No. 6 in F minor, for instance) are solved in the next (in F major). A monumental laby-rinth (E minor) is "set up" by its predecessor, a beguilingly simple statement (E major). And if there was any doubt that the preludes form an entity, Rachmaninoff dispels it in the last (D flat major), which contains thematic Ashkenazy's perform-ance of the D flat major alone is like the convening of a master-class, and he gives the earlier set (Op. 23) its most effective recording to date.

The young French pianist Jean-Philippe Collard seems to be aiming at a complete Rachmaninoff cycle for Connoisseur Society. His first two releases contain the studes-tableaux, the "Corelli" Variations and what is said to be the first recording of the "original 1913 version" of the Second Plano Sonata. In terms of size and technical demands, this Sonata is the solo counterpart of the Third Concerto. No one has ever recorded the original version before (Rachmaninoff extensively revised it in 1931, and Horowitz made a further composer-authorized abridgement). Nor, in fact, has Collard, who departs from both the original and revision, apparently inventing some passagework of his own.

Until his New York debut last season. the Soviet pinnist Lazar Berman was known principally by reputation, a reputation established at least in part by a remarkable recording of Rachmaninoff's Six Moments Musicaux, Op. 16. He has now re-recorded the set for Deutsche Grammophon, in a performance that is technically even superior to the earlier set, but which conveys far less of the music's direct, fragile

A couple of seasons ago, it was rumored that Horowitz was preparing Rachmaninoff's rarely heard "Chopin" Variations, Op. 22, but until that recording materializes Paulina Drake's performance of the work on Orion is at least honest and persuasive.

The Fauvel manuscript, on which The Waverly Consort's Director, Michael Jaffee, has based this exciting new stage production, is an unparalleled treasury comprising more than 150 pieces of music by various composers—including lais, conducti, Gregorian chants and motets—which marvelously sum up the monophonic and polyphonic styles of the 13th and 14th Centuries; along with an epic story, contained in some 6000 verses, recounting the adventures of Fauvel, an ass whose name is an acronym derived from 6
French words for different vices and evils and who is used as an allegorical figure representing greed and villainy rampant in the church and monarchy of the times.

It was wrong in his eyes for a lady to be exposed to the jokes about the sexual drives of men and the weaknesses of women. It may have been even wronger for a woman to be exposed to the thinly veiled attacks on church and royalty. On the surface, "La Belle Hélène" is a merry romo through classical antiquity. Ludovic Halevy (the nephew of the famous composer of "La Juive") and Henri Meilhac wrote the libretto. It was their first collaboration (to be followed by "Bluebeard," "La Vie Parisienne," "La Grande-Duchesse de Gérolstein" and "La Périchole," among others). Their libretto is built around the seduction and abduction of Helen by Paris. This Helen is a vair, bored woman with a stupid husband. But, at that, Menelaus is no stupider than the four kings of Greece who figure in the libretto. The brightest person is Calchas, the high-priest. He is an operator, a cynical ecclesiast, a thriving gambler, who knows how to

So he followed that recipe in 1864 with telle Helène," and had another hit. Every-

Before Paris finally goes off with Helen, getting her by a ruse that satirizes the oracle business, there are all kinds of nonsensical goings on. The various gods are presented in anything but a flattering light. And, as Offenbach's sudiences recognized, the action was applicable to the Third Empire. Helène is a giddy, pleasure-seeking woman, no better than she should be. Orestes, the son of Agamemnon, is a symbol of the nepotism and venality that plagued France. He spends a great deal of money for girls and a good time. He knows that Papa is going to have a fit about this. But Papa isn't going to pay, after all. "C'est la Grèce qui payera."

In the four pompous kings, one can see the rulers of France. There are even digs at French culture. The four kings are being entertained. "Nice music," says Agamemi "From Sparta?" "No, no," says Menelans, "German, 1 got it for this ceremony." People chase after silly pleasures. There is that unforgettable "game of goose." The morality of the characters is reflected in Hélène's comment after Calchas gets caught cheating at dice: "He's a clumsy fool What makes a scandal is not cheating hut getting caught at it."

One should not even get caught at things where he is in the right, Menelaus surprises Paris in his wife's bedroom For this he is roundly berated by the four kings. You had no right coming home without warning, they tell Menelaus. A husband has to warn his wife about such matters. He should give her the exact hour and minute of his return. Then all will be connubially sweet and pleasant.

The music to all this is gay and heady. Offenbach was, after all, a genius. He was not only a great melodist; his rhythm also was ingenious; his orchestrations were perfect for what he did, and he had an unparalleled ability for parody. The opening tongue-in-cheek chorus of "Heiène" sets the mood. It is a mock-heroie chorus of mourners, really terribly funny. The music throughout the operatta is in turn rakish, sentimental, elegant, always pointed. The first Paris solo, "Au mont Ida" (to use the French titles; the English libretto is not at hand), is irresistible. On the other side of the coin is the Paris-Helen duet in Act II, "Oui, e'est un reve." This is one of those long, enchanting Offenbach melodies in the best tradition of French opera. It was not for nothing that Rossini called Offenbach the Mozart of the Champs-Elysées.

Audiences will discover that they know a good deal of the score. For Manuel Rosenthal used quite a hit of music from "La Belle Hélène" for his "Galté Parisienne," and everybody knows "Gaite." Thus there will be a ripple of recognition when Helène's "Le roi plantif" comes at the end of Act I; or when Helene's Act II "Un mari sage" and "Va-t'en, mon amour te suivra" hit the ear; or at the final chorus "Pars pour Cythère,"

When Offenbach died in 1881 there was almost a sigh of relief in some quarters. There were those serious minded moralists who had thought Offenbach bad been a blight on the art of music. To them, light music was necessarily frivolous music, unimportant music, sinful music. Dwight's 'Journal of Music" in Boston approvingly reprinted the obstuary notice of The Chicago Tribune, in which the writer said that, yes, Offenbach had been popular all over the world, but that opera-bouffe had had its day. "It was the fashion of a period-a fashion which for a time did great harm to legitimate music, corrupted the popular taste, and and keen appreciation of burlesque, he has written nothing that will live, nothing that has made the world better, nothing that has refined or elevated music. His name as well as his music will soon be forgotten."

But one thing about Dwight and his "Journal of Music." Dwight was always big enough to present several sides of a question, and he followed The Tribune obituary notice a few weeks later with a long appreciation by the dean of European music critics, Eduard Hanslick Wagner's opinion to the contrary notwithstanding, Hanslick was one of the greatest of all critics: a well trained musician an urbane nan, a polished and even brilliant writer.

Hanslick pointed out, in a survey of Offenbach's career that even today impresses with its accuracy and understanding, that Offenbach "had created a new style in which he reigned absolutely alone, and though that style certainly held a subordinate rank in the hierarchy of the drama, it afforded millions of human beings for a quarter of a century. the almost lost pleasure derivable from a copious stream of fresh, easy-flowing, joyous music. To musical tragedy and the higher musical comedy, Offenbach added a third and well-justified category: the musical farce."

There is more, much more, but Hanslick put his finger on the essential quality of the Offenbach phenomenon. It was joyous music, and it has remained so through the years. Hanslick knew, as so many do not, that it is harder to write great light music than great serious music. There are moments in "La Belle Hélène" that make the listener wiggle with pleasure. It's light music. Of course, but it's anything

ohn Cage's newly commissioned work for the Boston Symphony (which will be given its first performance in Boston under Ozawa on Sept. 29 and presented here by the New York Philharmonie under Boulez on Nov. 5, is in a sense a double premiere. Cage has, so to speak, delivered two scores for the price of one: "Renga" and "Apartment House 1776" can be played separately, but they are designed also to be heard simultaneously, with the conductor making the decision as to which piece is to begin first, and which to end first. As is customary with Cage, there is considerable freedom for the performers. "Renga" (which is the name of an elaborate Japanese poetic structure) is notated graphically, using 361 drawings by Thoreau to indicate choices of pitch and timing, and Cage remarks that "the sound of the piece cannot be imagined until it is actually performed." He has used the drawings, he says, "in order to free sounds from the tastes and memories of the performers and the com-represent the diverse inhabitants of America 200 years ago (the Protestant, the Sephardic Jew, the American Indian, the Negro Slave), each sings an authentic song of his own heritage, not written by Cage. The composer hopes that if in the future his chosen vocalists —Helen Schneyer, Nico Castel, Swift Eagle, and Jeanne Lee-are not available for live performances they can be represented by their own tapes. #### Women Composers Chances are that many people have forgotten by now that 1975-76 was Women's Year. There are two women composers in town, however, who have not forgotten and have not been satisfied. "I've been bothered by the token quality of what went on in music last season," says Doris Hays, who composes works for children as well as multimedia events and who, as a pianist, won first prize in the International Competition for Interpreters of New Music in Rotterdam several years ago. Miss Hays and Beth Anderson, who has received a National Endowment grant in composition, are counteracting their suspicion of tokenism with an 11-con-cert series which they have organized at the New School starting Oct. 1 called "Meet the Woman Composer." There will be 17 women involved in performance and discussion of their works, and the accent is decidedly avant-garde.

"Many women are doing original things in the experimental field," Miss Hays contends, and a glance at the New School events bears her out. Leading off the series is a Hunter College faculty member who works with environmental sounds; one participant is president of the Electronic Center for New Music in New York, another is associate director of the Columbia-Princeton Electronic Music Center, another is exploring modern vocal techniques, another works primarily in quarter tones. All this does not exclude conventional instruments on the series, of course, and a substantial assortment will be included. Miss Hays is pleased to have what appears to be the only collaboration. Heyward and his wife Dorothy were already preparing a stage adaptation for the Theater Guild, hut Gershwin didn't mind waiting. Although he was riding the crest of success, as a composer of hit songs, shows and serious concert pieces, Gershwin felt he didn't yet have the technique necessary to compose an opera.

In the fall of 1930, Gershwin signed a contract with the Metropolitan Opera Association for an opera to be delivered at an unspecified date. He wanted a libretto set in New York's melting pot, but finding nothing that suited him, he settled on Ansky's Yiddish play "The Dybbuk." He had developed a sizable number of themes—all of which have since disappeared—when he was informed that the operatic rights had already been given to Italian composer Lodovico Rocca. Once again, Gershwin's thoughts turned to "Porgy."

Heyward was delighted to hear in March 1932 of Gershwin's renewed interest in the project, and he set to work refashioning his play for the composer. In place of the traditional songs and spirituals which had been introduced into the original script, it was neces-sary to write new but "authentic"sounding lyrics, while about 40 percent of the dialogue had to be cut and rearranged so it would flow effortlessly into the more formal set pieces. The result of these labors was one of the most thestrically effective, psychologically believable and consistent librettos that any composer had the luck to set.

"At the outset we were faced by a difficult problem," wrote Heyward before the show's premiere. "I was firm in my refusal to leave the South and live in New York. The matter of effecting a happy union between words and music across a thousand miles of Atlantic seaboard baffled us for a moment. The solution came quite naturally when we associated Ira Gershwin with us. Presently we evolved a system by which, between my visits North, or George's dash to Charleston, I could send scenes and lyrics. Then the brothers Gershwin, after their extraordinary fashion, would get at the plane, pound, wrangle, swear, burst into weird snatches of song, and eventually emerge with a polished lyric."

Gershwin spent the summer of 1934 in South Carolina, living in a shack on Folly Island, a small berrier island 10 miles from Charleston. That summer Gershwin heard "Gullah" songs that were virtually unchanged from their African origins. These were the inspiration for the opening of the Kittiwah Island scene. After hearing the simultaneous individual prayers sung at a Holy Roller's meeting, he found the key to creating a mood of primitive intensity for the opening of the hurricane scene. On one remote island Gershwin joined in with the "shouting"—the complicated pattern beaten out by hands and feet as accompaniment to a spiritual-and carried back ideas that he incorporated into the song for Bess and chorus, "Oh, The Train Is at the Station." Gershwin took 11 months for the actual composition and then devoted eight more months to orchestration.

Rejecting an offer hy the Metropolitan Opera, Gershwin decided to let the Theatre Guild produce "Porgy," reasoning that it would then reach a larger audience and that the six-week rehearsal period would be more than any opera company would offer. And most importantly he wanted the piece cast with black performers, which would have been out of the question at the Rouben Mamoulian, director of the original play, was chosen to repeat his staging chores and Alexander Smallens was hired as conductor. Casting presented formidable problems, since few black singers at this time had been given the opportunity to gain the expetience necessary to sustain such difficult roles. After extensive searching the casting was set: Todd Duncan. Porgy; Anne Brown, Bess; Georgette Harvey, Maria; Ruby Elzy, Serena; Abbie Mitchell, Clara; and tap dancer John Bubbles, Sportin' Life.

Even before rehearsals began, compromises had to be made, and hy the time the production opened at the Alvin Theater on Oct. 10, 1935, huge chunks of the score had been cutmost of the cuts being made after the Boston opening to trim the running time and to lighten the singing load of Todd Duncan. Audiences responded to the score with enthusiasm and the Boston critics were unanimous in their acclaim, but the score confused the New York critics and professionals who didn't know which pigeonhole to tuck it into-opera or musical comedy. The production ran for 124 performances, but with 80 singers on stage and 42 musicians in the pit, the run could not pay back the large investment. When Gershwin died, on July 11, 1937, at the age of 38, he still had not heard his score performed exactly as he had written it.

Cheryl Crawford revived the show in 1941, but at the suggestion of Jean Dalrymple, reduced the cast by half, reduced the orchestra to 27 pieces, and turned the sung dialogue to spoken dialogue (heavily cut and rewritten from the original). A run of 286 performances at the Majestic Theater and a national tour of a year and half-with three return visits to New York-so firmly rooted this bastardized version in the public's mind that when, in 1961, Jean Dairymple tried to set matters straight by reviving an almost complete version at the City Center, she was roundly condemned by critic Judith Crist and many theatergoers who insisted that Gershwin had not intended the piece to be sung straight through. The virtually uncut Houston production should reveal a richness of detail and a breadth that had only been suggested before and demonstrated how Gershwin created a unified mosaic of themes much as Puccini does in "Madama Butterfiv."

Gershwin was not a revolutionary. It was not his intention to expand or alter the form of the Broadway musical with "Porgy and Bess." (Even such a bridiantly integrated musical as "Of Thee I Sing" is a throwback to the Gilbert and Sullivan model.) Gershwin's genius resided in taking an established form-whether it be a concerto, opera or 32-har song-and bringing it alive by infusing it with a voice and spirit that is unmistakably his own.

pitable to the relatively experimental work being done by

I think another answer-I count it only one-might be given. Too many of the 50's and 60's people may have lingered too long in the places that gave them birth, nursed them, praised them for partial accomplishment. In time the partial accomplishment that brought them to first attention may have come to seem enough; working in familiar surroundings, with partners as sympathetic to effort as to achievement, before audiences prepared to accept fledgling work and even dedicated to seeking it out, is a great deal more comfortable—and safer—than tackling the possibly hostile unknown. One can tell oneself, after all, that what is done in limited situations for limited audiences is superior to the gross commercialism that inevitably attaches itself to any more sizable try. And development can stop right

Development comes from constantly increasing the size of the challenge. And though larger theaters, larger audiences, do in fact embroil writers in commercial hazards of many a sort, no writer need take the plunge-nor should he—for the money that "A Chorus Line" is going to earn. He should do it for the massed people he must face, in their diversity, in their varying tastes, in their show-me sluggishness and their universal capacity for being electrified. They're only people; there's just a bigger bunch of them, demanding—if all are to be satisfied simultaneously—a bigger play. If our one-time young hopefuls bave not produced the "big" plays expected of them, it's possibly because too many of them kept on playing it small, small

It's true that Broadway-certainly the Broadway of the 60's-was in no mood for "experiment." Broadway in the 60's was dying on the vine and couldn't even find customers for the commercial materials in which it was supposed to wallow. At the moment, that's all changed. With andiences running back to the theater (where had they been?), with productions being snatched from here, there and everywhere (including downtown workshops and out-of-town tryout centers), with all doors open and even the unlikeliest comers welcome, the opportunities for writers to jump in, mingle, and—let us pray—grow are greater than they have been in many, many years. Seize 'em, I say.

tions that Morris sounded out for support on the City Center idea were labor unions, many, such as the International Ladies Garmeot Workers Union and the United Hebrew Trades, still close to their Socialist origins. As late as 1952; Jacob Potofsky, the head of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, resigned from the City Center Board in protest over the City Ballet's visit to Franco Spain.

The City Center has lost this ideological fervor-which is understandable, although lamentable. The presence of the uninns at the City Center's founding helped shape its character. Snobbery was always absent and "culture for the masses" was taken seriously.

In its brighter days, the City Center was a cultural beebive: a drama company, a light-opera troupe, a Gilbert and Sullivan troupe and a symphony orchestra. All this has now changed. The sole survivors are the City Ballet and the City Opera, for which it was the fund-raising arm. It has withdrawn support from Joffrey and Ailey. But, more significantly, it is no looger the fund-raising arm for the opera and ballet companies.

Money, of course, is the explanation for this turn of events. With increased costs at the more expensive State Theater, to which the City Ballet and City Opera moved in the 1960's, and with the expansion of programs at 55th

Street, the City Center proved unable to support at both houses

The choice of whom to support was mada by Foundation, which in 1974 balled out the City B the City Opera with a $6.3-million grant that bype City Center's central administration. Under these matching funds from the public must be channeled to the opera and ballet companies rather than to the: common pot of the City Center. The City Ballet, for now bas an operating bank account that is distinct City Center's own operating account. This enables Foundation to keep the accounts clear—to see money is going where it has been earmarked. It ale that the City Center central eccount has been de cannot, as it admitted this spring, support the 55

There is a view that the Ford Foundation has the friendly undertaker in the City Center saga. Ballet and the City Opera, which now also have t boards, may have been saved at the expense of Center idea. Yet, whether it should be praised or the Ford Foundation has been correct in gaugin sentiment. Although the 55th Street house was lar last year, there was no public outcry.

In part, some of the City Center's past function been taken on by the Brooklyn Academy of Music academy's philosophy of public service in the arts defined. To qualify for government grants, it per community service by presenting attractions that special interest: for example, a Jamaican dance com-the local Jamaican community. But this is not no the audience that attends the academy's presentation Royal Shakespeare Company. The academy serve constituencies, which is all well and good. Yet, worth of a performing arts center is the creativity

It is no accident that the sole survivors of the Center are its two foremost creative institutions the City Ballet, which produced a totally new rep ballet. If the City Center can no longer afford to be to other creative groups, surely there is room for institution to take its place in this city.

Gregor Piatigorsky, who died last month, was interviewed by Bernard, Rosenberg and Deena Rosenbrg in April 1975 as part of the Project for the Oral History of Music in America at the City University of New York. The following is an excerpted version of the inter-must say I have had an extremely hard life, hard hut fascinating. As a little boy in Russia, I heard music at home all the time. My parents played, without really being musicians. They didn't especially encourage or discourage me to become a musician—I was absolutely determined about that myself at an early age.

Before starting the cello, I played a little piano and violin. The cello was too hig for me at first. But it was soon my favorite string instrument. I found it the richest of the strings, with the biggest range and the most extraordinary possibilities.

I started to earn money for the family before I was eight years old. As a youngster I had all kinds of jobs. I even wrote music for the silent movies, in Russia, when I was nine or ten years old, and later in Paris. Before I knew much about love and kisses, I had to put music together so people would respond romantically. Oh, I have done many things. . .

'I have only ... wished to be a good servant of music.'

My formal education approaches zero. How could I coordinate school with work in night clubs and other such places? I was forced into a kind of self-education. I sought the company of people from whom I could learn something. I was asbamed of my ignorance, of not even knowing elementary geography. I must have been quite a bore to some very nice people. I would come to them with strange questions: What is life? What is love? What is hate? Fortunately, a few wonderful people were not put off by my questions. I was interested in so many things, and I oever had time for them

I ran away from Russia, to Germany, before my 12th birthday. The revolu-I had no seese of geography, of where I was going. I only knew that I had left Russia.

No matter what part of the world you inhabit, if you are a musician, you live io music. But I was never totally one-sided, and in Germany one needed to learn a lot. First there was the language, the literature-Goethe and so many other great writers.

Imagine: There I was in the midst of the rich Weimar culture of the 20's, with a chance to pursue many other interests besides music - literature, politics, oceanography, and so on. I must say, my favorite sport was to sit and to think, or alternatively, to walk and to think.

While still very young, I became the first cellist of the Berlin Philharmonic, where I remained for several years. It was difficult to concertize as a soloist and at the same time to play in an orchestra. But those in charge of the Philharmonic were marvelous about my doing both; I had full freedom. It was fine. I ate. I worked. I'll soon be 72 and I still doo't know the meaning of the word vacation. I just can't under-

Life in Germany, for any musician, let alone a Jewish musician, became impossible under Hitler. One couldn't stay there. It was barbaric. Artists were stifled. You know, music, artthese are oot just little decorations to make life prettier. They're very deep necessities, which people cannot live without. And every musician, every artist, has a heavy responsibility. Though not all of them realize this, to be true to art they must really forget themselves and devote their lives to something larger in which they believe." Just look who stands out in the history of humanity. It's hard to discover who was the richest man in the Middle Ages, and you cannot easily remember the oames of all the kiogs and princes of the Renaissance; there were quite a number of them, but now they hardly matter. But who will ever forget Michaelangelo, and later, Mozart or Beethoven? We can judge the whole history of mankind hy such great people. We see that art is what matters. It may oot look that way at the moment; people are much more ashamed to feel anything now than they were io the past. Children must be rough and tough. If they talk about flowers, they're considered sissies, and poets are called softies. We should remind ourselves that their greatest strength may lie precisely in so-called softness.

From the beginning, I have only wished to he a good servant of music, a good servant in any capacity. I doo't know how to pinpoint exactly what I am. You know, I think I'm simply a musician—not "chamber musician," not a "soloist." "Musician" is a real category; I am not so sure about the

To n, teaching is somehow ty-only concerts matter, world looks at it in that re, an artist gets thouars for one concert, and llars for one lesson. Furug a teacher seems to re-Now, I find that deplorarge audiences, standing re all false and ridicua true servant of music. lways comfortable with music I didn't understand with new music that I didn't grow up with. Lots of recent pieces are full of gadgetselectronics and all that. Too many people are annotating music, just making noise. But I have always been interested in contemporary work. We must remember, Mozart and Beethoven didn't hear all of the sounds we hear. They never heard the sound of a car motor starting running, grinding, stopping. They never heard a telephone ring, or an airpiane roar. It's like peinters who didn't see what our astronauts have seen. In every period, there are thousands of new sounds, thousands of new vistas. So now can one be superconservative and say, "I'm just used to some music that I call classical, and it's the only good music."

In point of fact, I have played new music all my life, eithough people sometimes laughed, especially once in Berlin, let's see, in 1926, I think. I was always curious, and some works fascinated me. Schoenberg's "Pierrot Lunaire," for instance. I remember the first performance in Berlin, with Artur Schnebel at the piano, Fritz Stiedry conducting, in 1923. We got a big standing ovation because it was a home product.

Schnabel and I played a lot together. We had a regular trio: Schnabel, piano, Prof. Cerl Flesch, violin, and me, celio. We travelled a great deal all over Europe. The group itself didn't have a name—we were just known as Schnebel, Flesch and Pietigorsky. Schnabel and Flesch were much older than I, and we never played as a trio in America. But later, Visdimir Horowitz, Nathan Milstein and I, pretty much the same age, played together, here and in Europe. Rubinstein and Helfetz were my pertners in my last regular trio; we played together only in America.

When impresarios were sending me 'round and 'round, I did, oh, 100, 120 concerts a year, Before starting at USC, I still travelled most of the time. Years ago, I used to have a manager; now I don't want one. The most frustrating part of being a musician is that someone is always "selling" you. And a what time it is to take place. As it I'd rather not travel like a madman, a turned out, I just had time to arrive as I used to do.

Sometimes I didn't know where I was. Once I played in London, I think on Monday, and on Tuesday I had a rehearsal in Missouri with the St. Louis Symphooy. Imagine the time difference, jet lag and all that. For me, it's, shall we say, less than ideal to live this way. I realize, though, that some people love it. They are mostly the young but already famous musicians. Some, for instance, Barenboim, can tell you exact schedules for concerts around the world, months, years in ad-

It's fantastic how the youngsters come and go. I played some concerts in Israel—"chamber music," as it's called—with Barenboim and Pinky Zukerman. Think of this: There I am. I look out the window 30 minutes before the concert, and there's Pinky playing tennis -but he comes to the concert on time, and everything's fine. This is so different from older musicians, who generally have to think and compose themselves. They sit around for hours before a concert. It's as if they face a tremendous ordeal every time. But also, they like to sit and talk. All they want is more time. Oh, there's a lot to discuss . .

Today, everyone's in such a hurry. Recently, I went to Washington to play with the Israel Philharmonic under Mehta. So I arrive there the day of the concert, not knowing when the rehearsal is, where the concert is, and and say a quick "hello, how are you. everything is fine with me," to my friends. Then we tuned our instruments, rehearsed, and played the concert. This isn't so bad if you're playing with friends, with good musicians-an orchestra of people who know what you want in a performance. But it's so fast!

In my youth there was time. We didn't produce instant concerts. There were no airplanes. You arrived a few days before the concert. You went to look at the hall. You made new acquaintances, spoke to interesting people; you walked around. You saw how people lived. You got more out of life. As the speed and communication increased it became: airport, hotel, concert hall, and that's that. Instead of being able to describe a town. I can only describe its airport: "Well, that sirport was very bad. You have to walk for 40 minutes, and then drive to town, which takes an hour and a half

." What a big change! To me, my work is life-giving, but you cannot live only for yourself. In the end, everything you see and hear is for people-not only the table, the ashtray, and so on, but art and music as well. Music makes life better. People who have no contact with music are to be pitied. Music is a necessity. It is rich. It is imaginative. It is magnificeot. And it is for everyone.

deck and speaks into a microphone, and two mounted loudspeakers on the floor of the underwater set transmit the muffled observation to the cast and crew. A few minutes later, Yates speaks into the microphone tucked into his diving mask. "Roll, Camera. Action," can be faintly made out from above. Then there is absolute silence once again. An occasional air bubble rising to the surface is the only indication that a multi-million dollar film is being made 30 feet below.

Peter Benchley, the man responsible for it all, ambles by, leans over and peers into the water. 'Tm here just for the fun," he says.

Part of his fun has involved deep-sea diving as opposed to "Deep" set diving. Yet he seems puzzled when asked if he is a good diver, "There is an such thing as a good diver," he says finally, and then ponders the question a bit more. "I suppose if you can go out in the morning and come back at night, then you are a good diver."

Having spoken the last word on diving, he moves on.

For most of the afternoon, the flaxen haired Nick Nulte has been sitting quietly sipping rum from a paper cup. That morning, he had played an under-water scene during which an explosion had propelled him through the bottom nf a sunken ship. Although the experience has left him exhausted, he has had even more harrowing moments. "I was 50 feet down and the mouthpiece on my breathing apparatus broke off," he recalls. 'I spit it out and grabbed the tube and tried to take a breath and I got nathing but salt water. I precious little on booze!"

couldn't see a thing and I swam into the camera. The cameraman stayed with the action, probably saying to himself. The guy's really drowning and I'm getting it on film!" Fortimately, six guys turned up with breathing hoses." Nolte looks up and discovers that Robert Shaw, the shark hunter who was gobbled up at the end of "Jaws," has been listening to his story. With a sardonic smile Shaw-who plays a reclusive lighthouse keeper in "The Deep," grabs Nolte's paper cup and takes a swig from it. "Do you realize that this man is perhaps the most talented young actor in America?" Shaw says, gesturing toward Nolte. 'There is only one problem though. It's a problem I had in my thirties and I had in my forties. I didn't have it in my twenties because I couldn't afford it. It's certainly a problem that I'm going to have in my fifties, though-I drink too muchi"

Shaw pauses a moment. "Will you tell me one great actor who doesn't drink? But Nick and I are both brave. If there's a dare, we'll do it. I don't think either of us lacks courage. That's not our problem. What we lack is sense! We'd take on Evil Kneivel, wouldn't we?

"When Nick and I go down into the water, we can never hear one word anyone says. We just pretend that we know what we're doing. They always say it's marvelous. Do you know why? Because Nick is very masculine. Because we're both macho!"

Nolte reaches up and takes his cup nf rum from Shaw. "Don't spill any of it," Shaw hisses. "They've spent millions on water, but the fact that Ruth St. Denis can be viewed in a revival of her early 'Red and Gold Sari," or that Ted Shawn can be seen dancing his mystical solos, "Cosmic Dance of Shiva" and "Whirling Dervish." Certainly, the most exciting "home movies" in the collection are those that Shawn and Miss St. Denis shot during their company's tour of Asia in 1925 and 1926. In addition to showing the actual Javanese and Burmese dances which influenced the company so profoundly, this footage also contains informal shots of Shawn and Miss St. Denis shopping in bazaars, ridharajah of Kashmir.

Proceeding chronologically, one can see Martha Graham, fresh out of Denishawn and still very much influenced by Miss St. Denis, dancing her own first work of solo choreography, "Flute of Krishna"(1926). There are also films of Miss Graham in her "Lamentation" (1930), and "Night Journey" (1947), in which she dances Jocasta to Bertram Ross' Oedipus.

Representing modern dance at the turn of the next decade are films of Anna Sokolow's haunting "Lyric Suite" and José Limon's highly formal "condensation" of Othello, "The Moor's Pavane" (featuring Limon, Pauline Koner and Lucas Hoving). The influence of modern dance on ballet at this time can be seen in a videotape of Agnes de Mille's delightful "Three Virgins and a Devil" (which the vigilant moral guardians at CBS retitled "Three Maidens and a Devil" for television.) The "Maidens" in this 1953 TV version were Miss de Millé, Lucia Chase and Janet repber's pivotal role in bringing about a whole new relationship between ballet and modern dance. In "Septet." Cunningham may well be gently mocking halletic conventions; but in the process of doing so, he is also breaking with the "elemental" emphasis on gravity which had traditionally characterized modern dance.

Post-Cunningham modern dance is not especially well represented; but here, too, the collection is full of quirky surprises. Fans, of Twyla Tharp may be amazed (as I was) to learn that the collection owns a film version of Miss Tharp's first choreographic effort, an austere and almost puritanically unphysical piece called 'Tank Dive" (1965). Other significant avant-garde landmarks preserved (at least partially) on film include Meredith Monk's "Juice" and Yvonne Rainer's "Continuous Project Altered Daily" (which employed many performers who still appear with The Grand Union).

Needless to say, there is much more this extraordinary film collection. If you're interested in knowing whether or not the library owns footage of a particular dance, dancer, company, or type of dance, call the Dance Collection at 799-2200, extension 228 or 229. (When reserving a film, it's best to call about a week in advance.) The Collection is open from noon to 6 P.M. Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday and from noon to 8 on Monday and

For a real sense of the incredible richness of this collection the visitor should spend an afternoon browsing through the automated book catalog. turned the stage of the Royal Court into a showcase for gritty and unpre-dictable talent.

Recently, in the Royal Court's Theater Upstairs—a 66-seat arena for experimental drama — a play quietly opened that deals with a youth who loses a leg in a pub bombing. It sounds grim—it is grim—yet the 80-mioute drama, "Just a Little Bit Less Than Normal," has earned wide critical acclaim and, in an otherwise tepid theater season, has emerged as one of the most vivid original plays of the year. "It is an extraordinary experience by an ex-citing new playwright," said The Ob-server. "This is the grimmest play in London," said The Guardian. "It may be flawed in its writing and characterization but its nagging urgency, its angry courage in dealing with a taboo subject, its success in creating convincing laughter from the ashes does show the theater's residual value in dealing with those issues which other media often shelve."

The play, by 26-year-old actor Nigel Baldwin, centers on a popular working-class youth his has a job, a steady girlfriend, is a member of a local foot-ball club—whose life is shattered when an I.R.A. bomb explodes in a London pub, blowing his left leg away. When we meet him, he is scarred even more mentally than physically, and his awk-ward attempts at readjustment, at trying to deal with his wound, are brutally punished. His ghastly mother, full of piety and ignorance, offers him the euphemism from which the play derives its title ("You're not a cripple, son, you're just a little bit less than normal"). His friends turn taunting and vicious. His girlfriend—caught between pity and love-endures his furious anrish and finally runs off with his best friend. By the end, the youth is overwhelmed with despair. The play's theme—the way society punishes and seeks to rid itself of anyone different or not "normal" -- is only tenuously explored, a flaw in the drama. Yet the play touches raw nerves. It is painful to watch, but rivetTHE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1976

lumbo" is not, even though most episodes of "Columbo" are better written, directed and acted than most specials.

And we are very big on thick-pieces, because (a) we would like to be taken seriously, to believe that we stand on some pertinent relation to the dunes of the culture at large; and (b) for so much of the time there is so much that is fatrious that one is forced to think whether or not one is inclined or equipped to. Think-pieces are often characterized by a borrowing of fictional devices—the parody, say, of a Barthelme short story-to prove that one is literate.

Election years are nace because there are at least three articles, and as many as seven, we can write by rote. How did the networks cover the Democrat and Republican conventions, and election night? How did they prepare to cover those conventions and that night? What egregious effect did their coverage of the primeries bave on the nominating process itself?

Otherwise it is recumbent upon us (since television reviewers take everything lying down) to walt for accidents. One could, for example, do a column comparing the local late-night televieion news coverage of the death of Mao with the coverage of that rumble in black and white in Washington Square. Videotaped post mortems on babies locked alone in cellars while houses but down are also always good for an essay on the invasion of grief. An earthquake or Ilie Nastase helps.

The fact is that television reviewers do not watch the same television that the rest of the country is watching. Having declared our enthusiasms and dismeys early each season, we go on to look for the unusual or the outrageous or the ambitious and expensive, anything that will allow us to flex and fitter and moralize and blab knowl-

Whereas most watchers of television -most Americans-experience something entirely different, I suspect. I suspect so because I've spent the last six weeks in such a disorder of my personal and professional lives that I have gone to television not in search of fertilizer for growing an opinion, but for any sort of distraction I might find. Strangers troop in and out of my house and soul, tearing holes in the walls. I am stiff with the pitch of wood, coated in plaster dust, spackled, wireless, a

And television talks to me. Rerune, late movies, baseball games, quiz mate, a weather. It rains distraction on me, tans the hide of mind. It is various and undemanding—the old West, the Far East, Mr. Spock, Groucho Marx. I do not expand, but I acquiesce. The pulp imagination is as much as, and perhaps more than, I can handle while wearing the sneakers of my fatigue. Loyal, obedientand I don't have to walk it on the dangerous city streets. Whoever was in charge of Channel 5's 11:30 P.M. movies, until the mysterious appearance this week of the Lorenzo and Henrietta Music variety show, seems to have Xeroxed my astral aura, my psy-chic blueprint. I don't even have to dream up ways of expressing my grati-

French programming that will be carried Sundays and Wednesdays at 10 P.M. on Channel 10 of both systems in Manhattan. The hustling entrepreneur behind this venture ie a 32-year-old Frenchman named Jean-Claude Baker. Born Jean-Claude Rouzaud in Dijon, he and his family were deserted by his father and, on eventually reaching Paris in his early teens, he was taken under the protectiva care of the late Josephine Baker, tha American entertainer who adopted a "Baker's dozen" (Jean-Claude was No. 13) of homeless

Miss Baker sent Jean-Claude to Liverpool to work in a hotel and to learn English. There he also met a new rock group called the Beatles and their manager, Brian Epstein. Later, he was sent to Berlin to work in a restaurant and to learn German. Soon, however, in his early 20's, the energetic wanderer was the owner of his own club/discotheque, Pimm's, which became a magnet for celebrities in Berlin. The money he acquired from the club and the adjacent Pimm's Boutique is being used to launch this cable series.

On Wednesdays, "Telefrance-USA" will be strictly for French-speaking eudiences. On Sundays, the subtitled content will be aimed at the English-speaking Francophile. With Mr. Baker as host, the programs will include French-related news, interviews, dramas from French television and. of course, films, including some American movies that have been dubbed into French. Material is being obtained not only from France but from Canada and Switzerland.

Will the venture work? Only time will tell. A somewbat similar plan involving German programming faltered last season, but Mr. Baker insists he can avoid the business mistakes the German producers made on that one. And, so far, "Telefrance-USA" is receiving encouraging cooperation, particularly from French television executives and a number of prestigious "sponsors," including Cartier and Yves St. Laurent. If energy, charm and elegance constitute a magic formula, Mr. Baker should have no problem. At an impressive party leunching the eeries, which is set for at least 13 weeks, the young impresario had arranged for smart entertainment (the legendary Bricktop singing "It Had to Be You" accompanied by the legendary jazz violin of Stephane Grappelli) while cable executives sipped French wine smid chic guests with tee-shirts promoting Renault cars. He is obviously a salesman how you say? extraordinaire.

He is not, however, out of the software woods. Among other things, he has discovered that the rights to many French films (for instance, those of Janus Films) are already tied up elsewhere. He has, in other words, run into one of the more crucial problems confronting cable on all levels, including the most sensitive one of pay TV. There are Federal Communication Commission rules that supposedly make new films available to pay-cable operators before they are shown on commercial television, but cable operators claim that in actual practice the situation is riddled with catch-22's.

In recent Washington hearings before the House Subcommittee on Communications, Ralph M. Baruch, the president of Viacom International, argued forcefully that the FCC should be barred from imposing any pay-cable rules in the absence of evidence that the public is thus being deprived of available programming. Needless to say, Viacom is attempting to establish a major position in the pay-cable field. One of its recent experiments in which separate fees were charged for specific programs in Smithtown, Long Island, failed. Viacom is currently launching an entertainment package called "Showtime" that includes the East Bay area of San Francisco in its marketing domain.

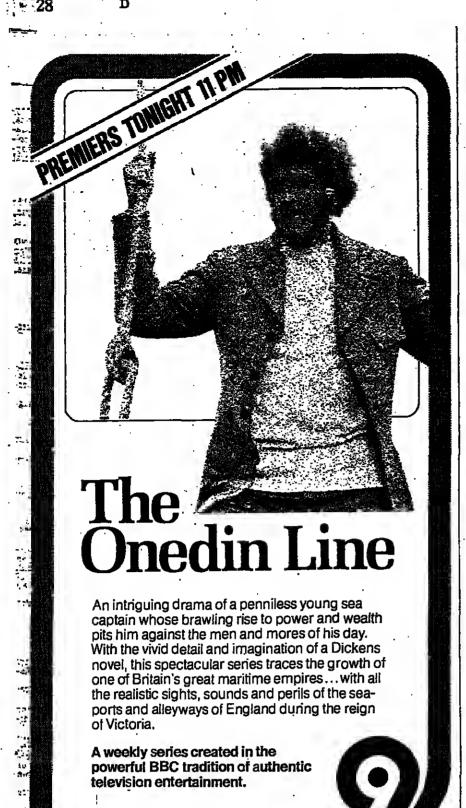

The ultimate shape that cable will assume is still highly unpredictable. The shrewd and knowledgeable Irving B. Kahn, the former Teleprompter president who was convicted in 1972 of bribing a small-town official in a bid for a cable franchise, has returned to the cable business by ecquiring 13 film dramas made by American Film Theater and reselling them to Home Box Office, which is the supplier for 82 percent of the 830,000 pay-cable bomes in the United States at present. In a past issue of Videography magazine, Mr. Kahn said: "Once you have the technology, making it happen is 95 perecut of the job. That involves politics, promotion, financing many other untechnical areas. Most of these are not controllable. . . . The only hope is to taka generations of younger members of the industry and broadly expound your theories so that they at least become exposed to them."

In the coming October issue of the same publication, Harlan P. Kleiman, the former vice president of programming at Home Box Office, explores the problem of "Satisfying the Subscriber: Pay-TV's Greatest Challenge." Conceding the high incidence of "disconnects" among pay-cable subscribers, he notes that the pay-TV viewer watches more television daily than the regular broadcast viewer; television is already the most significant entertainment medium for this subscriber. Mr. Kleiman's conclusion: Most subscribers "expectpay TV to provide more heightened entertainment experiences than they are receiving from regular broadcast television. The need is for a different or beightened experience, for a new 'kick.' "

That much would seem logical, if not glaringly apparent. But heightened experiences are not easy to come by these; days. A couple of months ago, Home Box Office did put together a weekend that included the film "Gone With the x Wind," unedited and uninterrupted, plus an uncensored special featuring Bette Midler in concert performance. The combinetion was sensational but rare. The explorations continue, though, with premising sources of programming developing outside this country; Mr. Baker's "Telefrance-USA" 78 is one example. The German series is reportedly about to be revived. Viacom's Mr. Baruch speaks of a series featuring opera productions or music specials made for, say, Italian

These concepts, of course, are and would be simed at minority audiences, but an imaginative consortium of minority audiences could reach eignificant proportions. Meantime. an extensive tour of the electronic "global village" could provide American viewers with infinitely fresher criteria for quality programming.

Highlights in Jazz

This series commences on Wednesday at NYU's Loeb Student Center with perform-ers and music that figured in last summer's Grande Parade du Jazz in Nice. The concert is a salute to Jelly Roll Morton, Scott Joplin, James P. Johnson and other innovators who composed from the earliest jazz era through the 1820's. Dick Hyman, the planist, conductor and arranger who culled material he had done for the New York Jazz Repertory company and Columbia re-cordings, will rendezvous with Pee Wee Erwin, trumpet; Milt Hinton, bass; Bob Rosengarden, drums; Vic Dickenson, trombone: Johnny Mince, clarinet; and singer. Carrie Smith. (See Music)

The Barge Is Back

The New York State Bicentennial Barge, with its cargo of historical artifacts and memorabilia pertaining to New York during the Revolutionary Era, was launched as a floating museum at the South Street Sea-port-Museum in early June and, since that time, has traveled more than 3,000 miles over the waterways of New York State. This week the barge is back and will moor at local ports (see Art, Other) until Oct. 16. when the will anchor again at South Street.

Morris at the Morgan

For snyone interested in the art of fine printing a category which ought to in-

Morgan Library's fall exhibit, "William Morris and the Art of the Book," is not to be missed. Morris (1834-96) was a busy man: poet, novelist, translator (his auto-graph manuscript of "Beowulf" is in the show); designer and decorator of stained glass, tapestries and other furnishings; leader of social causes; collector of medic val illuminated manuscripts and early printing, printer, typographer, illustrator, calligrapher. These last aspects of his intercalligrapher. These last aspects of his inter-ests are what the Morgan show is all about. Included are ontstanding books from his collection (among them a 13th-ceotury Eng-glish pealter, which he dubbed his "Wind-mill Psalter" because of the curious and charming introduction of the image on the second folio) and examples of his multi-faceted work at Kelmscott Press, whole masterpiece was the Chaucer of 1896 (displayed at the Morgan in unbound pages loterspersed with drawings by its woodcut-illustrator Sir Edward Burne-Jones). # Early Bunuel

Tomorrow, and for the next three Monlomorrow, and for the next three Mon-days, four films by Luis Banuel, made in Mexico during the late 1940's and early 1950's, will make their theatrical premiers in New York at the Carnegie Hall Chema, More rugged than the classics for which the Spanish director hecame renowned (which will be shown later in the series), these films deal with the human experience in Latin America with melodramatic parody and buffocoery. Promenade sur la Côte d'Azur

Louis Fabien, a romantic in the School of Paris, has painted the Côte d'Azur from untamed St. Tropez to fanciful nights in Monte-Carlo. In an exhibition that promises to be talked about, France's prizewinning painter of pure color and shimmering sunlight, has captured with rare sensitivity, the spirit of the Côte d'Azur, its carefree lovers, its idle sunkissed days, its balmy Mediterranean nights.

has moved to new quarters at 25 East 83rd Street and will be open by appointment only to dealers, museums and collectors.

As one of the world's leading dealers in fine prints, we have always felt the responsibility to buy works in the best possible condition, to fully research these acquisitions, and to reject all dubious and questionable prints masquerading as original graphics. However, the dwindling availability of good prints at prices that would allow us to resell to our clients has necessitated a decision to take Reiss-Cohen private, and to conduct our business by appointment only. By doing this, we shall be able to offer the same quality graphics at far more attractive prices. As in the past, we shall continue to enhance the Reiss-Cohen collection through carefully chosen acquisition of works by:

Why You Always Win and Lose In Urban Renewal

wenty years is a short time to see a dream of a renewed city realized; it is also a period richly instructive in the compromises necessary to make that dream come true. The gift arrives, and the package is full of surprises. The results are tinged with glory and frustration.

Twenty years ago I wandered Boston's downtown streets and fell in love with Quincy Market. It was in an obvious state of terminal decline and only a few historians and antiquarians were concerned about its survival. The urban renewal bulldozer was poised at its edge. Its 6.5 acres of seedy beauty, order and distinction were the subject of massive inattention.

Built to designs by Alexander Parris for Mayor Josiah Quincy in 1824-26, the group of market buildings near the waterfront—correctly called the Fanenii Hell Markets for their illustrious neighbor and predecessor—was not only the country's first large redevelopment project; it was also arguably its finest Greek Revival complex—then and now. A temple-like granite structure 535 feet long hy 50 feet wide, with east and west porches of mocolithic Doric columns and a central copper dome, is flanked by two loog, harmonious 5-story granite blocks across wide streets. In the 1950's such treasures were being ritually sacked. But Quincy Market miraculously escaped that fate: on August 26, exactly 150 years to the day after it originally opened, it reopened triumphantly. The restoration is one of the stellar features of Boston's exemplary downtown renewal, a remarkably sensitive synthesis of new and old, from Fancuil to City Haff. I walk those streets now with particular pleasure. There is no impossible dream.

Theo why did I spend my first hour in the restored market awash in nostalgia for old produce stalls, old wooden beams, old merrow stairs, chaotic pushcarts and the kind of hooest shahhiness that is the antithesis of chic? Why did I respond with sympathy, to the gentleman who asked with considerable anguish, "Where the hell are the vegetables?".

But the vegetables are there, and so are the flowers and the meat and the oysters and dams, as well as canvas bags and candles and crepes and ethnic food bars; they are there in the only context-circe, cleaned-up, skillfully merchandised settings-that will work economically, for expensively remodeled space, with appeal for the affluent and sophis ticated public that can support such an enterprise today. You cannot ever really turn back the clock, or have things asythey were. The appropriate resolution of the hard realities of necessary change are what preservation is all about.

And yet every "appropriate" solution kills the old huildings a little bit at the same time that it keeps them alivea practical and philosophical paradox. And every "appropriate" solution must be accepted if urban beauty, amenity and history are to be retained at all. Here there is obvious tenant quality control, and an explosion of too-clever graphics. The dilemma, in the end, is balance. You win and you lose at the same time, and with luck, you mostly win. Quincy Market is a winner; the Saturday generation will vonderful time. Keeping such a superb urban complex and great architectural monument as a productive, functioning part of the city is traught with promise and perils. No matter what I write of the anguish and politics, of the controversies and decisions, what credits are given, someone will correct the record. But one decision stands out clearly: in the mid-1960's, Edward Logue, then head of the Boston Redevelopment Authority, with the help of Walter Muir Whitehill and other historians, determined that the market complex was not expandable—one of his many bold, risky stands that paid off in Boston's brilliant downtown renewal.

Logue commissioned a $50,000 study which was carried out by a preservation-oriented development group, Architectural Heritage, Inc., under Roger Webh, the successful restorer-developer of the Old City Hall, and the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities. The Cambridge architectural firm of Beojamin Thompson Associates was also proposing redevelopment. But from an office on the dusty, deserted top floor of the Quincy Market building, Mr. Webb produced an impressive five-volume feasibility study that earned a $2 million HUD preservation grant in 1969.

In 1970 the Boston Redevelopment Authority, under its new director, Robert T. Kenney, advertised for developers. Architectural Heritage lost out to Benjamin Thompson and Van Arkle-Moss as architects and developers. When Van Arkle-Moss could not meet the schedole and dropped out, a murky political donnybrook ensued, with Webb back in competition until Thompson produced the Rouse Company, developers of Columbia, Md., and many shopping centers. Rouse's commercial expertise, staff and capital, combined with Thompson's detailed architectural plans, carried the day in 1973. The developer has leased the building for 99 years from the city of Boston, with a guaranteed return to

While these negotiations were proceeding, the B.R.A. "restored" the exteriors of the buildings according to a plan hy architect-preservationist Theodore Stahl, which required the demolition of all additions and changes that had modified the original design. This embroiled the project in public and professional controversy about the amount of reconstruction involved. Some units are totally rebuilt. The newold shells were then turned over to the Thompson-Rouse

It was agony all the way. First, the developer had to be innovative, since no cooventional marketing or real estate precedents applied. There was the question of concept-with the decision made to keep the structures as open and related to the street and each other as possible. The huildings have beeo stripped, in many places, to a remarkable "skeleton" of granite-Parris used huge granite slabs and lintels unconventionally as support members for bearing walls, like structural timber or steel-end the granite-framed ground floor windows were left open. This gives the main market building interior continuity with the glass-canopy-covered "buil market," a kind of elegant pushcart market outside. There is no air-conditioning, but shutters and doors close these areas in cold weather, when they are heated. Mechanical equipment is exposed. A three-level, three-aisle, all year shopping center has been created as a colorful service anchor for the developing downtown community.

The second battle was over many-paned versus modern plate glass windows, with historians ranged obstinately against architects. The patently sensible but still debatable solution was the pivoting single pane window that is being used. A third fight revolved around street paving and trees. There is now a oegotiated mix of granite blocks, brick, and ophblestones, shaded by black locusts, and the streets are closed to cars.

Another controversy surrounded the architects' desire to cut through the market building's upper floor to reveal the elliptical dome and create a focal central rotunda. R was done, and has proved a wise decision, although the "new" detailing could be less assertive. The superb Greek Revival detail of the dome helps re-establish the building's architectural character and the focus is both handsome and functional. Every decision has had to be a touchy compromise between historicism and rational reuse, tempered hy practical economics, Financing, conditioned by 10 years of local skepticism and a depressed real estate market, was balky and slow. Interestingly, the major part of it has come from New York. But the pieces are all in place now, the North and South Market buildings will open in 1977 and 1978 to complete the commercial complex, and the next generation will wonder what the struggle was all about 100ay Market is a showpiece in a city of rich urban and esthetic theon, $17.95), published to coincide with the exhibitionhe draws a wonderful comparison between this underworld and the more glamorous and respectable beau monde. "There are many similarities between what we call the 'underworld' and the 'fashionable world.'" he writes. "Entry into both these exclusive societies, made up primarily of the idle, is not easy. Each has its regulations, its customs and usages, its moral code, its affairs of honor, whether its members settle them with sabers, pistols, or knives. If entry into 'high society' requires family crests, titles, diplomas from the best schools, wealth and fame, entry into the underworld requires widespread criminal activity, a police record full of arrests, and, of course, an illegitimate background, suspicious forehears, closely supervised training. Eveo the languages are similar, both tainted with snobbery. Just as the polished speech of men of the world is, at least in France, full of Anglicisms and fashionable catch phrases, so criminal slang, cootinually changing, is full of words newly coined fromthe streets of Paris. I even noticed that in the underworld some of the guys, out of pure snobbery, spoke a slang so hermetic that even their pals couldn't understand them. They had to translate their ideas into French to make themselves understood."

Brassai goes on, in this passage, to talk about the inventiveness of this underworld language. There is a plethora of synonyms for every kind of person, idea, or thing that touches the underworld. I've counted some of them: 20 expressions for the verb 'to love,' some 30 for 'to kiss,' a dozen for sexual arousal, the same number for ejaculation, more than 70 words—a record!—for the act of love. There are 50 words for the male sex organ, 15 for the testicies, 20 or so for the female organ," and so on. Brassai, as anyone can see, is a wonderful writer, and his book, though well-illustrated with his photographs of the period, is something more than the usual appendage to an exhibition. It is a beautiful memoir of the age and the society that is documented in the pictures, written with humor, precision and the narrative ease of e good novel.

Of course the writer, now in his 70's, is not quite the same man who took these photographs 40 years ago. The author of "The Secret Paris of the 30's," though no sentimentalist, takes a somewhat memower view than the one we find in the pictures. But important clue to the pictures, I think, in th quoted above, for just as Brassal had the special snobbery of the underworld and linguistic inventions that gave it expression for the multitude of types that inhabited ti titute sitting on a bidet while her custor dressed is not everyone's idea of a great photograph—but each of his pictures dis-thing very individual, and together they gi the human comedy not to be seen in anythi concreteness and variety elsewhere. Brassa ize, is cataloguing his whores and their same patience and curiosity he brought to new words for the act of love.

"To the present generation," Brassai v these pictures seem as exotic as if they w or Zulus. Eveo more so." And so, indeed, more so than Brassai's own easy conscience his camera on this "forbidden" world. "Rigl I felt at the time," he writes, "that this und represented Paris at its least cosmopolitz alive, its most authentic, that in these colo underworld there had been preserved, fro almost without alteration, the folklore of i past."

So it was in Paris, in the third decade ( tury, that the photographer re-enacted that primitive that had for so long heen one of peratives of modern culture. But the cames us something a little different: the chronical very much tethered to the society of the thater. He frequently urges you to savor some chance composition—such as a hand (dark, male and hairy) abandoned on a female bottom-with the obsessive glee of a man whose eyes have oot stopped photographing the streets of Paris for half a century. His sense of fun and evident enjoyment of life make him astonishingly young. Yet he becomes above all someone who has lived through and recorded an epoch that already beloogs to history.

Brassal arrived in Paris in 1924, when he himself was 24 years old. He had left his native Transylvania (then Hungarian, now part of Rumania) with little more than a romantically artistic mien and a desire to become a painter in the great center of the arts. He plumped right away for Montparnasse and was quickly caught up in its effervescence of oew ideas and attitudes. He was also lured away from painting. 'With so many fascinating people around, from all over the world, how could I stay shut up alone in a studio with a canvas?" he puts it to you with his gregarious smile. So he went out, and generally stayed out, moving from one cafe to the next, and meeting everyone—the new writers and painters, their girl friends and such legendary Montparnasse ladies as Kiki and Lily, the opium addicts. "I used to end up around four or five io the morning with coffee and croissants and the new day's paper." Brassal recalls with relish. "Then I'd go back to my little hotel, and when I woke up and it was dark outside I oever knew whether it was the same night or the cext one." Although Brassai had actively disliked the idea of photography, he came to see it as the ideal medium for recording the spectacle of Paris, picturesque and poignant hy turns, which record the life in the streets around + times he had his camera smashed, and me, as Rembrandt and Goya, Daumier and Degas I'm not making comparisons!-had done, And I realized that photography was truly an art of our time and the best way of capturing all the fleeting impressions which excited me."

From an observant noctombule, he turned into an eye, the "eye of Paris," as his friend Henry Miller was to call him. He seems, what's more, to have made himself invisible, so as to creep up on the seamier side of Paris and catch it unawares. Pimps, prostitutes, drug addicts, thieves, homosexuals, lesbians, tramps—every kind of social outcast-became his camera's favorite Brassal's natural affability plus whatever he could give in tips helped him get near these frequently thinskinned and dangerous hirds of the night. What interested me was their reality-even, in a way, their hanality, That's why I never fully agreed with the Surrealists, who adored everything exotic and strange. As with his less well-known subjects, Brassel has caught their most naked, everyday and undisguised selves.

Friendship has undoubtedly been one of Brassa's talents in life. Of the thousands of volumes that line the apartment behind Montpernasse where he has lived since 1935, he visibly values above all the couple that contain scores of notes and letters to him from virtually all the major artistic figures of the time. He himself still bubbles with enthusiasm and laughter when he comes on a quip from Dali or a polished apology from Mairaux.

His other talents, which include drawing, sculpture and writing, are no less evident. "Wheo Picasso saw my drawiogs, he said to me, 'You should draw rather than photograph. You've got a gold mine in your drawwriter and artist friends. Looking at " ings and yet you go oo working a salt

I like to group both sorts in shades of yellow, orange and buff (such as the single Princess Irene and double Marechal Niel) in front of a light yellow forsythia along with white daffodils, violet-blue hyacinths and true-blue scillas. Some years all-white pansies join this throng.

Crosses between the scarlet T. fosteriana of Emporer talip fame, and Darwin tuips, have resulted in a spectacular new tulip class of huge flowers on tail stems that begin to bloom toward the end of the daffodil season, (This past mixed-up spring, some of these varieties were in full flower in my garden on April 16.) They are called Darwin Hybrids, and the colors are mostly hot reds or electric combinations of red and yellow, but they are so magnificent that I must grow some. So I plant Gudoshnik (blended yellow peach and red, and extravagantly love-ly) and General Eisenhower (brilliant orange-red) among grey boulders; along with wild blue phlox (P. divaricata) and grape hyacinths (Muscari armeniacum).

For a different grape hyacinth, try the moch enlarged double form called Blue Spike with a profusion of florets . rather like those of a double hyacinth. novelties, the viridifloras and the multi-some varieties such as the scarlet Amourette produce ooe large flower and, from branches on the main stem, three to five smaller blossoms. Others, like the clear yellow, red-edged Georgette, hear a bouquet of several goodsized flowers. Just a few bulbs of these tulips will make a good showing. Colors range from the warm white of Ivory Towers to the gleaming mahogaoy-purple of Mahogany Prince.

Bloom-time of the lily-flowered tubps overlaps that of the Darwin hybrids and the late Darwin and cottage tulips. Their flowers are longer and narrower than those of the Darwins. The gracefulness of the long, tapering and slightly reflexed segments produces an airy effect that one does not expect from Flowers of some varieties, such as Mariette, last a loog time-often more than three weeks. This favorite has very large satiny flowers of bright rosepink. Red Shine is a deep glowing red with a blue base. West Poiot, with large and much reflexed flowers is probably the finest yellow-a deep shade of primrose. It combines beautifully with the slightly taller White Triumphator.

Setting Up a Darkroom

workable home darkroom that will add hours of engrossing and creative pleasure to the photographic hobby can be set up by almost anyone-regardless of whether it is only a simple setup that makes temporary use of an anartment bathroom or kitchen, or a larger and more permanent facility that the photographer builds into his bome

In recent years there has been a technological explosioo of oew darkroom products to make things easier for the home processor, so darkrooms can be designed to work equally well with color or black-and-white.

Apartment darkrooms are most often set up in either the kitchen or the bathroom, and of the two the bathroom setup usually presents the greatest problem-lack of adequate space. Since the enlarger is one of the bulkiest pieces of equipment, a location for this needs to be selected first. In most cases the best place for this is on top of the sink, and the easiest way to utilize this area is to cover the sink with a piece of %-inch thick plywood. The board should be slotted to fit around the faucets, which will also help to stabilize it. The toilet seat should be covered with a piece of plywood about two feet square to provide a small work area that will bold enlarging paper, dodging tools, dusting cleaning hrushes, small penlight, and timer. The bathtub is covered with a sheet of 34-ioch plywood about two feet wide and slightly longer than the tub. This will be the "wet" area which will hold a color drum with the necessary chemicals (for color) or trays for black and white. For print washing we can use the tub itself, or a large tray inside it with a print washing accessory such as the Kodak tray siphon.

Toe small window found in many. hathrooms is easily covered with an opaque window shade and the edges of the shade taped down with black masking tape to seal off the light coming m around the edges. (The maskion tape peels off easily afterwards without marring painted surfaces.) Another method is to construct a light-tight frame for the window which cao be stored after use. Light leaking around the edges of the door may be blocked with strips of insulating foam (available in hardware stores).

The kitchen darkroom is much more convenient than the bathroom. For one, the sink countertop provides a readyto-use base for the enlarger and a builtin work surface for drum, trays, and other paraphernalia. If the kitchen has no door you may have to have an opaque shade cut to size, then seal the edges with black masking tape. Another method is to use opaque curtain material weighted at the bottom, that overlaps the door frame. Windows can be covered the same way as in a bathroom type darkroom.

A basement darkroom cao be as small as 6x8 feet, or as large as desired. For ventilation one can install special ventilators (small fans) with baffling fins to keep out the light and let in the air. Gypsum board panels are best for the walls, but leave the study exposed on the inside of the darkroom for conveoleot hanging of safelights and other accessories. A plywood floor covered with asphalt tile should be put down on the top of the concrete floor. Theo build a 30-incb high work surface around three of the walls, with a shelf midway between the floor and top of this work surface for storage of trays. drums, chemicals, bottles, and enlarging paper. If the new darkroom lacks a sink, a plastic tank (5-20 gallon capacity) with spigot for drawing off the water needed for chemical mixing is a satisfactory substitute.

In setting up the darkroom a "work flow" pattern should be kept in mind for most efficient utilization of space, and economy of movement. The enlarger is best aet op in a corner. It's a good idea to separate "wet" areas from "dry" areas, with negative viewing slide editing, print drying and trimming Continued on Next Page on the opposite side of the room from the wet processing area.

Proper placement of safelights is most important for trouble free printing. There should be a small safelight near the enlarger for ease in sorting through negatives, finding the proper dodging tools, setting the lens opening on your enlarging lens, cleaning negatives, etc. A second, larger safelight is needed over the developing tray, or stabilization printer, and a white light for print inspection over the fixing tray, preferably with a foot switch.

The most important item in a home darkroom is the enlarger. Those designed specifically for color work have dichroic (fade free) filters in special stepless, or stepped configurations. These may be used for color printing or black-and-white printing. Enlargers designed for black-and-white printing have filter drawers for the filters used with variable contrast black-and-white enlarging paper. These same drawers may also be used for holding filters for color printing.

Many of the newer models can be purchased with a color head, then a condenser head added at some future date for non-color printing. There are also auto-focus enlargers which are faster and more convenient to use, but they do cost more; and there are motordriven enlargers that glide up or down at a touch of the finger. A quality lens for the enlarger is of crucial importance in making fine prints. It is foolish to spend hundreds of dollars for camera and lenses; then skimp on the price of the enlarging lens. A poor quality enlarging lens can ruin shots taken with the most expensive camera lens. Also, exposures in color printing are usually much longer than black-andwhite, so the new, high speed enlarging lenses are designed for these longer exposures and they are usually more highly color corrected than older

The easel that holds your enlarging aper should be heavy enough so that it doesn't "skate" around the enlarger baseboard, and it should hold the paper flat at all four corners. There is a new generation of vacuum easels which hold the paper absolutely flat by means of suction, and produce borderless prints. These come in two types; one that works in conjunction with your vacuum cleaner, and the other has its own power supply built in.

A new assortment of electronic digital timers has been put on the market due to the popularity of color printing. These come in three configurations: those calibrated in tenths of a second, in full seconds, and in minutes. Some come with illuminated digital readouts that count down to zero; and some have a built-in audible signal that counts seconds for aid in dodging and burning in. These timers are all much

Because of the popularity of home color printing, many manufacturers now produce processing drums for color printing. These are used in much the same fashion as daylight film developing tanks. The exposed color printing paper is loaded into the tank in the dark, the tank is closed, and all subsequent operations are carried out in broad daylight. The necessary chemicals are poured into and out of the drum in proper sequence.

Another popular new method of printing black-and-white enlargements is with a stabilization processor. This looks like two rollers attached to a small housing, with space for two inverted plastic bottles. The exposed paper is fed through the rollers, and produces a damp-dry print in about 17

Resin-coated printing papers have been gaining in popularity because surfaces require much less washing time (about 4 minutes against one to two hours for regular papers), and glossy surfaces are easily obtained without the necessity for ferrotyping. Also, these papers lie completely flat.

Most home darkrooms will also include a print trimmer. There are two types available. The newest has a rotary blade which is safer to use than the straight blade kind. The disadvantage is its inability to cut heavy mat board the way straight blade trimmers

A few final words about some important small accessories. A highly accurate thermometer is very important. The Weston thermometer has a clock face with easy to read numerals, and is accurate to half a degree.

STAMPS, COINS & MEDALLIC ART

25 Years for U.N. St

n celebration of its 25th anniversary, the United Nations Postal Administration is issuing on Oct. 8 four commemorative stamps that depart in several ways from all other U.N. stamps to make the occasion of special import to collectors. The issue embodies only two designs. Two stamps of like design but differing values in U.S. currency are being put out for use by the U.N. Readquarters in New York City. Two commemoratives, also of like design but of differing values of Swiss currency, are being issued for use by the U.N.'s European headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland.

In contrast to other U.N. stamps, these will be printed in horizontal sheets of 20 instead of the usual 50, which for the first time will provide an opportunity for collectors to obtain two marginal inscriptions on a block of 10 commemoratives.

In addition, Ole Hamann, Chief of the U.N. Postal Administration and an artist who has given decades of service to the world organization, has contributed a painting for the cacheted covers issued regularly to accompany new U.N. issues by the World Federation of United Nations Associations.

The two stamps issued for the New York headquarters are dominated by a magnifying glass that is enlarging a simulated sheet of stamps which bear the text "United Nations Postal Administration 1951-1976". In the right corner is the U.N. seal. Across the bottom is "United Nations." The stamps are in denominations of 13 and 31 cents and are in four colors, with black, yellow and brown predominant. They were designed by Henry Bencsath of the United States and measure 36mm horizontally by 26mm vertically.

A rainbow-colored post horn is the dominant design element of the two commemoratives issued for use in Geneva. Within the coil of the horn is the U.N. seal. Across the top of the five-color stamps is "Nations Uoies" and the denomination. Across the bottom is "Administration Postale des Natioos Unies 1951-1976." The stamps, with measurements ideotical to the New York issues, were designed by Hecter Viola of Argentina. The decominetions are 80 Swiss centimes and 1.10 Swiss francs.

Four marginal inscriptions appear on each sheet of 20 stamps, two at the top and two at the bottom. The sheets for the New York issues are framed in the margins with the U.N. wreath extending from the top marginel inscriptions to the bottom ones. The wreath eppears only at the corners of the sheets for the Geneva issues, to allow for the printing of the Swiss values in the center margins. Informatioo about ecquiring mint stamps, first-day covers and other U.N. material is available from the U.N. Postal Administration, Box 5900, Grand Central Station, New York, N.Y. 10017.

Ole Hamann, a Dane, who has himself designed more than 25 U.N. stamps and other material, as well as a number of WFUNA cachets, has for the 25th anniversary created for WFUNA a painting symbolizing a world of peace. He has encircled a turquoise globe and turquoise continents with an amber U.N. wreath, and set both globe and wreath against a background of brilliant sky and delicate clouds of blue, the U.N. color. The cacheted envelopes, carrying out the theme, are s light blue color.

The WFUNA cachets are 25 costs or five for $1. A cachet with the 13cent stamp is 65 cents, with the 31-cent stamp 85 cents, with the Swiss issues $1.20 and $1.35. Combinations are possible, and there are handling charges.

Inaugural Medals

To the Numismatics Editor: I enjoyed your Aug. 8 news item about Dr. Darrell Crain's collection of official Presidential Inaugural medals, av (tmtil

George Washington University Library in Washington. As you noted, it is probably a unique collection and well worth seeing. Interestingly enough, in this Bicen-tennial and also Presidential-election year, there is on display in Washington a second collection of Presidential Inaugural exonumia, known as the Stone Collection. In addition to all of the official Inaugural medals, this collec-tion also includes the "unofficial" Inangural badges, buttons and medals from George Washington's first Insu-guration through the first McKinley Inauguration (as you know, the custom of issuing official medals began with the second McKinley term in 1901).

The current display is the first public exhibition of the complete Stone collection of Presidential exonumia. For the information of your readers, it may be seen daily from 8:30 A.M. to 8:30 P.M., free of charge, in the exhibit area of "The American Adventure" at the corner of 13th and E Streets, N.W., in Washington, from now until the end of the year. The Republic of Malta announces the appointment of The Franklin Mint to strike ever minted in the United States.

All orders for this historic collection must be postmarked by September 30, 1976

For the first time in history, the Republic of Maltahas entrusted an American mint with the striking of Proof Sets of its historic national coinage. And-appropriately-the Republic of Malta oow iovites American collectors to acquire this superb set of coins.

Malta's proud history ... reflected in its fascinating coinage

Each of these Proof Sets will include nine coins—individually struck to the highest standards of quality by The Franklin Miot, the world's largest private mint. And each coio will bear a distinctive design that reflects the 4.500-year history and prood heritage of this courageous nation.

Thus, a bee and honeycomb is shown oo the 3-mils coin, symbolizing the fact that hoocy was used as currency in ancient Malta -and that many people believe the name "Malta" was derived from the Greek word for honey. The floral altar depicted on the 5-cent coin dates back over 4,000 years. It stood in The Temple of Hagar Qim, one of Malta's most famous prehistoric monuments.

Malta's historic struggle for independence is reflected in the helineted head of Penthesilea, Queen of the Amazons, which appears oo the 2-cent coin. Mythology has it that Penthesilea fought alongside the Trojans in their war with Greece.
The famed Maltese Cross portrayed oo the 2-mils coin was origically worn as an heraldic emblem by the legeodary Knights

The Great Siege Monument, shown oo the 50-cent coin, commemorates the defeat of a Turkish invasion force by vastly outoumbered Maltese defenders in 1565.

The reign of The Knights of Malta during the 18th century is reflected in the portrayal of The Grand Master's Barge-a magnificent ceremonial vessel-on the 10-cent coin.

An earthen lamp stand, typical of those used by most Maltese families before the discovery of electricity, appears do the 5-mils coin.

The George Cross, Great Britain's grateful tribute to the extraordinary bravery of the Maltese people during World War II, is depicted on the 1-cent coin.

And finally, Malta's historic declaration of a Republic in 1974 is reflected in the natioo's exquisite oew Emblem, which is portrayed on the 25-cent coin.

Ordering deadline: September 30, 1976

Proof Sets of these 1976 coins of the Republic of Malta will be issued in strictly limited edition, with an official ordering deadline of September 30, 1976. The totalnumber of such Proof Sets to be minted will be forever limited to the exact number ordered by that date. Moreover, there is a limit of two Proof Sets per order. And each set will be issued in a deluxe presentation case and accompanied by a Certificate of Authenticity.

To acquire the first Proof Sets of Maltese coinage ever minted in the United States, directly from the mint and at the original issue price, please use the order form at right.

The Franklin Mint is the only private mint in the United States currently authorized by governments of other sovereign nations to mint their monetary coins.

lthough many beginning gardeners may not realize it, autumn is a great planting season. Any perennials set out now will have a headstart to develop a strong root system. Top growth should be trimmed bank to a height of an inch or two so all energies will go toward root formation.

Don't forget to water at the time of planting, and whenever there is no measurable rain for 2 week. And winter mulch, after the ground freezes to protect new plantings. -

Of the edging plants, mid-border and taller specimens, three of mychoices will bloom in spring; the rest in the summer months. I have tried to include species mostly in the whites and pastel shades I enjoy, finding their colors easier to combine and their beht tones visible longer into the early everning hours.

Candybuft, Virginia bluebells and leopardsbane will bloom first next spring. Candytuft is a wonderful foot-high plant that is covered with frosty white flowers at rulip time. It offers a neat band of green to edge the border for the rest of the season. Candytuft likes light, well-drained soil and should be severely pruned back after flowering. to prevent spreading and dying out in the middle:

Leonardsbane is a delightful earlyblooming member of the daisy clan. It needs rich soil with a high humus content to preserve summer moisture. Tops die back in July so a large planting of them will leave problem areas needing to be camouflaged by later bloomers.

Virginia bluebells share this tendency to disappear in midsummer, so they must be used judiciously in a small border. But I cannot omit them, for their early blue bells and pink buds offer an ifrestible beginning. They are planted one inch deep in cool, rich soil, in a shady corner of the garden.

Two other perennials thrive in shade and similar soil' conditions, yet unlike bluebells they offer superb foliage to be enjoyed all summer. Astilbe blossoms are feathery plumes in shades from white to pink and red, and boast excellent finely cut foliage. They are June and July bloomers. Hostas, also known as plantain lilles or funkia, bloom at a variety of times. From poioted oval leaves tall scapes of white or lavender flowers are borne.

Along with candytuft and hosts, Fraises des Bois are an excellent choice for the front of the border. Their always neat foliage is supplemented by the charming small white strawberry blossoms beginning in June and continuing all summer, and of course by those delicious French strawberries. They are planted a foot spart and can be divided after a year for a quick increase in stock. I find them trouble-free and prolific, growing sturdily in sun and ordinary soil.

Of the mid-border perennials, columbines bloom first, in June. My favorite is Aquilegia chrysantha, a cler yellow variety which has no special soil preference and shade tolerance.

The common name of Ac life: filipendulina is fernless yarrow. I think the best cultivar is Coronision Gold. It is three feet tall and figures are light mustard yellow, flav clusters carried above handsome gray-green ferny leaves. They will becom three months, June through August, if facted blossoms are removed. Dry, poor soil is preferred, and full sun.

Shasta daisies, which need no description, come in both single and don-ble varieties. Like achilles they also bave long flowering periods, but they prefer rich, moist ground.

In the rear of the border where talier perennials are placed, will come peonies, one of the aristocrats of the garden. All summer long their splendid foliage can offer a background; they are very nearly trouble-free with the possible exception of a rare, easily controlled fungus. Their white, pink or red June flowers are universally loved: Peonies are planted with their red budding eye one inch below the soil level. in very rich earth.

Daylilles can be chosen that bloom as early as peomes, but most flower. in July and August. They do not like rich soil or too much lime. Best of all I love the tall yellow Hyperion, with its sweet fragrance. (One Daylily to be avoided in a garden is the Hemerocallis fulva, the common, rempant roadside variety, which can take over a whole border in only a few years.) Daylily leaves are bountiful and arching and can be: used to cover other nearby perennials that disappear in midsummer, such as leopardsbane.

Summer phlox is another fine, familiar standby. The Symons Jeune strain developed in Great Britain several years ago and now available in this country is one of the most magnificent perennials available to the gardener.

The tall sturdy stems rarely require staking and they come in the most vivid, clear shade of red, pink and purple. (There are no white varieties of Symons-Jeune, hut some excellent choices of regular Phlox are White Admiral or World Peace.) Rich soil and full sun produce large heads of bloom,

A few cultural hints should be heeded with phlox; thin individual plants to three or four stems for best bloom; water from below with a soil soaker to avoid mildew forming oo the leaves; plant two feet spart for good air circulation; and deadhead regularly to avoid ugly magenta seedlings from crowding out choice varieties.

Some Common Probl

In an effort to catch up on the backley of unanswered questions, most of the Home improvement column this week is again being devoted to Questions and Answers. Many of the letters published here ask questions similar to those posed by other readers whose actual letters may not appear here but who will, nevertheless, jind their answers printed below. Readers sending in questions about home repair problems about home repair problems about allowed thems improvement. Fepartment, The New York Times, Times Square, New York, N.Y. 10036. Only those questions of general interest will be enswered here.

Q: During the hot humid summer months there is a musty odor on outfirst floor, which is located over a half-basement and crawl space area. We thought the odor came from old carpeting, but this has been replaced and the odor still persists. We have tried making sure there is ventilation in the crawl space. The basement is damp and we wonder if this is the source of our problem, and if so what can we do about it?-H.G., East Brunswick, N.J.

A: If you remember that musty odors only develop when dampness is present, then it would seem apparent that at least part of your problem is caused by the dampness in the basement. I would recommend trying to cure the dampness problem in the basement and also installing a dehumidifier if it is closed most of the time. Also, make certain the floor in the crawl space is covered with concrete or a layer of polyethylene sheeting, and then increase the number of louvered vents so that you have at least one square foot of opening for every 300 square feet of floor area in the crawl

Q: I live in an apartment house that has a steam heating pipe in the kitchen which runs up through my floor and continues on through the ceiling above. The seel where it passes through the floor has crumbled away and annoying cooking smells seep up from the tenant below. Is there any way to seal this opening? The pipe is about 21/2 inches in diameter and the sleeve around it about 4 inches.-G.F., New York City.

A: As a role there is a metal collar around these pipes to seal off most of the opening—and I assume this is what you mean when you describe a sleeve. This metal coller should leave very little space around the inside where it surrounds the pipe, You cannot put any solid material in this opening since the pipe expands and con-tracts lengthwise. What you can do is slide the collar up, then wedge fiber-glass insulation into the floor opening around the pipe. Then push the collar down soug against the floor. This should seal off most air (and odors). yet still allow the pipe to move lengthwise when it expands.

O: The porcelain enameled fixtures io my bathroom have worn spots where the black metal shows through, I have porceiain epoxy paint which is sold for this purpose, but the paint in the scap dish flakes off. Is there any waterproof paint that will do the job better? Could it be that I didn't get all the soap out of the dish?-LJ.S., Chicago, Ill.

A: The answer to both questions is yes. The only true epoxy paints are those that come in two parts (separate containers) which you mix together just before use. These are much stronger than the so-called one-part epoxy sprays (actually paint that is modified with epoxy). However, very thorough cleaning of the surface is a must with epoxy-and in soap dishes this is especially important.

Q: The crawl space under our house has an average of only 18 inches between the dirt and the floor joists above. I have some vents at each end, but still get a stale smell in the basement area and in the rooms above. I know the dirt has to be sealed and so bought a large roll of polyethylene. but it is nearly impossible to get into the crawl space because of a lack of access, and the low overhead clearance. Is there anything that can be sprayed over the dirt to seal it, or do you have any other suggestion?—P.A.B., White Plains, N.Y.

A: I have never heard of any spray you could use. The dirt in the floor space should be covered even if it means cutting one or two access panels or trap doors in the floors above, or in the foundation wall. If you can get in through one of the vents or if you can enlarge the vent sufficiently, you might try using long on rope through from end tie the rope to the polyer can pull it across, Smith working from each side sticks. It may help to make the end of the plastic be it through (something ! at the bottom of a wine

It wasn't until I realized that conditions in the home are far more hostile to plants than we all think and that being incarcerated in pots and containers might well make a difference, that I turned to the soil as the probable culprit. Our homes are also a far ery from the controlled environment of a greenhouse that is designed to duplicate, as nearly as possible, the great outdoors of a warm, constantly humid climate that most tropical plants thrive in. In our homes there's very little bumidity during the cold winter months - the very time we all want to see our house plants flourishing at their colorful best - and the effects of f gardening in general tries a man's soul; making things grow on the 20th floor turns him into a masochist. This breeds timidity in the terrace gardener's approach to what he can tackle safely. How unfortunate! For the city gardener can grow just about anything his country friend does, only he must be more selective and take some extra precautions.

City Gardeners Can Grow Everything—Almost

. Take hardy bulbs, for instance. What can better lift ooe's spirits after months of gray winter skies than spring bulbs in giorious bloom? Tulips, daffodils and hyacinths as well as a number of smaller bulbs can be grown on terraces. Their requirements are simple: a soil depth of 14 inches (minimum) that drains well, plenty of water, a bit of bonemeal at planting time and a sprinkling of any good general fertilizer in the spring.

Bulbs can be planted during this month and next in raised masoury beds, wooden boxes or out-sized clay

Carla Wallach is author of "Gardening containers. Planters must also have boles at the bottom for proper drainage. Bulbs growing in containers require more frequent watering than do those in the deeper and larger raised beds. Any sunny location is good for bulbs, but a southern exposure obviously means more—sometimes daily watering.

On terraces, I like to plant bulbs a blt deeper than normally for added protection against severe cold weather. Plant tulips, daffodils and hyacinths eight inches deep (that means the hole is eight inches deep) and six inches apart. Sprinkle a bit of bonemeal at the bottom of each hole first and place " the bulb pointed end up, firmly on the

When interplanting, a smaller bulb such as glory of the snow can be planted right on top of a larger bulb 'such' as a daffodil. The stem of the larger bulb simply winds its way around the bulb above it and saves precious plant-

Water deeply after planting bulbs and keep the soil on the relatively moist side until the first deep frosts when the soil freezes. Start watering again in early spring after danger of frost

A deep mulch several inches thick is a most for all terrace plants, especially bulbs and perennials which suffer considerably from soil heaving during winter warm spells. Pine bark mulch, cocoa bean hulls, if they can be found, leaves and salt hay are all good. In addition to the soil mulch, individual boxes and clay containers should be wrapped in burlap, or circle oewspaper around them and tie securely as added winter protection.

Short-stemmed tulips are best for high-rise gardens. because they are wind-resistant. I like the species tuli Kaufmanniana, Fosteriana and Gregii. Cottage tulips with their extra-strong stems are also suitable. Kaufmannia tulips, the first to bloom in early March, are low-growing with flowers resembling waterlilles. Stresa is a striking deep yellow with a wide bright red flame on the outer petals. Shakespeare bas a vivid orange-red base with the rest a blend of salmoo shades. Heart's. Delight is a deep red edged with rosywhite Gaiety bas enormous white flowers with pinkish-red outer petals.

Next to bloom are the Fosteriana tulips, made justly famous by the award-winning Red Emperor. Team it with its white counterpart, Purissima.

Last to flower of the species are the Gregii tulips which bear large flowers and bave beautifully motifed leaves as well. They vary in height from eight-inch Red Riding Hood to 18-inch Margaret Herbst.

The May flowering Cottage tulips are tailer with egg-shaped flowers, satinsmooth petals and rich colors. There are so many varieties.

Have daffodils come a long way! There are varieties with white, all shades of yellow, pink, single, dooble, yellow trumpets, bi-color or reversed bl-color, large or small cupped in solid colors or vividly contrasting. Many have delightful fragrance as a bonus. They boggle the mind, but none is more spectacular than that classic old-timer, King Alfred, whose golden - yellow flowers often measure four inches across. For its equal in white, there's Mount Hood.

I admit I'm partial to fragrant daffodils. A whiff of perfume in the air adds an extra dimension to the garden, most especially on a terrace where one is close enough to the flowers to enjoy their perfume. The group called Poetaz Narcissi has outstanding fragrant vari-

Speaking of fragrance, can anything beat hyacinths? They tolerate semishade. After a heavy rain, the large flower heads may keel over. For extra support, the flowers can be staked with tiny bamboo stakes, no higher than the stem or oversized woodeo labels. Of the several bulb sizes available for hyacinths, the bedding size is best because the plants can withstand rainy and windy weather better.

No spring garden is complete without some of the minor bulbs, minor in size perhaps but most certainly not in charm. They last for many years, multiply with abandon and are equally effective used alone, in combination with tulips or daffodils, popping out of a groundcover such as ivy or at the base of deciduous trees. You know you've scen the last of winter's bite when you spot your very first snowdrop (Galanthus) or crocus. Crocuses come in white, yellow, blue, purple and many combined colors, so choose a barmonizing shade when teaming them with other

A popular mioor bulb is the grapebyacinth (Muscari). Interplant the bloe variety with yellow or white tulips, or use as an edging for yellow daffodils. The white Muscari is striking teamed with blue or purple byacinths or with any of the multi-colored bulbs. There's also glory-of-the-snow (Chionodoxa) with star-shaped dainty flowers, excellent mixed with tulips. The variety Gigantea is light blue with a white center, while Luciliae Rosea is a soft rose.

To bave bardy bulbs bloom year after year, the foliage must be allowed to mature, yellow and fall off by itself. To hide this stage of nature's unsightly bousekeeping, annuals can be planted in front of the bulbs.

To be successful with this long-lived bulb planting, a large rectangular bed or planter with sufficient space in width is important to make room for both bulbs and annuals. Most of the bulbs will carry on for several years with the proper planting space but hyacinths are best replaced every year or

When there is no space for this kind of planting, then the hardy bulbs must he dug up and discarded after planting to make room for the annuals. New bulbs will have to be purchased in the fall. This is a modest outlay for the rewards io return.

While there are many, many varieties of hardy bulbs, those listed are triedand-true varieties, easily available at gardeo centers or from reputable mailorder houses. Those who offer bulbs through catalogues include: P. de Jager & Sons, South Hamilton, Mass. 01982; John Scheepers, 63 Wall Street, New York, N.Y. 10005 and Van Bourgondien Brothers, Babylon, N. Y. 11702.

A New Look At Bulbs

tastic May-blooming parrot tulips (ever though its stems are limber) is a blend of rose, salmon and creamy pink Happily it is still available. Newer varieties have sturdier, upright stems, but Fantasy is great for bouquets. Other favorites are Black Parrot, a nearly black red; Blue Parrot, a rich mauve with green markings; fragrant Orange Favorite, almost red with green markings; and White Parrot. These bugs heavy flowers with deeply cut, and curled or twisted segments are most effectively displayed against contrasting backgrounds. They develop slowly and are intriguing until the petals drop.

Fringed tulips are sometimes listed as parrots but they are quite different The fine lacinations of these gobletshaped flowers are very delicate-like a narrow lace edging. In the varety Blue Heron, the violet petals pale to almost white at the fringed edge. a two-toned effect. And Swan Wings' pure white set off by black anthers

Variations among daffodils are senumerous that I can bit only an occasional high spot. Multiflowered daffor dils, for one, range all the way from the beloved (and still available) old single jonquil with three to five fragram golden flowers per stem to late-bloom ing Silver Chimes with as many a eight exquisite white blossoms on eac strong stem. Other sweet-scenter multiflowered and rather late-blooming varieties are white-and-cream Cheerful oess, Yellow Cheerfulness, Geranium. white with orange cups, and Suzy, yes low with small, oearly red cups.

Interesting new fully double varieties with large, long-lasting flowers are Double Delight, with a pointed white perianth around a fluffy center of intermingled white and canary-yellow petals; Coral Strand, with several rows of white petals, interspersed and centered with ruffled coral petals; and a showy new one called Enterprise, with yellow and bright orange petals. (It was bred from that famous early-blooming daffodil standby, Fortune.)

Bleolor daffodils, white with red or yellow crowns—or yellow with red or orange crowns — are familiar, but Sumptuous, with a milk-white perianth and yellow bell-shaped crown that takes on buff tones as it ages, is new and showy in the garden. Reverse bicolors with lemon-colored perianths, and crowns that change to white, inside and at their bases, as the flowers ma-ture, are still unusual. Spellbinder-ix a big trumpet in this pattern, Binkie; a medium-sized flower but a beavy bloomer, is another reverse bicolor than is nearly at the top of my list of favore ite daffodils. So is Pipit, a jonquil hybrid with three flowers per stem.

Wood hyacinths (Scilla campanulata) hyacinths have faded, are refreshingly different in effect. They are taller, with longer stems, and the florets are not quite so closely set. Group them in a semi-sunny border or plant them informally under trees or shrubs. White Queen, and Blue Excelsior are showy colors. The lavender-pink of Rose Queen is a very delicate shade. All three are available.

Everyooe who sees the large clump of summer snowflakes (Leucojum aesti-vum) blooming in my early May garden exclaims in delight et the mass of 18inch stems hung with many greentipped white bells. They are much showier than those of the spring snowflake (L. vernum) and revel in a rich moist soil in sun.

he has to be content with a sad story to recount to anyone who will listen. in the diagramed deal from the Regional Mixed Pair Championship in McAfee, N. J., last mooth, the spot cards appear to be insignificant. But the club spots turned out to be deceptive. Most of the partnerships arrived at a club slam, and the question was whether 13 tricks could be made.

One world-famous New York expert received the lead of the diamond queen and thought he would have oo trouble making all the tricks. His plan was to take five top tricks in the side suits and cross-ruff the remainder. He therefore won the diamond ace, cashed two spade winners and ruffed a diamond. When he cashed his top hearts and led a heart he seemed in control and would have been if West had discarded.

But West ruffed with the six, forcing the queen from dummy. A diamond was ruffed and another heart was led. Again West ruffed, and South overruffed with the club ace. The position was now this:

WEST	EAST

Now the spots proved fatal to the expert in the South seat since the lead was unfortunately in the dummy. Whether he led a spater or a diamond, East could discard the heart queen and be in a position to overruff dummy's club five with the eight. If dummy bad begun with ace queen an and West with seven five there would have been

The winners of the event were Henry and Kitty Bethe of New York who reached seveo clubs as shown in the diagram. South's bidding indicated six hearts and five clubs and his bid of five spades indicated a willingness to cooperate in a slam venture although he had no idea what final contract

By ROBERT LINDSEY

LOS ANGELES When the corporate LOS ANGELES—When the corporate chieftains who make their living in the high-stakes world of international arms sales gathered in England two weeks ago to show off their newest flying machines, there was a familiar figure. Smiling, shaking hands with old friends, comfortable in the presence of the generals, admirals, shelts, and ministers that he knew from dozens of countries, Thomas V. Jones, chairman of the Northop Corporation, was on easy ground at the Farnborough Air Show.

a major American corporation has ever been as discredited in the public eye as Mr. Jones, a result of the wave of scandals that engulied him and Northrop starting with the Watergate investigation, Other executives caught up in the scandals—Boh R. Dorsey of Guiff-Oil, Daniel Haughton and A. Carl Rotchian of Lockheed, Harry Helizer of Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing—are gone from the scene.

But Mr. Jones, who was connected to more types of alleged misdeeds than any of these men, is still in charge at Northrop. He was at Farnborough not in disgrace, but as the most powerthe lucrative world arms market.

ration was chosen over Northrop to build 650 lightweight fighters for the United States Air Force. Pentagon offisell hundreds, perhaps thousands more of its new single-engine jet, the F-16, to America's foreign allies.

But at Farnborbugh, almost as if he had won—not lost—the race, Mr. Jones was offering international arms buyers a promising new fighter in direct com-petition with the F-16. And many in-dustry experts were saying that per-haps Northrop, which is in partnership with McDonnell-Douglas Corporation on the craft, will end up selling more of its planes shroad than will General

Then came a flood of revelations about Northrop's overseas activities, a Securities and Exchange Commission investigation indicating the company maintained a $30 million fund for questionable overseas payments, and admissions of $450,000 in bribes to Saudi Arabian generals.

If Northrop can sell that plane, it could mean hundreds of millions of dollars over the next 20 years for a com-pany whose reing Mr. Jones has desper-ately, and successfully, clung to during the past four years.

The sage of Tom Jones presents a

There were questions raised about bribes elsewhere, including unproved charges involving Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands, and about Northrop's employment of a former Congressional that propher to jobby specessfully for staff member to lobby successful Federal funding of its F-5 fighter.

There were other, lesser scandals, disclosures that Northrop billed the Government for millions of dollars it spent lobbying on its own behalf, and revelations that it had wined and dised scores of Pentagon generals, admirals and infimential civilians at a Maryland hunting lodge.

Why is Mr. Jones still running Northrop?

Company directors, who chastised him and briefly removed him as chairman last year before restoring this title in February, say it is because he has cleaned up the company and ended the transfer was a mind on and "I think Northrop has had the best record in the aerospace industry, and I think this is due to Mr. Jones," said Alan Bensauli, an aerospace stock analyst for Drezel Burnham & Company.

Eresge's sales this year are running neck and neck with J.C. Penney Company, which has been the No. 2 retailer. At the end of six months of the fiscal year, July 28, Kresge was $100 million ahead of Penney's in sales, and its profits of $101 million were 70 percent better than Penney's.

At this moment, only Sears, Roebuck & Company is outselling Kresge but Kresge officials only smile vaguely when asked about tomorrow's target. # Commodity Speculators Anticipate a Dip in the Pool

By H. J. MAIDENBERG

Commodity speculators, the oldest breed of gamblers in the marketplace, now have another game to play: the commodity pool. This idea is based on the ordinary mutual fund that is offered investors in the securities market.

As of mid-August, 533 commodity pools were registered with the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, and 456 of them were in operation.

Most of the pools are small-235 have a net worth of less than $50,000— and most are poorly mansged. They generally charge participants up to 25 percent of any profit plus management fees of as much as 6 percent a year of the amount invested or one-half of But all this may change swiftly if the C.F.T.C. gives the go-ahead to proposals by the big Wall Street brokerage houses to offer commodity pool participation to their clients. Approval by the Federal agency is considered likely by early 1977.

"Actually, any big Wall Street house could offer commodity pools today," George D. F. Lamborn, executive vice president and director of commodities at Shearson Hayden Stone Inc., observed the other day. served the other day.

"But under the present rules," Mr. Lamborn declared, "any big, solvent and well-managed house would be out of business overnight if it offered membership in commodity pools. It's the old aggregation factor."

Under the so-called aggregation factor, imposed years ago by the Government to prevent the cornering of any commodity market, every speculator can only hold only so many futures contracts in a given commodity. In the case of wheat, corn or soybeans, for example, the limit was raised. this month to 3 million bushels from 2 million bushels from eign markets" in New York, where coffee, sugar, Cocoa and various metals are traded the librars ere set by the sarticular exchange, not by the 17-month-old Commodity Futures Trading Commission.

Commission.

What all this means to operators of commodity pools—today is that the diversification their clients are seeking is hobbled. As Mr. Lamborn's aide, Nelson Chang, explained:

"The great attraction and potential profits inherent in pools is that mem-bers can participate in a number of markets. Further, they are spared margin calls and forced self-outs. by brokers.

"Not only do houses such as Shearson Hayden Stone have the internstional expertise to manage pools but also we are in a financial position to mix in commodity options, straight futures and spot or cash goods as well as take advantage of arbitrage situations."

Basically these wide-ranging activ-ities of commodity brokerage houses would be sharply curbed by the present aggregation factors because, in effect, the speculative limits on each pool are the same as for one individual

Legitimate trade interests (concerns involved in the handling of any actual commodity) may buy or sell futures contracts without limit if such trading is for the purpose of hedging their goods against adverse price fluctua-

But speculators in commodity futures are something else again. They can risk their money in several ways. Most are either long or short on futures con-tracts, which are promises to buy or sell a fixed amount of a raw material by a specified date.

Speculators in futures usually sealtheir promise with a token cash pay-ment, or margin, that may range from 5 to 15 percent of the value of the goods involved at the time the deal is made. Because a brokerage house must square its accounts with the exchange upon which the trade was made for-its client at the end of every business-day, these margins are closely watched. Should the value of the contract decline, the client is asked to put up more that speculators tend to quickly convert paper profits into more futures contracts, thus building a thinly mar-gined pyramid of holdings.

The fear of a margin call at any time of day has encouraged speculators to try commodity options. These are, in effect, a warrant or right to buy a futures contract at a set price during a certain period.

The chief advantage of commodity options is the fact that the speculator. knows exactly how moch his maximum loss would be.

But there are drawbacks to commodity options. At present they may not be offered by licensed brokerage houses on commodities traded in this country. So an investor has to ask his broker to buy them through London offices on commodities traded in Lon-

Given this bizarre situation, hordes of fly-by-night options brokers have been able to gull the public out of tens. of millions of dollars by selling them options on the Loodon cocoa, sugar, coffee, copper, silver and gold markets. These, dishonest options dealers, who tions dealers is being met by the Com-modity Futures Trading Commission — It is putting the finishing touches on new rules to allow United States commodity exchanges to handle options under supervised conditions.

The oldest breed of gamblers—combodity speculators—have a new game to play based on the idea of mutual

Then there are the commodity pools. Actually, pools have been around a long time; usually on an informal basis among triends and occasionally as part of a scheme to try to corner a commodity.

In a normal pool, people buy "shares" to join. Their money is then used by the pool to trade in futures contracts or options. The manager or head of each pool must register with the C.F.T.C. if there are more than 10 members and the group's net worth is more than $50,000. Last month there were 315 registered

Last month there were 315 registered pool operators who ran the 533 liceosed pools. Of these pools, two had no net worth, 235 had less than $50,000, and only 26 had a net worth of more than $250,000.

These people know first-hand that our economy is not working the way it should be.

They know the terriole personal costs of unemployment—the fear, the insecurity. The bitter trustration of wanting to work and yet not being able to provide for their families.

But they're not the only ones who pay for the failure of our economic system to provide enough productive jobs. All of us pay the costs of welfare and crime and broken families. And we all lose the productive talents of millions of people who could be performing socially useful work.

High levels of unemployment seem to have become a part of business as usual, ever in good times. The giant corporations that control our economy don't seem to mind having lots of people com-omy don't seem to mind having lots of people com-peting for a few jobs. And some of our elected peting for a few jobs. And some or our steeled leaders actually tell us that the only way to keep the lid on inflation in our economy is to keep several million people unemployed.

More and more Americans are gatting tired of paying the costs of business as usual. We under-sland that we're not going to have an economy that puts pecale to work until we make some basic changes in the way our economy works.

We're producing TV and radio ads to talk back to line corporate advertising we've been getting lately. And we've created educational materials like our free booklet, A Working Economy for Americans—for use in schools, umon locals, church and community groups, Start a campaign in your community. refused, apparently feeling that the campaign might be controversial enough to require the networks to give equal time to apposing views.

The Peoples Business Commission, furmed in 11-11 to resist commercializa-tion of the Bicentennial, now is promoting what it calls the "second American revolution." Jeremy Rifkin, a 31-yearold former antiwar activist who heads the commission, says it is conducting "an anticapitalist campaign two or three steps removed from New Deal economics." It promotes such ideas as public ownership of banks, worker management of companies and consumer cooperatives.

The commission, with a $300,000 annual budget, says its money comes from some 22,000 members, mainly students and people in their 20's: "out-of community colleges and trade schools." It sends printed material to 5.000 schools and other organizations. Among other projects, the commission has produced five paperback hooks. A sixth, due to be published in January, is titled "Economic Democracy: An Alternative to the Present Economic Sys-

The Public Media Center is a nonprofit ad agency that grew out of the antiwar movement hut is unrelated to the Peoples Business Commission. The with offices in San Francisco and Washington, works for liberal groups including the United Farm Workers, Consumer Federation of America and Energy Action Committee.

Unlike the commission, the Public Media Center does not mind if net-works carry the Advertising Council's messages. In fact, the center wants stations to air more public service ads than they do. (The center, of course, wants its share of such air time.)

Roger Hickey, 30, the Public Media Center's Washington director, com-plains that the Advertising Council presents a "pro-corporate point of view." The center's own announcements, to be offered starting this week to all stations carrying the Ad Council's spots, will promote a booklet that Mr. Hickey says will discuss "the influence of monopoly power on prices and con-

Several years ago Mobil Oil decided to "participate in the marketplace of ideas," said Herbert Schmertz, the company's vice president of public affairs. "Too often corporations complain about the results but don't participate

Mobil has mounted one of the most mhitious corporate ad campaigns. Of the $13 million it spends annually, $5 million pays for what Mr. Schmertz calls "issue advertising" in newpapers. On various issues, Mobil presents its views, ranging from a need for "balance between the private sector and government" to a lack of need for breaking up big oil companies.

The company spends $4 million on commercial television, with institutional-type ads. It gives $3 million in public TV grants, for which Mobil gets credit before and offer such program Mobil before and after each program. Mobil spends the remaining $1 million on a variety of projects.

The Exxon Corporation and other oil companies are also buying newspaper ads opposing a breakup of oil companies. Exxon contributed $200,000 toward restoring the Titanic Memorial Lighthouse at New York's South Street Seaport. The Gulf Oil Corporation last year made its first national public TV grant, of $3.7 million. Xerox, long identified with quality programming on public and commercial TV, complains that too many companies are getting into the act. "More companies have come into the field, and it's more and more difficult for us to find quality productions," said Walter Olesen, Xerox advertising man-

Corporate television grants are stirring the A.F.L. C.I.O.'s ire. Al Zack, the labor federation's public relations director, says it is "highly suspicious that backdoor Treasury money" is fipancing public TV in the form of grants that companies deduct in computing their Federal income taxes.

l. is unclear whether the media blitz is making any real difference in public and political attitudes toward corporations and the free enterprise system The Advertising Council's Mr. St. Leger said, "Most businessmen think this campaign is a good idea." Asked whether Mobil's campaign is paying off, Mr. Schmertz answered: "I have no idea. Probably there's a wider recognition of Mobil." At the A.F.L.-C.I.O., Mr. Zack asserted: "Corporations are wasting their dough. The public can

A specialized investment technique

for the investor.

"Special Situation" investing is a technique that has long been used by the professional investor. It is an approach that every substantial investor should carefully consider. When handled by knowledgeable professionals who never lose sight of the importance of basic values, it could materially reduce the dangers of market risk and speculation.

David J. Greene and Co., is recognized within the financial community as one of the few firms doing concentrated work in the special situation area, and providing this service to the sophisticated investor.

Our investment philosophy is simple: we uncover special situations where, in our opinion, the risk is limited and where the opportunity for substantial long term gains exist.

In our view, "special situations" take three forms: Situations where fundamental corporate changes are a probability, or significant earnings tumarounds are possible, or where an undervalued asset position exists. Thus, special situation investing depends more on the basic values and potential we see in a security at a given point in time than the action of the market in

The key to David J. Greene and Co.'s acknowledged expertise in the "special situation" area is the quality and extent of our research activities. We originate our own investment ideas and have an extensive internal research capability. All of our research activities are concentrated on identifying and following special situations and our Investment Advisory clients get the direct benefit of this intensive Investigation through the resulting recommendations.

In addition, we take special pride in the quality of our service to clients. To maintain these standards each account manager services only a limited number of clients and all investment decisions are made by the firm's investment committee.

At David J. Greene and Co., a client is never part of a pooled fund, always an individual whose fiscal wellbeing is of vital concern to a partner.

If you are an investor with a portfolio of $100,000 or more, you should know about this sophisticated investment technique. Without obligation, we would be pleased to meet with you to review our service and fee structure and explain the special situation approach

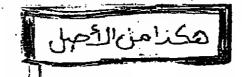

Telephone our Investment Advisory Department at (212) 344-5180 for a personal meeting, or write for our booklet which further explains the David J. Greene "Special Situation" approach, in order, General Haryono said, "we have to increase oil exploration and production, and secondly we have to guarantee a nor-mal distribution system for Indonesia."

Pertamina's New Boss Picks Up The Pieces

Despite the long-term-goal of encouraging production, however, in the last six months. Pertamina has squezzed new agreements out of the protesting international oil companies that will give Indonesia more than $600 million a year in additional oil revenues. A large part of this will come from the Caltex Petroleum Cor-poration (a subsidiary of the Standard Oil Company of California and Texaco Inc.). Caltex produces 850,000 of Indonesia's 1.5 million barrels daily production.

Indonesia demanded an extra dollar a barrel on the oil that Caltex pumps and got it but only after issuing what was widely described as an ultimatum. As a concession. Caltex was given back 80 cents of that dollar on its sales to the East Coast of the United States, where transport costs are higher. Indonesia's share of the $12.80 price of a barrel of oil rose to $11, and Caltex's estimated profit was trimmed to $1.37 a barrel. Having dealt with Caltex. the Indonesians then turned to the newer companies engaged in production-sharing offered was distinctly less attractive than in the past. The Indonesians said the international companies would be divided into two groups-those with more than seven vears' oil reserves and those with less. Those with more than seven years' reserves would be allowed to recover their capital costs by depreciating over 14 years according to the double declining-balance method, while those with less than seven years' reserves would be allowed to depreciate over seven years. All the oil money would be split 85/15, with Indonesia taking the lion's share. No capital costs would be currently recoverable from 1976 and over a five-year to 10-year period on a straight-line system for expenses in-curred before 1976.

they struck a bonanza. Nevertheless last month most of the oil companies signed. General Haryono said that the big seven (including Total, Japex, Ispco, Petromer, Trend and Assenera) had signed and that the smaller ones were about to. However, oilmen point out that exploration has been curtailed with only three new rigs now exploring off Indonesia. In addition, service companies are pulling General Haryono shrugged off a suggestion that the companies were going slow in Indonesia because of the tough negotiations. "All over the world," he said, "oil companies are cutting back on explora-

He conceded that Indonesia might have to offer special inducements to persuade the international companies to keep up a high level of exploration.

"I am fully aware of the fact that Indonesia's development comes from oil," he said. "Having that in mind, we must produce a climate that would allow investmeot in oll to continue end one that must he attractive to both parties-Indonesia and the oil companies.

am going to start discussions with the oil companies in early October, and we shall see whether there is the possibility of more leniency in 1977. If it is still within the framework of the Government proposals, we can talk about it." He said was possible that special incentives might be given to get exploration started.

General Haryono and Pertamina are being tugged in conflicting directions. Indonesia urgently needs money from oil immediately. In spite of "the biggest corporate rescue operation in the world," mounted to save both Pertamina and the nation from bankruptcy, all that has been performed is a bridging operation.

Even with oil earnings of nearly $6 billion this year-actually $3.4 billion of net oil earnings because Indonesia has to imoil earnings because Indonesia has to import heavy-duty oil from the Middle East—and annual official aid of more than $1 billion, the country's finances are desperately tight. By 1979, the World Bank has calculated, Indonesia will he paying 19 percent of its total export earnings in debt repayments, a dangerously high percent-

Yet the penalties of squeezing the inter-national oil companies too hard are also obvious. By the mid-1980's, experts predict. the existing oil wells will start to dry up as Indonesia's oilfields tend to shrink. But by the mid-1980's Indonesia will still have to pay some of the hills from the Pertamina debacle, and in the mid-1980's the development struggle is expected to still be upper-

Indonesia is a poor country-not poor in the Bangladesh sense but poor enough to bave a per capita income of only about $150 a year and per capita oil consumption of about six-tenths of a barrel a year (compared with 30 barrels a year in the United States). The dream of going from rags to riches remains a dream. Indonesia has great natural riches, but its population may oil, Indonesia's lifeblood, supplied more than 70 percent of export earnings last year and nearly 60 percent of the Government's tax revenues.

General Hayrono cannot grapple fully with the future until he has cleared up the mess he inherited at Pertamina. Its dehts of $10,6 billion have been reduced to just over $6 billion. Of that, 40 percent reflects a series of disastrous long-term charters of oil tankers, which General Haryono is trying to renogotiate. At the mention of oil tankers his brow furrowed

Pertamina apparently is refusing to make the monthly payments on some of the deals because they were not approved by the full supervisory board as Pertamina's regulations required. Tankers operated by the Burmah Oil Company, with which Pertamina has just entered into a 20-year agreement to carry liquified natural gas to Japan, are believed to be affected by the withholding of payments.

General Haryono refused to discuss this situation beyond saying, "If I am correct, there are indications of fraud in some of

with Specific Stock and Bond Recommendations

Confounding bulls and bears alike, the market has trended neither upward nor downward for more than half a year. History suggests, however, that such a horizontal pattern can't persist very long. At some point, the averages will break out of their narrow ranges. Chances are, the subsequent market move will be quite sharp.

That major trend, we believe, will be pointing downward. Billions of dollars of stocks have obviously been bought in anticipation of an "inevitable" election-year boom. But as recent retail figures suggest, the business recovery may actually be faltering. And with the election only weeks away, time is rapidly running out for politicians to create the much-expected boom.

Bear Market Strategy

But a bear market is nothing to fear, as long as you don't "freeze" and ride it all the way down. Indeed, to many innovative investors, sharp market movements-down as well as up-represent unusual capital-building opportunities.

Moreover, even in a bear market, some selected stock groups and non-equity issues will probably push ahead. Very often, in fact, the more the general market declines, the more these contra-cyclical issues appreciate.

In a special flow-of-funds report titled "The Unwinding", The Holt-Investment Advisory explains why we believe the coming decline will be supersteep. And it presents a comprehensive Investment Strategy and specific securities to help open-minded investors protect and build capital in such a bear market.

We invite you to read this eye-opening flow-of-funds study. You may just agree that our analysis makes good sense. And if we are right, the Investment Strategy we offer can very well make or save a lot of money for you. You will receive this provocative report, plus our Bear Market Strategy, as a bonus with a 2-month Introductory Subscription to The Holt Investment Advisory (a $24 value). "We've got a manual on almost everything we do except merchandlsing knowledge," says Robert E. Brewer, vice president and treasurer. "But we know that by the time our store managers, who ultimately order 95 percent of all merchandise, arrive at a reasonable level of expertise they make few mistakes. Even with manuals, retailing has to be an on-the-job training process but mistakes can be minimized with a mormal 5½ years experience each manager gets before he assumes his

The stores themselves may be important, too. A typical K mart may have 75,000 square feet, all on one floor, generally standing by itself in a high traffic suburban location, and not part of somebody else's shopping center. There's plenty of parking and the inside is bright and clean.

"We have a standard floor plan for a store," said Mr. Brewer. "The cosmetic department is always in the same spot. We want the K marts all to look alike—but of course new ideas are gradually worked into the plan by our store planning department."

"The store modules are invicinte. It is all a cut-and-dried process," Mr. Tenings, the vice chairman, adds.

There's something else about a K mart, a down-home feeling, an informality, e come-as-you-are atmosphere. Nobody dresses up to go to a K mart. Indeed, women in curiers, hefty men in shorts, and crying children are es much a part of the typical K mart as the standard floor plan. The K mart is primarily a seller of national brand merchandise—Kodak, Polaroid, Zenith and RCA are Kresge suppliers—and only about 25 percent of the sales are in its own or private brands. . .

Kresge's success in discounting is even more impressive when matched against its tompetition, Chains such as Arlan's Department Stores, Giant Stores and S. Even giant Sears Roebuck seems to be having its problems. Its $14 billion e year sales rate, while about double Kresge's, is climbing at a much slower rate. Sears recently created a chair-man's office consisting of its four top executives, a move apparently aimed at correcting merchandising weak-

Kresge has had some advantages. Most general merchandisers pay out 40 percent of their profits in dividends. Kresge's dividends have everaged less than 20 percent of profits, and more than 40 percent of its earnings have been ploughed back into the business. A dozen years ago the Kresge family's foundation was the dominant-stock bolder, and not likely to complain if the profits were poured into the K mart more; Philadelphia, and Boston.

Kreage also is particularly strong around Detroit, its home, and the present strike at the Ford Motor Company won't help business if it drags out. But Ervin E. Wardlew, the president, says, "We hope to increase our business during Christmas and the final quarter by 17 to 18 percent."

The company was founded in 1899 when Sebastian S. Kreege, a traveling salesman, opened the first Kresge variety store in Detroit. The sign he posted over that tiny store read: "Nothing Over 10 Cents." By the time Mr. Kreege died on Oct. 18, 1966, at. 38, the company had grown to 915 stores with sales of over $1 billion a year.

long term debt is anticipated," says Mr. Teninga, "because our cash flow will be adequate to fund our expansion program for the balance of the decade."

The company moved into e new, starkly modern building in Troy, a rich Detroit suburb, four years ago, but the chain's top executives like to call thepselves "fruga!" or "tight fisted" when it comes to spending money.

One executive says the company is the largest in the country without its own airplane. "If e corporate jet costs, $1.2 million it could be equivalent to cutting earnings by one cent a share,"

Mr. Wardiow, the president, a tough-sounding former store manager who began as a part-time Kresge stockboy while in high achool in his hometown of Filimere, Mo., audits executives' telephone bills.

"You would be amazed how many people in our building here had two telephones when they only needed one, How can you talk on two phones at once? We saved some money by changing that," he says with giee.

Kresge officials admit there is new competition coming from regional discounters who have a good feeling for their own local communities. But the chain doesn't seem concerned about them, or about any danger from its almost complete reliance on its K mart

While most of the K marts are large—71,000 to 93,000 square feet is common in the major stores—a square-foot stores was launched two years ago. These can be opened in towns with a population as low as 6,000, Mr. Dewar said, and 140 will be operating by the end of this year.

The Kresge managers seem more interested in continuing their successful pattern than changing.

"We listen constructively," says Mr. Dewar, the chairman, "We became successful beceuse we were hard-working, had little fat and it's my determination that we stay that way," says Mr. Teninga. "We're like a family and we talk like members of a family. I don't see the interplay, the jealousies that crop up elsewhere. Maybe it's because we all have a tremendous thrill in the mag-S. Kresge

Possibly the most sensible way to invest in Tax-Free Municipals.

As an investment, The Fidelity Municipal Bond Fund simply makes good sense.

Beyond the obvious advantage of income exempt from Federal Income Tax, The Fund offers significant benefits not previously found in similar investments.

FIDELITY

No sales charge or redemption tee.

Fidelity Municipal Bond Fund is the first continuously managed, open-end municipal bond fund without any sales charge or redemp-

Avoiding such costs can represent substantial savings (up to 4-3/4% of the amount you invest when compared with municipal bond investments that include a sales charge).

All of your investment dollars work from the outset to obtain as high a level of tax-free income as is consistent with preservation of capital.

Daily tax-free income.

Income is credited to your account daily. Should you wish current income, you may elect to receive your earnings in cash on a monthly basis.

Tax-free compounding.

Those seeking to build the value of their investment may choose our free monthly re-investment privilege. This attractive option results in an automatic compounding of earnings tax-free.

Daily liquidity.

The Fund will redeem shares, free of charge, at net asset value whenever you desire. This feature protects you from the uncertainties of supply and demand in secondary markets. It provides an important degree of investment flexibility.

Diversification of investment dollars

Through our carefully chosen portfolio of municipal bonds, the potential risk of any single investment is greatly reduced. Our initial investment requirement of $5,000 provides the same diversification otherwise available only to those making a direct investment of several hundred thousand dollars.

Full-time investment management.

The Fund is under continuous management, another key benefit. Our supervision, both in the purchase and continuing review of the Fund's portfolio, is designed to preserve capital and help increase your rate of income.

Note: As our portfolio will change to reflect changing market conditions and new investment opportunities, we do not advertise fixed rates of return.

We suggest you learn more soon and invite your inquiry by mail. Better yet, call now. Our knowledgeable staff will gladly assist you and answer any questions.

From the beginning "Executive Suite" had been seen by everyone concerned as a nighttime soap opera in the "Mary Hartman" mold. That is to say, it not only would emphasize matters of particularly female interest but also would do so with a large interacting cast of characters, unchanging from week to week rather than with a couple of leads dealing with continually changing supporting players.

"For one thing we thought it was dated," he went on. "It was five years ago, not now. Our basic concept was to bring it up to date. The only trouble was that, if we had gone back and started from the beginning, we couldn't have gotten it on this season. So we decided to go with what we had and swing the series around as we went

Not that "Executive Suite" is all that realistic about the world of business in its first couple of episodes, which were screened last week at CBS headquarters in New York.

As in other series, no one ever men-tions money—at least oot as salary or The characters personal relationships, needless to say, are as tangled as e plate of pasta. The sec of the corporation's president is trying to renew a romance with the daughter of a plant dent for whom she works. . . .

The public relations man a cool young cat who wants to put the corporation in touch with the younger generation, turns out not to be married to the voluptuous woman he is introducing as his wife.

She is being blackmailed, it appears, by a man for whom she made the mistake of agreeing to appear in an X-rated movie five years before. The wife of the crusty executive vice president, a man whose business philosophy is somewhat to the right of Scrooge's, finds out about this indiscretion and plans to use it to destroy both the P.R. man and the socially responsible president of the corporation. And so on.

If "Executive Suite" can't hold close to a 35 audience share and a 20 raining. it's unlikely to be around long, even though CBS has invested more than $750,000 in its development.

It's the old story of product acceptance. And that, after all, is what busicompanies. In that winnowing process, some people were dropped from consideration because they lacked experience of the field of another. "Some of them, were cut without even being contacted," he said. "Of the 30 we contacted, many were interested. Some of them we met in Detroit, some in variation spots, or as they were passing through. spots or as they were passing through New York, or in Europe.

"Most don't want their own compa-nies to know of the contacts. But ooe man went right to his boss and said he had been contacted."

Heidrick makes no secret about ap-proaching an individual it thinks might proaching an individual it thinks might be qualified. "We rarely send letters. When we want a person we go right at them and say: 'Hey, would yoo be' interested in considering such and such a type of job?' We don't tell them the company until we are sure they have the qualifications and are really inter-ested."

"We don't go around hiding behind potted palms in airport lobbies." Heidrick suggested three people to Mr. Schmücker, the VW head, and hisexecutive committee in Germany but did oot rank them or in any way or list any fevorite. "They were all quali-fied," Mr. Roche said. "We always try," and give the client a choice."

One of the key things for this job ence beginning a new ventureone with start-up experience as ope posed to maintenance experience.

Lordstown was in his favor."

Mr. McLernon had a large hand in turning Chevrolets Lordstown, Ohio, plant loto the world's fastest auto assembly line, building Vega cars at the rate of 100 an hour. However, it may have been just this experience six years ago as well as subsequent events, that tipped Mr. McLernon's decision to join VW. When he took over Chevrolet manufacturing, four car assembly plants were part of Chevrolet, including Lordstown. But in the early 1970's . they were transferred to the General Motors assembly division, and out of Mr. McLernon's control reducing his power and potential for promotion within G.M.

His hiring by Volkswagen could create one little future problem of who is boss. Mr. McLernon heads a manufacturing subsidiary of German Volkswagen. Distinct from his operation is VWe already existing sales organiza-tion here. Volkswagen of America. This unit is headed by an old VW hand, Stuart Perkins. He bulk VW sales to 500,000 tars a year in America, and then saw his business halved under an onslaught of high quality and lower priced import cars from Japan. There have apparently been hints that eventually the two organizations will be combined under the new boy from G.M., Mr. Perkins, who has been meeting with Mr. McLernon in Detroit, says this combination of our European ap-proaches and his background can lead to tremendous blending of the best of both sides of the Allastic-Dealers have already called me stid are very ingif on this. His reputation is fantastic." But the slim, English-born VW executive also says: "There aren't any plans." to put the two firms together, but we will he working together and I think we will make a good team."

A top priority for the new head Volkswagen manufacturing in America is the job of huilding a staff, "At my old Brand X we had a staff in Detroit and plants spread out all over. Right now I have to set up a staff and a location."

"I have zero employees oow," he said. The oext spots to be filled will be a dozen or so executives who will work directly under him-financial and purchasing bosses, for example.

Mr. Roche of Heidrick & Struggles won't say how much his firm will collect for the wooing of Mr. McLernon. But those in the headhunting industry say the normal retainer an employer pays is equal to 30 percent of the executive's first year pay, which could be a considerable sum considering the "up front" money the ex-G.M. man will receive. And there will be more to earn by hy helping him fill the spots on his

as a proud man who has been hurt by the publicity over his actions, and who maintains that he really did not do much wrong, "He felt he had no choice," said a Northrop middle-man-ager who has been close to the situation. "He's a pragmatist who believes you have to change your tactics according to each situation, and that's'

what he was doing."

Mr. Benasuli, the stock analyst, said: "He's a very pragmatic man who I think was reacting to the competition. He's a tremendous marketing genius, and I think he saw what Lockheed was "do the same thing to sell his product."

Mr. Jones, a Stanford-educated engineer who was reared in a classic California setting—his family owned a cit-rus grove in Pomona south of bere has declined to discuss, for the record, his views about his recent ordeal. Since last spring, aides to Mr. Jones have repeatedly agreed to—and then put off —requests from The New York Times to talk to the executive on the record about his experience.

Mr. Jones shares his duties these days with Thomas O. Paine, formerly a General Electric Company executive, who was appointed Northrop president last year, partly to satisfy the requirements of a court judgment won in a shareholders' lawsuit over the illegal payments.

But, company officials say, even when Mr. Jones goes sailing oo his 43-foot sailboat off the California coast, he is still the man in charge of Northrop, and he is the one setting the sales strategy for the company's shot at a second chance to get a share of the new fighter plane business, "the arms deal of the century."

Northrop may have a second chance thanks to the help of the Nevy. After the Air Force early in 1975 chose General Dynamics's single-engine F-16 over Northrop's entry in the competition, a twin-engine jet called the F-17, the Nevy waged a successful battle in Congress against adapting the Air Force plane for its carriers. Instead the Navy will make e $12 billion investment to develop its own-fleet of new fighters, and it selected a team consisting of McDonnell-Douglas and Northrop to develop the plane. The design it selected is the same E-17 that leads it selected is the same F-17 that lost the Air Force competition but with folding wings and other aircraft carrier ities. And it has e new name the F-18 and costs about $6 million. Northrop and McDonnell-Douglas not only won the right to build the plane for the Navy, but won Pentagon approval to market a land-based version of the F-18, without the folding wings and other components, to foreign coun-tries. It is this plane that Mr. Jones began offering at the Farnborough Air

Under terms of an agreement between the companies, McDonnell-Douglas will perform 60 percent of the work on the Navy version, and Northrop 40 percent. For the land-based, export version, Northrop will do 60 percent of the work and McDonnell-Douglas will do 40 percent. do 40 percent.

The competition to sell fighter planes the international market has been heated before, but now it will become even more so. One Wall Street analist said:

"All the manufacturers are now talking very piously about forsaking bribes forever. Maybe they will, but when the going gets serious in some of these countries, and you're talking about get-ting a $500 million order by paying a couple of million under the table, do you think they'll stick to it?"

in history in the post-war years.

Resed on an aeronautical concept espoused in the 1930's by Jeck Northrop, the company founder, 11 Flying Wings were built for the Air Force, which was looking for its first post-war strategic bomber. The initial model, called the B-35, was powered by conventional concept. This was followed by the VR. engines. This was followed by the YB-48, powered by jet engines. But, even-mally the Air Force decided instead on another homber, the more conven-tional B-36. By October 1953 all 11

Flying Wings had been scrapped, with-out even one left for the Smithsonian Institution. To this day, Mr. Northrop maintains the concept is still valid, and says he would not be surprised if it is revived.

Northrop's best-known plane today is the F-5 which descended from its popular T-38 jet trainer. Almost 1,000 of these planes have been built. Although the American Air Force and Navy use a handful, mostly as "aggressor" aircraft for air defense exercises, most are on service with foreign air forces.

Expert judgment in municipal bonds...

Creating tax deductions by trading in municipals.

Tax exempt income isn't the only tax benefit municipals can give you. Because very often by trading municipals you can create tax deductions and retain money you would otherwise have to

If you have capital gains this year, now is the time to think about reducing or eliminating the taxes due on those gains by tax swapping municipal bonds.

Because with municipals there are so many different sizes and shapes that the buy and sell can be done simultaneously, creating paper losses, while replacing your bond with an almost identical one; ...

And this is an opportune time to sell-bonds that do not suit your investment objectives and buy bonds that do, because you can restructure your portfolio and take advantage of tax deductions at the same time.

Tax-free income is just one benefit of tax-free bonds

The best-known feature of municipal bonds is that they provide income free from federal income taxes and, usually, free from taxes in the state where they were issued. Besides tax benefits, municipal bonds have other advantages you should know about.

A new Bache Halsey Stuart booklet tells you the six other major advantages of municipals. Safety, capital appreciation, flexibility and other investment objectives are covered, as well as the various features of municipal bonds and the significance of such terms as maturity date, premium, discount and yield. You will also read about different types of bonds and how municipal bond funds fit in the investing picture.

A New Twist on the Business Lunch

The Boston Symphony Orchestra at Carnegie Hall.

When you have clients in from out of town or out of the country, why not give them something very special to remember about New York. Give them the Boston Symphony Orchestra, a world renowned ensemble that they may even have heard at home. An evening at Camegie Hall with the BSO is a certain rovement on the business lunch.

Why not buy several subscriptions to each of the BSO series (the Orchestra plays two series of five concerts each on Wednesday and Thursday evenings at 8 o'clock in Carnegie Hall) and give them to your sales personnel. The true indicators of what would be the application of totalitarian economics to United States free enterprise economics is clear in two specific cases. The first is the Olympic situation in Canada. The second is the 40-year experience with the totalitarian Soviet Union. Each Illustrates the near impossibility of free enterprise dealing on a profitable basis with nationalistic is the bope of withdrawal of the defense association with the United States will discourage the supporters of the Goveriment on Taiwan about its long-term prospects against the mainland's "wave of the future." So discouraged, without physical assault, Taiwan will at some future date be open for subversion from within

Contrary to hopes of United States industry to do business with an indefinite mainland market, the takeover of Taiwan could directly solve many of mainland China's economic problems without the cost of any of the imports from the Western world from which American exporters and transporters could make a commercial profit

The Russians' inexpensive acquisition of German, Czechoslovakian and Manchurian plant technology and skilled : labor after World War II is an irrefutable warning. So is America's commercial experience with the totalitarian. Soviet Union. In 1933 the Russians held out as bait for their diplomatic recognition (the international "respectability" they wanted) token payment of some part of the debt of the previous Government to foreigners. But, immediately after United States Ambassador William Bullitt took residence in Moscow, the Soviet Government repudiated that Ambassador Bullitt once speculated.

that one unsolvable commercial prob-lem was that in the Russian ruling class there were few native Russians experienced in commercial transactions with foreign countries. "Business" was considered beneath the Russian upper class. Because of this lack of respect for or interest in private entirepreneur. ing, there were few Russian native commerciants trained to do business with foreigners. To this lack Ambassa dor Bullitt attributed some part of the failure of his hopes to take the United States out of the Depression by selling to the underdeveloped market of Russia.

Fortunately exactly the opposite China case, as it already exists on Tai-wan, where the people understand business ways. If the United States does not interfere with the present status of the Republic of China, it and the mainland will surely find their own method of adjustment.

While the United States cannot lgnore the fact of mainland China, nei-ther (in the long-term interest of a better united China) can it refuse to sustain those we can now be sure of: the 20 million overseas Chinese who look to Talwan as their intellectual and cultural preservation and who are our permanent friends.

The success of United States-Taiwan business is certainly related to the kind of people who live on Taiwan. They are the American-educated Chinese who emigrated after the mainland takeover not only to Taiwan but throughout Southeast Asia. These Chinese are the cumulative result of nearly 50 years of scholarships in United States colleges, pre-war cooperation with United States banks and business and the ex-rience of World War II cooperation in the Flying Tigers and the 14th Air

- In the availability of Chinese who, understand private-enterprise, the Unit-ed States entrepreneurs can bave a situation completely different from the situation completely different from the Soviet situation. Over such a bridge of mutual understanding, United States commerce might truly find a market in China development.

There is now no comparison between the paucity of Russians who can deal comfortably in commerce in English and the significant number of Chinese educated in English with United States attitudes.

De-recognition of Training De-recognition of Training States

De-recognition of Taiwan would de-stroy the value to United States iodus-try of this asset of United States-educated Chinese in the overseas Chinese communities: Leaving the Chinese to their own devices—changing nothing now—is therefore prudent for any long-term eventual possibility of a market for private United States business on the Asiatic mainland.

For the purpose of United States business opportunity, the American-educated Chinese and the overseas Chinese they lead are the largest po-tential United States asset in non-Japanese Asia. They are nearly 20 million of non-Third World second and milion of non-Third World second and third generation United States-educated and consequently private-enterprise-minded overseas Chinese. In addition to those on Taiwan, these Chinese are important economically, commercially and politically in Hobg Kong, the Philippines, "Malaya, "Thailand," Indonesia, Guam, Hawaii and even 500,000 in the continental United States.

The insertiness of the entire overs

The usefulness of the entire overdevelopment by United States business of the market of continental Asia tied up with keeping the overseas Chinese related to a Taiwan free of Communist domination. Deprived of this freedom, these 20 million free and free enterprise Chinese will have no utility. to United States entrepreneurs having to do business with a monopolistic... Communist state concentrating in it self all buying and selling manipulating its labor costs to dump at will and : for political reasons making commercial decisions and pricings.

For these commercial reasons among more important military and political reasons, the problem of Taiwan and mainland China signals be left for all the Chinese to settle whenever they get around to it.

Books: Nader's Stab at Giant Taming

BY ROBERT HESSEN

TAMING THE GIANT CORPORATION. By Raiph Noder, Mark Green and Joel Seligman. W. W. Norton & Company. 312 pages, $10.50.

In his new book Ralph Nader argues that giant corporations victimize their shareholders, employees, customers and neighboring communities.

He lays the blame on several factors: that corporate officers wield discretionary authority over the shareholders' wealth, that corporations cooduct their affairs in secrecy, that the sheer size of the corporate giants makes them immune from competitive challenges and that the giants are able to shop around for a state whose corporate laws are so lax and permissive that a corporation will be able to do virtually anything it wishes. His solution for all of these alleged evils is Federal chartering of corporations.
If giant corporations were forced to obtain their charters from the Federal Government, then Congress could com-pel them to adopt numerous major changes, which Mr. Nader claims are essential. His demands include a drastic reduction in the decision-making powers of corporate officers. Instead, every "fundamental transaction" would have to be approved first by a board of directors consisting entirely of outsiders and then ratified by a shareholder plebiscile conducted by mail.

Mr. Nader also calls for compulsory disclosure of information sought by consumers, competitors and governmental agencies. And he advocates a stringent new test of monopoly power, designed to break up any corporation whose market share exceeds 12 per-

Last June the Senate Commerce Committee held preliminary hearings on Mr. Nader's proposal. Next January, when Congress convenes, he will launch an all-out campaign to enact Federal chartering. Since "Taming the Giant Corporation" is intended to inspire a major niece of legislation, and since it took Mr. Nader, his co-authors and their four research assistants five years to write, this book should be jodged by the highest standards.

Does it make a complete and compel-ling case? The verdict, unequivocally, is: No. In view of Mr. Nader's theory of "advocacy scholarship"—that he has no obligation to take account of facts or theories that contradict his viewpoint—one would not expect this book to contain a balanced analysis of giant corporations and their impact on the American ecocomy. What one would bope to find, however, is a carefully reasoned brief for one side of the debate on corporations. But Mr. Nader has failed to achieve even that limited objective.

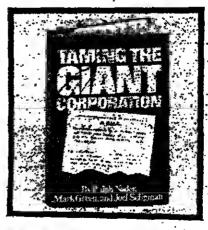

In support of his far-reaching proposals, Mr. Nader offers a collection of undefined terms and arbitrary criteria, and many important questions are left unanswered—in fact, unraised.

He begios by asking: "If the Constitutional Convention were conveoed in 1976 instead of 1787, can we imagine that this time the Founding Fathers would fail to mention the business cor-poration?"

Why is this omission so significant?.

Mr. Nader answers: because giant corporations are "private governments," a term he uses repeatedly. The closest he comes to a definition is to quote. a vague comment that giant corpora-lions "have a direct and decisive impact on the social, economic, and politi-cal life of the nation." He fails to see any difference between a government that can conscript and levy taxes and a business that offers wages and products, which potential workers and customers are free to reject,

Mr. Nader calls for Federal chartering of all corporations whose annual sales exceed $250 million or which have more than 10,000 employees, but he never indicates how he chose these criteria. Nor does he define what he means by such terms as competition, monopoly and "relevant product markets," even though their precisa mean-ing is essential to understanding and evaluating his proposals.

Nor does he explain how he decided Nor does he explain how he decided that 12 percent of a market is the "permissible limit" for a company to hold. Since e firm can hold more than a 12 percent market share because consumers prefer its products, is Mr. Nader proposing to veto the verdict of the marketplace? If so, by what right? And in whose name? in whose name?

And what evidence is there that shareholders actually want the kind of "reforms" Mr. Nader is demanding? Is it possible that he is a self-appointed spokesman for a nonexistent constituency?

Since one of Mr. Nader's chief aims in advocating Federal chartering is to reduce corporate profits, investors might like to know: Does he propose to indemnify of compensate them for the resulting decline in dividends? Mr. Nader's silence on all of these questions of the second of tions is puzzling indeed, given his cam-paign for "full disclosure."

There are some noteworthy differ ences between this book and a preliminary version issued last January. The early edition came under attack for its scholarly errors, including unverifiable footnotes. In the new version, the footnotes are now unnumbered and the text indicates which statements are supported by the footnotes. The reader has to turn to the back of the book after reading each sentence—a hibliographic tenns match. The only apparent reason for this change is to discourage attempts to verify the documentation.

The preliminary version also contained a list of the 1,000 largest American corporations; this book does not. The list revealed that the corporate giants include not only LB.M., G.M. an Exxon but also. The New York Times. The Washington Post, Dow Jones & Company, Time Inc., CBS, ABC, RCA (corporate parent of NBC) and several of the major trade and textbook publichment

Why was the list dropped? My guess is that some people who endorsed Federal chartering were willing to subrederal chartering were willing to sub-ject business to new governmental con-trols as long as the realm of ideas was left free. But when they saw the list and expressed reservations about Mr. Nader's proposal because he was pro-viding the Government with a weapon.

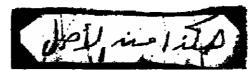

viding the Government with a weapon to abridge or invada First Amendment rights, his response was not to abendon or even modify his progosal but simply to delete the list.

Perhaps there is some othe explanation. One hopes that Mr. lader will choose to clarify this crucial omission and at the sama time supply answers to the major questions he left unanswered. Until then, his book proposing Federal chartering does not merit seri-Federal chartering does not merit serious consideration from Congress or anyone else. Caveat empty.

France has sought to pursue a policy—since the days of Charles de Gaulle of keeping control of key industries, such as aviation and electronics, in French hands: In the case of Chateau Margaux, the issue involved concern with French prestige abroad.

The first bluder involved oo such problems. It was Remy Martin, the French cognac producer, which, with the backing of a major insurance consortium, offered $8.2 million. This would not have paid off all the Ginestet debts, so it was rejected. Then Drummond C. Bell, chairman of the National Distillers and Chemical Corporation, doubled the offer to $164 million, and in addition pledged that the Ginestets would continue in the fu-ture to market Chateau Margaux in all

The offer ran afoul of French hon-or. Pierre Ginestet quoted a Finance Ministry official as having exclaimed: "It's as if you were asking us to approve the sales abroad of the Eiffel Tower or the Mona Lisa!"

But things may be looking up again for the Ginestets, Bernard Ginestet said the other day in a telephone conversa-tion that the Government was oow examining an afternative for salvaging the company.

He said "friendly talks" were now under way with the Finance and Agriculture Ministries with a view to obtaining low-interest loans from state credit organizations. If that is successful, Chateau Margaux would not have

Mr. Clark's division, investigates complaints involving financial institutions under the Banking Department's supervision. This includes more than 2,000 state chartered or regulated institutions such as commercial banks, savings banks, savings and loan associa-tions, credit unions, small loan compa-nies, sales finance companies, check cashing operations and branches or agencies of foreign banks.

Much of the division's work consists of clarifying rules. A typical question is: "I have no complaint, but are the following interest charges on my hill too high?"

Goodbye, Fed; Hello, Morgan Stanley

Richard A. Debs, who resigned from the No. 2 job at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York in June, reported for work at Morgan Stanley & Company the day after Labor Day.

The 46-year-old Mr. Debs, who was first vice president and chief administrative officer at the New York Fed, has become president of Morgan Stan-ley International. The chairman of M.S.L is his former boss, Alfred Hayes, who retired from the presidency of the New York Fed in August 1975.

But that's just a coincidence, Mr. Debs declared. At the New York Fed Mr. Debs served At the New York Fed Mr. Debs served as an alternate on the Federal Open Market Committee, the 12-member group responsible for setting the nation's monetary policy.

He was also deeply involved in international banking. When the Western world was awash with petrodollars following the Arab oil emberger in the lowing the Arab oil embargo in the fall of 1973, Mr. Debs became the Fed's. principal representative to the central banks and monetary authorities of the oil-producing nations.

Wall Street has been scanning its tea leaves for the significance of the Debs move to Morgan. The ooce stald investment banking house has changed its image in recent years to that of a young aggressive firm.

Morgan Stanley is expanding its international operations. The planning in that area will be Mr. Debs's primary responsibility.

Why did Mr. Debs go to Morgan Stanley after 16 years with the Federal Reserve? "I thought it was time for a change," he said last week. Did the fact that he did not get the No. 1 joh at the New York Fed—Paul A. Volcker, the 47-year-old former Under Secretary of the Treasury for Mooetary Affairs, was named President to succeed Mr. Hayes—have anything to do with Mr. Deh's departure?

"It had to right?" he replied, adding, "All the factors go into a decision."

the capital gains tax) have counted as a full offset against the minimum tax

Under the new law, only half of regular taxes paid will count as an offset.

And the exemption for minimum tax purposes is cut from $30,000 to $10,000, clong with an increase in the minimum tax rate from 10 percent to 15 percent. The net result is a significant increase in effective capital exists. cant increase in effective capital gains tax on those who realize large gains, in the stock market or elsewhere.

The new tax bill seems to favor consumption over investment.

as has been true in so many areas in recent years. The liberalized individual Retirement Account was in the House bill but was dropped by the conferees as too costly in revenues, and all the others never even got as far as the conference.

But was there a senback for capital formation in the final bill, in the sense of further "tax capital?" The answer, requiring a somewhat subjective judgment, is probably. Yes, but not a very hig setback.

The most important change has probably not yet been widely recognized. It involves the major toughening of the seven-year-old minimum tax, particularly as it applies to capital Anyone realizing a capital gain, of course, pays a tax. The untaxed half of capital gains has been part of the minimum tax since 1969. But, until the new law, regular taxes paid (including site direction from that favored by Mr.

As for corporate profits—a major component of the nation's savings—the most significant element in the new bill is probably the four-year extension of the 10 percent investment tax credit, though this was not really in dispute except for the duration of the exten-sion. Several amendments in the Senate that would have effectively raised taxes on corporations were defeated and did not reach the conference.

On the opposite side the minimum tax as it applies to corporations was toughened somewhat. (The Treasury and such Congressional Republicans as Representative Barber B. Conable of New York think the minimum tax chould accome have been provided to consider the constant of the constant should never have been applied to corporations in the first place.) The revenue gain will not be great, rising to an estimated $200 million five years from now, but those businesses able to use existing tax preferences such as depletion will pay more tax.

as depiction will pay more tax.

The final bill also extended, without much debate or controversy, the $15 billion package of individual income tax reductions first enacted for antirecession purposes in 1975 and expanded a little for 1976. This is almost completely "consumption-oriented" because it is heavily weighted toward taxpayers of low and moderate income in its relative tax relief. in its relative tex relief.

Thus it is fair to say that, for better or worse, the bill does not further capital formation and instead taxes capital a little more than now. While it does not reflect the severe anticapital views of some Congressional liberais, it does probably accurately reflect the general cast of the current Congress. The capi-tal-formation crusade of the Adminis-tration and much of the business and investment community flopped. But Mr. Simon is the first to concede, and even to assert, that there are two aspects of the capital formation problem. One is the alleged bias of the tax structure against savings and capital; the other is the size of the Federal Government's budget deficit.

There can be no dispute that the big tax revision bill of 1976, thanks mainly to the influence of the new Congressional budget control process, "pre-served the revenues" and thus helped to hold down budget deficits not only for next year but also well into the future. All sorts of seemingly worthy tax giveaways, mainly added by the Senate, were thrown out.

So the Treasury will borrow less in the future than could easily otherwise have been the case and thus will soak up less of the pool of private savings. Is this an offset to the added taxes on capital? Probably not even an economist with a complicated econometric model could answer that question with any confidence.

any MUNICIPAL BONDS, ask

What am I giving up to get the tax loss?

Swaps don't make equally good sense for everybody. All our clients already have been dierted to the advantages of anticipating their year-end tax problems and of swapping bonds now, If it can lighten their tax load—rather than "under the gun" in December, when desirable swaps may be harder to come by. Our aim always is to advise you on the negative as well as the positive aspects of any proposed swaps. If a fresh and objective viewpoint can lightly you make the right decision, a phone call is all it takes. There never is any deligation.

ECONOMICS OF THE TIMES

Waiting for the Upturn

By THOMAS E. MULLANEY

HE CALENDAR indicates that there are still more than three months remaining in this rather erratic 1976, but the business world traditionally views the passage of Labor Day as the turning point into its new year and anticipates a faster tempo of economic activity.

By this time, vacation-induced slowdowns in various sectors of the economy have been ended, the changeover for the new automotive models has been completed, the crops are well along and yields are rather precisely known, economic forecasts for the year shead are proliferating, business budgets are being drawn and the public usually has shed its summer distractions to display more interest in apparel and other products in the nation's marketplace.

So it has been again this year. In many lines the summer luli is fading fast, but there are enough uncertainties in others to raise serious questions about the vigor of the renewed upturn so widely percaived and expected in business circles. The virtual sidewise movement of the stock-market averages the last six months seems to reflect investor conviction that no hig upsurge is imminent for the economy and that the earning power of American corporations will continue to be subjected to strong .In the early days of this month, some of the clouds over the economy appeared to be disappearing, but the strike at the Ford Motor Company last Wednes-day—not expected until the 11th hour—has injected some new clouds into the scene, bearing an omnous threat for the economic picture in the fourth quarter. if the shutdown at Ford lasts beyond a few weeks or spreads to the other automotive producers, the economic impact could be quite severe, spreading its influence rapidly over production and employment in a wide range of American industry. The natioo's steel mils, already forced to impose some scattered layoffs because of disappointing orders for construction and capital goods in recent months, would be particularly affected. After a tour through the nation's industrial heart-land between New York and Chicago and interviews with a score of top industrialists during the last two weeks, it is apparent that there is no significant pessimism in the business realm at this time. Neither is there any rampant expectation that the recovering American economy is poised for a new, overexuber-

There is, instead, a mood of quiet confidence that the overall economic situation will cootinue to improve in a moderate and orderly fashion. The summer pause in consumer spending, industrial production and capital-spending plans mey well have passed, as Administration officials contend, though most businessmen and other analysts wonder how powerful the coming upturn will be.

Bilisinessmen everywhere agree that the results will depend largely on the pace of inflation, the length and impact of the current strike at Ford, the state of consumer incomes and confidence, and the speed and breadth of the anticipated pickup in capital spending.

In another month the dimension of the summer slowdown will be measured more precisely in the third-quarter statistics, and there will be greater evidence at hand, one way or the other, on the conten-tion of the Administration's economic hierarchy that a "re-ecceleration" of economic activity is now in progress.

Some of the early private assessments on the current quarter's business pace are hardly satisfying. Otto Eckstein of Data Resources Inc. issued this anal-The third quarter will show only moderate real growth, probably little different from the 4.3 percent rate of advance of the second quarter. At this stage. of recovery from a very deep recession, the economy should be moving quickly. Continuation of this trend would undermine the need for the revival in capital. spending, put pressure on prices and profit margins and create increasing risks that the next change in tempo would be on the down side." Michael Evens of Chase Econometrics said his evaluation of the current quarter's performance was quite similar. He put reel growth at 4 to 41/4 percent, and inflation up slightly to 51/2 percent from 5.1

percent in the second quarter. He minimized the 22 percent jump in retail sales for August, saying that the major factor was auto sales, mostly imported cars, and that the recent increase in personal income (et an annual rate of 5 percent or so) "was not very encouraging."

In conversations with the top officials of the automotive, steel, aluminum and retailing industries, it was clear that all were counting on high levels of real personal income and continued public confidence in buying autos, appliances and other goods to provide the spark for a continued rise in overall econom-

Without question, the No. 1 coocern in the minds of all businessmen was the future course of inflation in this country. They were pleased with the marked slowdown in the general price level this year and hopeful that the moderation would continue. Every one cited the double-digit inflation of 1973 as the reason for the deep recession of 1974-75 and other business problems that flowed from it.

So their major concern at the moment is the dange of enlarged Government spending and Federal defi-cits that exacerbated the inflation picture a few years ago and caused chaos in the financial markets.

Businessmen indicate they are determined to keep their own costs and inventories under firm control and improve their corporate balance sheets. Attitudes such as that may well have prompted the firm stand taken by the Ford Motor Company against the union's demand for more time off for its members.

Oo the inflation front, there has been some concern recently on the upward tendency of many industrial prices, but this has been offset by the continued good news in the farm and food area. The Agriculture Department's Sept. 12 crop estimate, based on Sept. I conditions, was widely hailed as a mitigating force in the inflation situation. It forecast another bumper crop of the three key foodstuffs-corn, wheat and sovbeans-and led to predictions that food prices would, as e result, rise no more than 3 to 4 percent next year, or about half of the increase experienced in the last 12 months.

Economic Indicators appear on page 16.

That expectation, however, could be shattered if processing, transportation end distributing costs skyrocket or if farm exports rise sharply again to put pressure on domestic supplies. The Ford Administration, in an effort to placata farmers, is expected to mobilize e big drive under Public Law 480 to move surplus foodstuffs overseas, under easy-term credits, when the fiscal year starts Oct. 1 and funds are available for such financing.

Even those businessmen who foresee some tough aledding ahead for the economy during the rest of this year expressed confidence that 1977 would show some marked improvement, provided inflation does not get out of hand again. Except for the strike at Ford, the scattered layoffs in steel and the lag in capital spending, there are more pluses than minuses in the current picture. Housing, while up sharply is still below the record levels of a few years ago but is promising to gain further; the public still seems to have a large appetite for new cars, appliances and other durable goods, and the number of people at work continues to rise

When the present impediments to increased business activity are ended, the business world expects a fairly strong resumption of the business pace in the fourth quarter and next year.

The outlook for 1977 is quite bright. The auto industry expects a 10 percent gain in sales, virtually matching its record year in 1973. Steel and aluminum producers are projecting increases of similar size, though they will still be considerably below earlier peaks. The retailing business is looking for gains in the area of 9 percent. Energy consumption, now approaching pre-embargo levels, is gaining, and so is the telephone business.

Corporate executives say the fundamentals exist. to support those expectations, but they recognize there are many things that could change the generally rosy outlook—not excepting the course of events in Washington in coming months.

Rate Outlook Buoys Stocks

The stock market, buoyed by the prospects of ... lower interest rates, made a moderate advance last week in heavier trading. The widely watched Dow Jones industrial average closed Friday et 935.10, up

7.15 points for the week. Turnover on the New York Stock Exchange last week grew to 97.11 million shares from 69.53 millioo shares in the previous week, which had only four trading sessions because of the Labor Day holiday. On Friday the volume totaled 28.27 million shares, the largest since March 24, when it was 32.16 million shares. Analysts ettributed most of the buying interest to investors expectations that interest rates would continue to decline. The Federal Reserve Board announced late Thursday that the nation's basic money supply in the week ended Sept. 6 dropped by $1.7 hilich. This substantial decline prompted speculation that the Fed might ease the credit reins another notch, thus paving the way for lower interest rates.

Investors were also encouraged by signs that the economy might be regaining momentum. The Com-merce Department reported Thursday that retail sales rose 1.2 percent during the preceding week for its second large consecutive advance. The report gave some evidence that consumers were increasing their spending after a two-month pause.

The market was indecisive earlier in the week, apparently because of the strike against the Ford Motor Company by the Auto Workers Union. The strike began at midnight Tuesday. If prolonged, the strike could further slow tha nation's economy.

Another plus factor for the market was the Fed's report Thursday that industrial output climbed 0.5 percent in August, In the credit markets, bond prices edvanced in

Schorr Says 'No,' House Retreats

Having gone to the brink of a major Constitutional confrontation with the ress over its right to keep secret the House Ethics Committee will apparently now back away because it does not have the votes to force the issue to

The dimensions of the conflict were explicit when Daniel Schorr, a CBS the committee last week in response to a subpoena and refused to answer any questions designed to belp the committee identify the person who gave him a copy of the House committee report on intelligence activities Each time be refused, he was warned that he might be held in contempt and fined or imprisoned.

The committee voted to subprepa Mr. Schoor because it had been unable, by questioning several hundred memhers of the executive and legislative brenches, to discover how the report was made available for publication in The Vallage Voice after a House vote to keep it secret. Mr. Schoor has ecknowledged supplying a copy to the

Mr. Schorr rested his refusal to identify the source on both professional and Constitutional grounds. The two were related, he argued, because the failure of a newsman to abide by his professional obligation to keep sources confidential "would mean to dry up many future sources for many future reporters," thereby dimensishing the ability of the press to report fully on the activities of Government. The First Amendment provides that "Congress shall make no law . . . abridging the freedom of speech or of the press."

Half the committee's 12 members said after the hearing that they would not vote to recommend to the full House that Mr. Schoor be held in contempt; the votes of at least seven would be required for the committee to make such a recommendation.

It is likely that some members voted to subpoens Mr. Schoar, feeling an obligation to carry out the House's mandate that the source be found, but also considered him justified in his refusal. to enswer. Congressmen, generally, court press attention and few members could have relished antagonizing almost eil- reporters over a deeply-held principle of their profes-

The committee's disinclination to have Mr. Schort cited for concempt will probably leave the issue of newsmen's confidentiality, as a matter of law, no closer to resolution. But the fedure to punish him may set a prectical precedent that will discourage. other such inquiries into reporters' conduct. On the other hand, as Mr. Schorr suggested, by the mere act of ordering him to testify the committee may have set a quite different example, one that could have a chilling

have become major issues in recent years, most of them involving the right to publish information deemed harmful by officials. The United States: Supreme Court, in the 1971 Pentagon Papers case, affirmed the right to publish classified material without prior censorship despite a Government claim that it might damage national security. Earlier this year the Court prohibited judges, in elmost all instances, from banning publication of information thought to be possibly prejudicial to a defendant's right to an unbiased

Ford and Carter: Debate Number 1

The first Presidential debates since Richard Nixon and John F. Kennedy confronted each other get under way next week, presenting Gerald Ford with what even his close aides concede may be his only good chance of overcoming the lead of Jimmy Carter.

The reason it has been 16 years' since Presidential candidates debated is that in each election at least one of those running considered it not worth the risk. The pressure is great, and a poor performance—a failure to display command of important in-formation, the fact or just the appearance of a characterological weakness -is wetched by many more millions on television than wimess any other campaign event. . .

For Mr. Ford, however, debating is well worth the risk despite his incumbency. He is far behind in the polis. Mr. Carter apparently wanted the debates to neutralize what has so far been Mr. Ford's main campaign theme, that Mr. Carter is vague and evasive.

The format of the debates, which begin at $:30 P.M. on Thursday, includes a panel of three reporters who will ask questions of each candidate in turn; domestic affairs, including economic policy, is the subject of the first debate. The candidate will have up to three minutes to reply and two more minutes to answer a followup question. The opposing candidate then may take two minutes to comment on the answers. The candidates will not be permitted to question each other

The debates will not include one Presidential candidate who has sought to participate, Eugene J. McCatthy, ning as an independent. A Federal court dismissed last week the suit-challenging his exclusion, but Mr. Mc-Carthy has appealed.

Both condidates are doubtless preparing carefully for the debates; Mr. Ford, for instance, has had his staff throwing nasty questions at him to practice effective answers.

Based on their past performances in press conferences, the closest parallel to the debate situation though not comparable at all in importance or pressure, Mr. Ford is the more deliberate in his responses. That could make him appear less advoit then Mr. Carter, but it might also project the image of Presidential authority he has been

On the face of it, Mr. Carter would appear to have a considerable advantage simply by virtue of the fact that Mr. Ford, as President, has a broad necord and entire Administration to defend Mr. Ford, however, is likely to use the forum to challenge Mr. Certer directly to state specifically what he, if elected, he would do about the policies he attacks.

Both candidates campaigned last week as if they were rehearing for the debates. Mr. Ford, repeating a prior theme, said he, in contrast to Mr. Carter, would offer "specifics, not smiles" to the electorate. Mr. Certer accused the Nixon and Ford Administrations of responsibility for the worst economic conditions since the 1930's. The candidates also took care to obey the first commandment of campaigning: secure thy home base. Mr. Ford was in Michigan and sent Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz to the. Midwest farm areas; Mr. Canter caripaigned in the South and before a labor audience.

One source of pressure on the candidates, the Roman Catholic Church, appeared to relent significantly hast week when the National Conference of Catholic Bishops said it was neutral in the compaign. The bishops had interviewed both candidates about their positions on a Constitutional amendment to restrict abortion, creating the impression of a kind of litmus test for the Church's approval. The activity had drawn complaints from Catholics and non-Catholics that the church had been approperly injected into partisan politics.

The Press and Its Right to Silence: Not Yet Clarified

By ANTHONY LEWIS

The drams of Daniel Schorr, played out last week before the House ethics committee, focuses attention once again on an intriguing question of law and politics and the ethics of the fress. That is the extent of a journalist's right—and professional obligation—to keep secret the names of sources to whom he or she has promised anonymity in enchange for information.

The value of confidential sources is not really in doubt. Anytime a reporter digs into a touchy subject, he may have to get his facts from someone who would be damaged per-sonally or professionally if identified. After the movie of "All the President's Men" everyone understands the reluctence of some good sources to talk, and there is fear of power in city halls as well as the White House.; The question is not the reporter's need for confidence but whether the public value of that confidence outweighs other values in society. Characteristically, in this country, the question is usually put in constitutional terms. Over the last decade or so the press has developed the argument that the First Amendment, probabiling any official abridgement of the press, protects journalists against forced dis-

Four years ago the United States Supreme Court met the issue directly for the first time. Under the title of Branzburg v. Hayes, the Court dealt with the cases of three reporters who had been called before grand juries and ordered to enswer questions. The best known case was that of Earl Caldwell, then a New York Times reporter, who refused to say anything whatever about his conversations with Black Parther leaders.

By vote of 5 to 4, the Court rejected the reporters' claim that they had a constitutional privilege not to answer the grand jury questions. The majority opinion, by Justice Byron White, did give some constitutional status to news-gathering. "Without some protection for seeking out the news," it said, freedom of the press could be eviscerated." But the Court indicated that the press had to cely largely on its own influence in society to protect that interest, not on the law. If the issue were ultimately drawn in law, it said, the press' need had to yield to the crucial social role of the grand jury and the obligation of every citizen to testify. The opinion, delivered 12 days after the Watergate burglary. noted Chief Justice Marshell's view that even a President could be suppoensed.

But the Branzburg decision has not proved decisive. It was somewhat ambiguous from the start because one memher of the bare majority, Justice Lewis Powell, filed a concurring opinion indicating that a "legitimate need of law enforcement" would have to be shown by a grand jury to overrige a press desire for silence. That suggested that judges should weigh the competing values, case by case. In fact, many lower-court judges have followed latter

Powell's intimation and carefully considered whether to make journalists testify in particular circumstances. Quite often, the decision has gone in favor of the reporter, on the ground that his testimony was not really "essential" to the

For Daniel Schorr, the setting was not a grand jury or court but a Congressional investigation. The ethics comm tee was trying to find out how a copy of the House Intelligence Committee report, which the full House voted to suppress, had reached Mr. Schorr and then been passed by him to The Village Voice for publication.

If Mr. Schorr were indicted for contempt for refusing to answer the committee's questions, the courts might arguably find the press interest stronger than in the grand jury setting. Judges give the integrity of the judicial process, special weight. Two weeks ago, four newsmen from the Fresno, Calif., Bee were jailed for refusing to say how they got quotes from a sealed grand jury transcript; they have since been released. The Supreme Court ordered the Nixon tapes delivered to a grand jury, while lower courts rejected the Senate Watergate Committee's claim for them, saying the need was unproven.

Convictions Reversed

On the other hand, the Supreme Court, io the late 1950's, did uphold in broad terms Congress' power to conduct investigations even against claimed injury to freedom of thought and association. In later years the Court reversed a large number of convictions of persons who had refused to answer committee questions about alleged Communist. associations, but those decisions all rested on procedural

In any event, Mr. Schorr is not likely to become the subject of a great new test case. The force of his argument that protection of sources "is absolutely essential to the function of the press in this country" evidently persuaded enough members of the ethics committee, whatever their feelings about the leak of the intelligence report, not to cite him for contempt. Thad Cochran, Republican of Mississippi, told him toward the end of the hearing: "I support you 100 percent in your refusal to name your source."

Curiously, that result might be regarded by Justice Whiteand the Supreme Court majority as support for their view that the issue should be left largely to the give and take of society. Instead of writing a journalist's privilege rigidity. into the Constitution, they might say, we should let the outcome be influenced by such factors as the strength of the reporter's convictions, because that instructs our democracy. In addition to Mr. Schorr's persuasiveness, the four Fresno newsmen were released last week after convincing a judge that they would never disclose their sources. Judges and legislators are coming to appreciand how strongly the press feels about this issue.

In Summary

'Donations' With Overseas Connections

The subject of corporate contributions to high political figures, for immediate favors or on general account, is apparently inexhaustible. Last week there was another allegation that is so far the most striking single example of the extent of the connection between domestic and foreign "dona-

In sworn testimony before a Senate subcommittee, Thomas B. Cheatham, former president of Grumman International, said that in 1972 Richard V. Allen, then an aide to President Nixon. urged the company to contribute $1 million to the Republican campaign. In feturn the company would get the President's "assistance" in arranging the sale of a Grumman reconnaisance airplane to Japan, according to the testimony.

Also under oath, Mr. Allen denied the allegation. He said be had nothing to do with fund-raising.

During the Watergate hearings, Herbert W. Kalmbach, Mr. Nixon's personal lawyer, and others, testified about their efforts to generate millions of dollars in cash contributions for the re-election committee from corporations, especially from those that benefit from Government actions. Grumman has not been publicly involved. The company has said it has made no political contributions.

Congress has in general shown more reluctance to investigate its own members' campaign finances than those of the executive branch, and there was new evidence of that last week. The Senate Ethics Committee voted to close its investigation into the cases of 19 Senators, including Republican Minority Leader Hugh Scott, who allegedly received illegal contributions from the Gulf Oil Corporation. Three committee members are on that list; they voted no action,

Rethinking an Easy Hijacking

The tactics used hy five Croatian nationalists to slip materials for bombs -which turned out to be harmless fakes-through security machinery and then to hijack a Chicago-bound plane to Paris may lead to refinement of the antihijacking precautions. The incident also produced uncertainty over negotiations with the terrorists but there is unlikely to be any change in Washington's tough stand against such dealings.

The hijacking of the Trans World Airlines plane after it took off from La Guardia Airport was the first successful air piracy lo the United States since strict security controls were introduced at the natioo's airports nearly four years ago. Although the "bombs' carried by the hijackers turned our to be barmless, the fact that they were carried aboard the plane in piecesand so were practically impossible to detect-put into doubt the efficiency of the security machinery.

There were also questions about whether or not the United States, in dealing with the Croatians, had departed from the previous policy of refusing to negotiate with hijackers.

Officials insist that these actions mean no departure from the previous tough-line policy: to be less rigid, they argue, would only eocourage other potential hijackers.

The French authorities certainly took a tough line. They shot out the tires on the Boeing 727 jet and gave the hijackers this ultimatum: Surrender and be seot back to New York or face executioo for air piracy in France. The hijackers chose New York, even though a bomb they allegedly planted in Grand Central Terminal exploded and killed a policeman. They have been charged with murder as a result.

They also face charges of air piracy. They are being questioned, however, in connection with other terrorist activities. The acknowledged leader of the hijackers, Zvonko Busic, has admitted to the Queens District Attorney's office, for example, that he was at La Guardia airport last Dec. 29, shortly before a bomb went off in the main terminal killing 11 persons. But Mr. Busic has emphatically denied any connection with that explosion.

Sunshine Act Is Now Law

Most independent Federal agencies and regulatory commissions may do significantly more of their business in public from oow oo as a result of the Government in the Sunshine Act, signed by President Ford last week. The precise effect of the act in promoting openness will depend upon the way the agencies respond to it; on a broad range of matters, they are permitted to continue to deliberate in private.

The act, whose purpose is to promote confidence in the fairness of official decisions, requires an agency to schedule open meetings unless a majority of its board votes to hold a closed session on an exempt topic. Among those are national defense and foreign policy, law enforcement, agency rules practices and personnel, legal proceedings, trade secrets, bank audits and matters that might invade an individu-

The act also prohibits by law a practice that was already forbidden by most agency rules: informal, unrecorded contacts between officials and parties to formal adjudicatory proceedings-for example, involving licensa applications—before the agency. The act, however, will permit informal contacts on most other matters to continue. Some critics of the agencies have contended that such cootacts unduly influence official decisions.

President Ford was not in favor of the sunshine bill. Many of its procedures, he said, were unnecessarily complicated and cumbersome, particularly a requirement for transcripts to be made of closed sessions. He apparently signed the bill because a veto would have been politically unpopular and because the bill had passed the House and Senate with majorities large enough to override a veto.

Auto Union Strikes Ford

The United Auto Workers union has begun a strike against the Ford Motor Company that is certain to have a harmful effect on the nation's economy if it lasts a long time. The strike was evidently precipitated by a disagreement in principle over the manner of reducing working time.

Should the 165,000 workers stay out more than a month, the strike could disrupt the steel and rubber industries, which are important suppliers of car components. A prolonged strike would also have an unsettling psychological effect on the business community because the automobile industry has been one of the more vigorous elements in an otherwise not-very-robust recovery from the recession.

The immediate effects will be felt within the automotive industry. The shutdown of Ford's 22 plants puts it at a serious competitive disadvantage with respect to the other two major automobile manufacturers, General Motors and Chrysler, just as the 1977 model year is beginning. The union's strategy, in striking just one company is to pressure it into accepting contract terms that will favorably influence negotiations with the other manu-

Only token bargaining was conducted in the last few days before last Tuesday's strike deadline, apparently because the threshold issue of reduced working time was unresolved. As a device for creating more jobs, the union has asked for a number of regularly scheduled days off to be granted automatically to all employees. The company has offered to institute a system under which it would control the allotment of days off, taking into account such factors as seniority and absenteeism and being able to substitute pay for time.

The other main issues in the talks. scheduled to resume tomorrow, concern the union's request for an increase in wages and in the company's contribution to a fund for supplementing the unemployment benefits of laidoff workers.

Congress Acts On Abortions

Congress has approved and sent to President Ford legislation banning the usa of Medicaid funds for most abortions. The issue has been raised before, but the Senate has consistently refused to restrict Medicaid. The difference this year apparently has been the persistence of the antiabortion lobbyists, a force whose influence has increased markedly.

One clear effect of the legislation will be to make it much more difficult for poor women to gain abortions. Medicaid paid an estimated $2 million for 45,000 abortions in New York City alone last year.

Critics of the legislation also argued that the restrictions will result in an increase in deaths and illnesses among infants and mothers forced to obtain

Congress Votes JFK Probe

The House of Representatives bas voted to begin new iovestigations into the murders of President John F. Kenoedy and the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., the civil rights leader.

A special commission under the late Chief Justice Warren reported in 1964 that there was no evidence that anyone other than Lee Harvey Oswald was involved in the Kennedy killing. Despite many attempts to discredit the report, that essential finding has never been successfully challenged.

James Earl Ray pleaded guilty to killing Dr. King, but Mr. Ray has since retracted his confession and sought a new trial.

A Debater's Art Is All Wit and Witticism

By ANTHONY E. DAVIS

The Republican and Democratic Presidential candidates will commence this week a series of face-to-face encounters that have been described as debates. To the extent that the candidates adhere to the traditional structure of a formal debate, they will be practicing a form of disputation that has been developed to a fina art in collegiate societies and legislative chambers

Debate in the classic manner must at all costs be distinguishable from its feeble counterpart, the "discussion." In discussion the participants have a peculiar, altruistic desire to pool their collective wisdom, the better to inform and educate the listener. No such conceit burdens the true debater. His concern is solely competitive; accurate information is a tool to be used only-when humor fails.

The ultimate aim in debate is to make the opponent appear ridiculous. Since the primary weapon is vocabulary, the crucial skill required is verbal dexterity, supported by intellectual vivacity. By definition, even in these days of film and recording, the debate is an ephemeral medium, so that it is instant brilliance, preferably at the other side's expense, rather than lasting genius that counts. The successful debater seeks at least as fervently to denierate his opponent's case as to huild his own. His goal is not necessarily to be absolutely right. but to be more convincing. At the end of the day he hopes, like a boxer, to have landed more (verbal) punches than he has taken. Victory, is measured by the redness of the loser's cheeks.

Of course, as in any form of theater, words alone may be insufficient. The telling gesturewhether this would encompass The Smile remains to be seen-and the dramatic use of voice can be of immense value. As in other McCartpresents for himself as an independent candidate President rests on a disarming but shaky syllogis If current trends continue, Democrats and Replicans are likely to be outnumbered one of the days by voters who regard themselves as indepenents; Mr. McCarthy is the candidate of the inpendents; therefore, he is a serious candidate.

by a process of self-anointment. It is less the obvious that they are even aware of his candida: in any significant numbers, or that they have a -thing in common as a group besides their disafi-tion from the established parties. So long as the don't seem to know or care that Mr. McCartisy running in their name, his challenge to the partis apt to be dismissed as the wispy hope of a a of singularly high principle or, less kindly, as expression of petulant pride.

But if writing off the McCarthy candidacy co. have stopped it, it would have expired months a Instead, the former Democratic Senator from M. nesota is managing to arouse the first glimmerical of interest, if not support, by making an iss ingeniously but not implausibly, of his inability reach his chosen constituency. The issue, as presents it, is simple fair play: How can a politi: system be regarded as open, he asks, if it demerhearing to all but the representatives of two partic

Mr. McCarthy saves his sharpest barbs for t new campaign spending law, which provides froublic financing of the two major candidates from President, "The Incumbents Protection Act," calls it. But if his argument that the system rigged is now beginning to be noticed, it is than mainly to the phenomenon of television debate.

Paradoxically, it is Mr. McCarthy's well-publicity exclusion from the encounters between Presid Ford and Jimmy Carter, which begin this week, til has helped to make his candidacy visible.

Visible doesn't mean viable; at least it hasn't ...; far. But it is now possible for survey takers at others looking for political trends to go doorbe ringing in Middle America and discover small nur bers of real voters with a positive, or casual intere in finding out what Mr. McCarthy is up to.

Depending on the poll, 2 to 10 percent of the electorate express an interest in voting for him. Tiwide variation may reflect a statistical margin error or the dimness with which his candidacy perceived. More likely, it reflects the way differ. polisters frame and pose their questions.

The real question seems to be whether Mr. Carthy can sustain a perception of himself a. national candidate. He has been saying for mon that he will finally be on the ballot in 40 to states. A survey hy The New York Times last we reported that he was securely on the ballot in states, and strongly indicated that he is unlikely reach even 30.

Seeking the Protest Vote

It will be difficult enough for Mr. McCarthy overcome to any noticeable degree the reluctanvoters have traditionally shown to "waste" the ballots in Presidential elections by casting prote. votes for noncontenders.

Still, it is not hard to imagine that even 2 or percent of the vote could trip the balance between the Democratic and Republican tickets in some the states in which Mr. McCarthy's presence on th ballot is either certain or reasonably so-key state such as Illinois, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Michigan, New York.

The candidate contends that he will be claiming the votes of independents who might otherwise sta home, but that is another untested thesis. The cor mon assumption in political circles is that the vot for this former Democrat would nearly all be sutracted from Mr. Carter's column.

Will people really vote for Mr. McCarthy sime because they think he deserves to be heard? Or w they wait to hear him? The repeal of the campaig-spending law and the strengthening of the "equ time" provision of the Federal Communications As are not the only planks in his platform but they arthe only ones that have been communicated to : discernible degree so far.

The others, which Mr. McCarthy will unveil in series of television talks if he can raise the fundtouch on tax reform, defense spending and energy Mr. McCarthy promises to chop deeply into the Pentagon's budget and to require Detroit to stor building hig cars—proposals, whatever their merits; that seem unlikely to stir much enthusiasm amou! the independent voters he hopes to address.

Even more remote from the daily concerns o those voters is his Hamiltonian advocacy of a revival of the Electoral College as a meaningful part of the constitutional system. On Oct. 8th, Mr. Mc-Carthy plans to convene an assembly of electors pledged to his candidacy and to reveal at that time the name not only of the Vice Presidential candidate on his ticket for November but also the names of potential cabinet officers in a McCarthy Adminis

The personal following he won in 1968 when he challenged Lyndon Johnson and the Vietnam war has long since melted away. Traveling around the country by himself to address small fundraising gatherings, without an entourage of any kind, Mr. Mc-Carthy must recognize that this is so. Yet there is a sense in which 1968 seems never to have ended for

The most brutal comment that has been made 50 far on the quixotic nature of his quest came at the end of a five-minute commercial that he himself broadcast this month on network relevision. It was a film clip of a crowd in a large auditorium, on its feet and passionately chanting, "We want Genel We want Genel?

it was obvious that the film was out of date. in fact, it was shot in Santa Barbara, Calif., in 1968. This is 1976 and Mr. McCarthy hasn't heard a chant like that yet. But if he gets some satisfaction out of playing his old movies to a national audience, it is tair to assume that he is waiting to hear that same sweet siren call again.

Washington now disclaims that aid pledge, saying such aid was contingent upon Hanoi's complete compliance with the accords of the Paris peace talks.

Kissinger Is In Africa

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger is now deep into his urgent shuttle diplomacy in southern Africa. It still is not clear, though, whether he is moving in a straight line that will lead to diplomatic solutions, or on a merry-go-

Last week's movements were closely planned. He met first in Tanzania with President Julius K. Nyerere, then in Zambja with President Kenneth A. Kaunda to inform those two important black leaders of his intentions. He went to Pretoria where he met with Prime Minister John Vorster and possibly with Rhodesia's Prime Minister Ian D. Smith. Tomorrow he will return to Zambia and Tanzania to report to Mr. Kaunda and Mr. Nyerere. All that activity is designed to (1) break a deadlock in negotiations over the independence of South-West Africa, the territory Pretoria rules against a United Nations mandate: (2) force Mr. Smith to accept the principle of eventual black rule in Rhodesia, and convince black Rhodesian guerrillas to resume their negotiations, and (3) press Mr. Vorster to reform apartheid practices in South Africa.

One reason it has been difficult to see whether Mr. Kissinger is on a fruitful course is that all the African leaders he has met—black and white—publicly have taken hard lines. Mr. Nyerere said he still believes only war will settle the issue in Rhodesia, for example, and Mr. Smith has said again he will never yield power. Those positions might lead to a pessimistic assessment, or they might be, as Mr. Kissinger has suggested, rhetoric for purposes of negotiating later on.

Meanwhile, the violence continues in South Africa. More than 300 persons, mainly blacks, have been killed. Last week six people reportedly were killed in demonstrations in Johanneshurg protesting Mr. Kissinger's visit, and 16 during a strike that kept tens of thousands of workers away from their jobs at white-owned businesses in Johannesburg and other cities.

China to Russia: No Change Now

Peking has rejected messages of condolence on the death of Mao Tsetung from Communist Parties in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, indicating that for now, at least, China's hostility toward Russia remains unchanged.

There had been speculation that with Chairman Mao gone, Peking's attitude might change, because it was Mao who had directed China's split with the Kremlin. On several occasions during the last two decades Chinese and Soviet forces have clashed on the long border between the two countries and at times the threat of war seemed real.

After Mao's death, the Soviet Communist Party sent a brief message of sympathy, believed to be the first inter-party communication since the 1960's. Peking officials rejected the gesture because as one Chinese official said: "We have no party-to-party relations with them."

Still No Law of the Sea

The fifth session of the United Nations I aw of the Sea Conference has ended in New York without an agreement on the most important issue, how to control the exploitation of minerals in the deep seabeds of the world's seas and oceans. The failure was expected. The question now whether the United States and a few other countries with advanced, technology will unilaterally begin to mine the wealth of the seas.

The conference broke down because of a dispute between the developing countries, which wanted an international scahed authority to control all the exploitation, and the developed countries, which wanted some degree of autonomy.

Secretary of State Henry A. Klasinger has warned that in the absence of an international treaty. America would unilaterally begin to mine the scabeds. A sixth session of the sca law conference will be held in May; there is sim hope for an agreement beyond the speculation that developing countries may feel greater pressure to Teach agreement when they see that they are being left out of any role in the scabed exploration.

Until Successor Is Found, There Will Probably Be Collective Leadership

Without Mao, China Is Even Less Fathomable

By FOX BUTTERFIELD

HONG KONG—With the end of the elaborate memorial services for Chairman Mao Tse-tung, China now begins the task its great "Helmsman" was unable to fulfill: the search for new leaders to continue his unfinished revolution.

Who the leaders will be and how closely they will bew to Mao's demanding revolutionary vision are questions few of China's 800 million people or analysts in Hoog Kong can confidently answer.

At his death, Mao left no designated successor. Indeed, over the years he toppled a series of men he felt weren't ready for power, including most recently last spring the former Deputy Prime Minister, Teng Hsiao-ping.

To complicate the situation, by an irony of history, China this year has elso lost its head of government, Prime Minister Chou En-lai, and its equivalent of a head of state, Chu Teh. The country has been involved in a hitter political campaign, and has been shaken by a devastating earthquake. Public discipline has begun to break down, and there have even been reports of bank robberies and a police

It seems unlikely that these troubles seriously threaten the Communist regime, but if there are any clues to the events to come, they might lie in the repeated calls in the Chinese press last week to carry Chairman Mao's "cause" and the constant appearances of China's surviving leaders in strict party rank.

The most likely course, this suggests, is for a transitional collective leadership, built around the current senior party leaders. Presumably, for the sake of party unity and since none of them exercises dominant power, they will hold roughly to China's present course. Or, as an editorial in Peking's papers said, to follow an injunction hy Mao to "act according to principles laid down."

The highest-ranking man in China is Hua Kuofeng, a tall, burly, crew-cut party administrator who was made First Vice-Chairman of the party and Prime Minister last April after an extraordinary dayloog demonstration by 100,000 people in Peking. At the time, Mr. Hua was regarded as a compromise choice, acceptable to all sides in Peking.

Although Mr. Hua was relatively obscure only a year ago, he seems to have swiftly established a centrist position for himself, echoing the rhetoric of the antirightist campaign, but apparently with little fervor. In this, some analysts think, Mr. Hua may be a good representative of a second generation of Chinese leaders, a post-Maoist man. He recognizes the need not to alienate China's leftists, or so-called "radicals," while quietly carrying out a more pragmatic course.

Although there is no definite evidence, some analysts suspect the late Prime Minister Chou may have spotted Mr. Hua and helped bring him up so he could eventually assume his present role.

After Mr. Hua come the other three surviving members of what was once the nine-member standing committee of the party Polithuro, the nation's highest decision-making body: Wang Hung-wen, a leftist former textile-mill cadre from Shanghai who is about 40 years old; Yeh Chim-ying, ailing 78-year-old Minister of Defense, and Chang Chum-chiao, a smooth though somewhat shadowy former Shanghai party organizer who like Mr. Wang rose to prominence in the Cultural Revolution.

Of these three, Mr. Wang is considered too young and Mr. Yeh too old to take control over a long period of time. That leaves Mr. Chang as the strongest possible rival for Mr. Hua. He is highly regarded as being capable, and his additional post as head of the general political department of the armed forces gives him further authority.

Several other key figures could be advanced to the standing committee of the Polithuro: Chen Hsilin, the commander of the vital Peking military region and a party "moderate," Wn Teh, Mayor of Peking, another veteran administrator, and Chiang Ching, Chairman Mao's widow, an outspoken advocate of his ideas.

More important than the leaders themselves, perhaps, is the question of how faithfully Mao's successors will carry out his ideas. For China's people, this is the critical issue.

Mao's faith was a stern, demanding one, and the measures he advocated, designed to prevent Communist China from slipping back into the bureaucratic ways of traditional China, or the "revisionism" of the Soviet Union, were not always popular. Since the Cultural Revolution, Mao had made workers give up their bonuses and wage raises, ordered millions of urban students to resettle the countryside after graduation from school, and required scientists and party cadres to spend much of their tima in manual labor. Entrance to China's universities was made dependent on a student's political background, and the emphasis in medicine was switched to rural bealth care.

To some extent, China's radicals and moderates can be divided by their attitude toward these policies. But the situation is complicated by bitter personal animasity, and many Chinese cannot be grouped with either faction.

Whoever emerge as China's new leaders will inherit an economy that has achieved a remarkable record of growth, but one which faces difficulties. Over the last 15 years, China's industrial production has increased by nearly 10 percent a year, its agricultural output by 2 to 4 percent. Under Mao's guidance—and Mr. Chou's—China huilt nuclear weapons, launched satellites and has become a major oil producer. But a common sight in China is still to see peasants spreading fertilizer on their fields, and China's population has been growing about 2 percent a year, not far behind the growth in the food ootput.

Mao himself wavered in the view of what would come after him, though he was realistic enough to recognize, that he had not placed an immutable stamp on China. In 1,000 years, he once said, even Mary and Lenin might "appears at the midiculous."

Marx and Lenin might "appear rather ridiculous."

Last spring, in one of the last quotations attributed to him, he turned back to his own belief in the inevitability of struggle. "Without struggle there can be no progress. With a population of 800 million, bow can we do away with struggle." It was a battle the chairman would have relished.

The War Wrecked the Economy, but Vietnam Has Experienced Leadership

Hanoi Hopes to Rebuild With U.S. Help

By NAYAN CHANDA

HONG KONG—As they reconstruct Vietnam after three decades of war and revolution, the leaders in Hanoi are looking toward their recent enemy, the United States: They want American capital and technology to develop their energy resources and agriculture.

Hanoi believes that normalization of relations with Washington will not be long delayed, despite the compulsions of American electoral politics which apparently helped upset Vietnamese diplomatic moves at the United Nations last week. Since United States forces have been withdrawn from mainland Southeast Asia, Hanoi seems inclined to place less emphasis oo instigating a "people's war" there than in developing fruitful cooperation with its neighbors.

The economic and social difficulties confronting Hanoi's leaders are enormous. As the war ended, the South's artificial economy, supported by hage transfusions of American aid, was wrecked. The flight of the owners and a lack of imported raw materials had led to the closing of many factories. Unemployment, aggravated by the disbanding of the former South Vietnamese armed services, reached 3.5 million. An acute shortage of draught animals, agricultural implements and lack of irrigation slowed the agricultural recovery. The 300,000 tons of unexploded hombs and shells in Vietnam's soil continued to take a human toll.

The first objective of the new leaders is to achieve self-sufficiency in food and reducing enemployment. The Hanoi Government hopes to bring 1.5 million hectares of additional land under cultivation and resettle 8 million people from the overcrowded cities as part of a drive toward that objective.

More than 1.5 million people have already left cities for their villages or for development areas called the new economic zones. It is helieved that with work the fertila lands in the South could soon make the country self-sufficient in food and even turn it into a major exporter of agricultural products and help redress a trade imbalance.

At present, China provides rice, machinery, oil, textiles and other consumer articles on a long-term interest-free loan basis. The Soviet Union and other East European countries provide heavy machinery and industrial raw materials and import a small quantity of agricultural products and recently some readults was a lother from Saigne's mile.

ready-to-wear clothes from Saigon's mills.

To administer the reconstruction, Vietnam has the advantage of an unusually experienced leadership. Most Government and party leaders, from the older figures such as Le Duan, the party secretary, and Prime Minister Pham Van Dong, to the "younger" ministers such as 49-year-old Mrs. Nguyen Thi Binh, were in Ho Chi Minh's ranks during the anti-French resistance more than two decades ago.

Policy differences and debates have been resolved within the limited circle of the top leadership. Consensus inside the party and neutrality between Moscow and Peking have become so much of an enshrined policy that anybody calling for a campaign against "capitalist roaders" inside the party or advocating alignment with either of the great Communist powers would be condemned as heretic.

The spparent unity does not indicate total ideological unanimity. There has been speculation about differences between the Southern Provisional Revolutionary Government leadership and that of Hanol. This is largely due to the lingering notion, fostered by Hanol during the war for tactical reasons, that the Southern group had a mind of its own.

But, since the end of the war, no doubt has been left about the supreme role of the North Vietnamese Worker's Party in running the South's affairs. Barring a few non-Communist intellectuals, most southern leaders have been revealed as workers party members. With their colleagues in Hanol, many of whom also are southerners, they have devoted their lives to realizing the common dream of a unified and Socialist Vietnam.

While leadership differences along the North-South lines are unlikely, certain foreign observers in Hanoi detect differences of emphasis io implementing the commonly accepted program. Some leaders, especially from the army and security services, are seen as particularly concerned about order and security. This line is joined by ideologues such as Truoog Chinh who are preoccupied with strengthening the dictatorship of the proletariat and creation of a Socialist man. Others, such as Pham Vao Doog, lay greater emphasis oo promoting economic development as well as reconciliation with the non-Communist world.

Outside the Communist circle, however, political difficulties persist. In the South the severe loss of cadres in the last years of the war, especially those murdered in the United States Central Intelligence Agency's Phoenix "program," the oeed to control the million former soldiers of the South and the deeprooted anti-Communism of the Saigon bureaucracy and urban middle class have created security troubles. The continued detention of thousands of former Saigon officials in "re-education camps" has enforced calm, but this has been partly offset by the high-handed or maladroit actions of inexperienced cadres from the jungles of the North. Corruption by Saigon's decadent life-style has also been a negative factor.

But what marks the new regime from the one in Saigon is the incorruptibility of its leadership and its ability to admit failures and punish its own corrupt members. An official Saigon daily recently rehuked a small number of "rotten, regressive and autogratic" cadres for arbitrary arrests, confiscation of people's property and acceptance of hribes. A number of corrupt officials have already been jailed.

Economics Of Racism in South Africa

By JOHN F. BURNS

JOHANNESBURG-A cartoon in one of the newspapers here last week showed Prime Minister John Vorster, apron tied to his ample waist and broom in hand, greeting Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger at the door of Mr. Vorster's lo homes and offices, on farms and factory floors, from one eod of South Africa to the other, whites are learning to take over medial tasks normally performed by blacks. Last week, a three-day protest strike io Johannesburg, the second in three weeks, halved the black labor force. It was a telling demonstration of the potential that black workers have to cripple ao economy that has been underpinned for decades by an inexhaustible supply of cheap, docile and unorganized labor.

"Excuse the mess," the Prime Minister was saying, "but the help hasn't turned up."

After three mooths of battling with heavily armed police and a death toll of more than 300, demonstrators in the black townships evidently have decided that political power, for them, is more likely to grow out of idle lathes and abandoned brooms than the barrels of guns, which the law in any case denies them. The message has permeated a white community that has become joured to the daily bloodshed in the townships, prompting insistent pleas for racial reform from the normally conservative captains of

The scene in Johannesburg, economic hub of the country, gave a foretaste of the disaster the corporate baroos wish to avert. Building sites stood idle, textile plants barely ticked over, delivery trucks sat in rows outside warehouses.

The extent to which the country's 4.2 million whites bave been sustained by the labor of its 18 million blacks is starkly apparent in the Government's own statistics, which suggest that scarcely any sector of the economy could function for long without black workers. Of the 4.9 million fulltime workers registered last year, slightly over balf, 2.7 million, were black, 1.5 million were white. 526.740 were of mixed race, and 181,066 were Asian. The dominant role played by blacks is more evident from the industry-by-industry breakdown. In gold mining, the pillar of the economy, the labor force of 380,091 included 341,575 blacks. Figures for other sectors show a similar ratio: coal mining, 190,596 (134,012); construction, 446,086 (309,094); textiles, 97,628 (66,939); and food processing, 159,577 (103,286). Only in the public sector were the averages significantly lower: In public service, 461,948 (178,530); and the railways, Figures for income by the various race groups show a huge disproportion. Whites, constituting 30.6 percent of the fulltime labor force, earned 68.2 percent of the wages and salaries in 1973. Blacks, 55 percent of the labor force, earned 21.1 percent.

The Government asserts, fairly, that black incomes have risen much faster in recent years that whites'. Between 1970 and 1975, the real earnings of whites increased only 1.3 percent, compared with 8 percent for blacks. However, the effort to close a gap which had been progressively widening until the late 1960's made only a vestigial impact on the disparities. Average annual income among urban whites is estimated to be about $6,000; among urban blacks, most of whom are restricted to unskilled work, is between $860 and $1,600. Io June skilled workers in the construction iodustry, almost all white, were earning an average of $122 a week; unskilled workers, almost all black, $39. What is journalists and writers. Only in school teaching, we this means can be judged by the Johannesburg Chamber of Commerce's estimate that the subsistence income for a family of five io Soweto in May 1975 was $136 a month.

With only 5.6 million blacks living in urban areas, less than a third, a truer picture of the bleak economic cir-cumstances in which most blacks live is given by figures for those living in the countryside. In 1973, the average annual income among black farm laborers was $250. But an equal number of blacks were living, if barely, off their own meager plots, earning less than $100 a year. In the trihal homelands, where nearly 8 million blacks live, the vast majority live outside the cash economy altogether, grazing cattle and bartering as their forebears did.

Government officials argue that the relevant comparison is not between whites and blacks in South Africa, but between South Africa's blacks and blacks elsewhere on the continent. By this standard, they say, blacks are vastly better off here than they are elsewhere, "In Johannesburg alone, blacks have a larger purchasing power than the gross national product of Sierra Leone, Malawi and Botswans, to mention only three," one official recently claimed. However, the claim is disputed by many economists. One private estimate puts the average per capita income among South African blacks 12th among African countries.

Officials also point proudly to the existence of a black middle class, claiming that it is the only one of any size oo the continent. Before disorders erupted in Soweto, whites taking the official tour of the township were driven down. Pioneer Avenue, described as the "millionaires row" of the township. In many ways, the street-a few dozen ranchstyle bomes, amid 102,000 boxlike houses built by the Government, with an average of 6.7 people in four roomsserves as a symbol for the economic status of Soweto. At the top sits Ephraim Tshabelala, who built a fortune out of a gas station, a cinema, and a chain of grocery stores; in the middle, a small middle class; and at the bottom, a huge mass of unskilled workers.

Probably the best measure of the middle class is Government's manpower survey, which lists the nu of blacks employed in the various professions. In 1975 the survey showed a total of 11 engineers, 31 chem 63 lawyers, 83 university teachers, 85 doctors and there were 74,980 blacks and 54,928 whites, and any policemen, where there were 31,109 blacks and 22 whites, did blacks outnumber whites.

The growth of the middle class has been artificrestrained by the limited opportunities for vocational professional training and by the system known as reservation." Enshrined in law and jealously guarded the white trade unions, the system sets aside certain sk jobs—accounting for an estimated 2.5 percent of alladustrial jobs—for whites. The restrictions are concentrated in the motor mechanics and building trades. Last year the construction industry, overwhelmingly dependent blacks for heavy labor, there were only 1,424 black artis. compared with 30,912 white ones. Attempts by emplo to persuade unions to open new opportunities to ble are strongly resisted; in construction, it took years blacks to be allowed to lay bricks, and then only sinch, which are covered later by plaster or stucce national strike in the diamond cutting industry was ave at the last minute a few mouths ago when the unagreed to allow blacks to cut stones—but only small o accounting for a minor proportion of the total.

While they support other reforms, industrial execut. are candid about their reasons for opposing wider un ization among blacks. In many sectors, especially min employers claim that the rapid wage increases of the 1 five years have already driven their profit margins dan ously low. In gold mining, where experienced black minimal can earn up to $200 a week, less than half the $552 n mum paid to whites working underground, a decision equalize minimum pay scales for the two groups would industry experts say, barkrupt at least 16 of the 42 mag. now in operation. The same is probably true for m other industries, especially when the plunging gold phas driven business into the depths of a recession.

A Hitch in the Bergman Plea Bargaining

The sentencing of Bernard Bergman, the New York mursing home entrepreneur, has caused public complaint and profound disagreement in the law and judicial communities and bas prompted debate about the seemingly arhitrary and imperfect nature of sentencing. Last week, Mr. Bergman, the central figure in the investigation of fraud and abuses in the state's nursing homa industry, began serving a four-month prison term for the Federal crimes of Medicaid and tax fraud. At the same time, he was senteoced in State Supreme Court to a year's confinement for tha crime of bribing a public official. Now Mr. Bergman's lawyers, charging that the plea bargaining under which he admitted guilt had been breached, are seeking to withdraw the plea of guilty to tha state indictment. The four-mooth Federal secteoce imposed last June, was widely criticized as too lenient. The seotence seemed not to meet public expectations of just punishment for a man whom Government and independent investigators accused of allowing helpless aged and ill patients to suffer poor care and living conditions.

Significantly, these abuses were not what Mr. Bergman was indicted for and pleaded guilty to. In the pleabargaioing process the prosecutor and lawver for the accused negotiate the cooditions and extent to which the accused will agree to admit guilt, and forego trial. A prosecutor may inform the judge of the accused person's "cooperation," but it is the judge who decides the sentence; he is not bound by the prosecutor's bargain.

For Mr. Bergman's guilty plea to Federal and state charges, the indictment of his son was dropped and the Bergmans granted immunity from arther prosecution. In exchange, Mr.

Bergman promised to repay the stolan Medicaid funds (the figure agreed to was $2.5 millioo) and to tell prosecutors what he knew about matters involving political influence.

Another term of the bargain, reached between Mr. Bergman and Federal and state prosecutors which is now in dispute, was that Mr. Bergman would receive no prisoo term other than the four-month Federal senteoce. When State Supreme Court Justice Aloysius Melia imposed the added ooe-year term Mr. Bergman's lawyers said they would withdraw the guilty plea.

The vagaries of sentencing are well documented. Judges may focus on differeot aspects of a case and apply different weight to the same factors.

A prime example is that Federal Judge Marvin E. Frankel said that in his decisioo he considered Mr. Berg-man's age (65), his reputation, his health, and the unlikelihood of recidivism. Judge Melia said Mr. Bergman's crime and his "shilly-shallying" over restitutioo showed him as a greedy, "unscrupulous and corrupt individual."

The Mirex in Lake Ontario

The New York State Department of Environmental Conservation has warned of the danger of Mirex, a toxic compound, in Lake Ootario. After stories in The New York Times brought widespread atteotion to the Mirex threat, the department announced last week it would cancel a salmon-stocking program io the lake, recoosider building a $10 million fish hatchery nearby and stop sports fisherman from keeping their catch.

Peter A. A. Berle, the state's Environmental Cooservation Commissioner sioce May, called the contamination of the lake "an eovironmental tragedy of the first order." He said the department had not been as responsive as it should have been to the problem. Asked why the department had not acted before the publicity, he said that io the past, information on fish and wildlife, the traditional realm of conservatioo officials, was not well iotegrated with data oo chemicals affecting the environment, that the department had first to study research on Mirex, and, before it could act, get certification from the state Health Department of a public health danger.

City Schools Open, Uneasily

As are the suburbs, New York City is starting the school year with serious reductions in staff and services.

• There are 47,000 teachers for the system's 1.1 million pupils, 5,000 fewer than were employed last June and 15,000 fewer than the year before; classes will obviously be larger. In 1974, the school system tried to maintain a limit of 31 pupils in an elementary school class, 32 in junior high and 33 in high school Last year most classes had three or four pupils more. This year classes of 40 and sometimes higher will not be uncommon.

· There will be fewer opportunities, in some cases none at all, for students to receive counseling, remedial help or to engage in afterschool activities, and a number of courses will be eliminated.

N.Y. Has Money Coming In

New York State is for the moment in the position of having to turn away people offering it money.

• The state's Housing Finance Ageocy, whose boods just a year ego were unmarketable—bringing the state close to default—last week sold a $149 million issue quickly. It was e convincing sign that the state is recovering from its financial crisis, Orders of $100 million were turned back. Woy the switch in huyer attitudes? Primarily because of the state's success io putting the housing agency on a sound financial basis.

• The state's lottery, which was resumed two weeks ago after an 11mooth suspension, is selling tickets faster than they can be printed. About 18 million of the $1 tickets were sold in the first week. The popularity apparently arises because under the new lottery players learn immediately whether they are

Between Elections, They Are Feeble and Dormant

Wakeup Time for N.Y. Parties

By FRANK LYNN

It's that time of year for the political parties in New York. Like Rip van Winkle, they awaken at pulmary and election time and stretch their flabby muscles, if any exist. After election day, it's back to sleep again,

The political parties, like many social and fraternal groups, are casualties of an era when government is the prime dispenser of social welfare, when cities are decaying and the middle class fleeing, when politics and politicians are held in eveo less than usual public esteem, when mayors and governors increasingly turn to civil service and outside professionals rather than party loyalists to fill key posts and when authority-and-discipline, the sine qua non for a political machine, is no longer unquestioned.

Last week's primary helped prove the point. City Council President Paul O'Dwyer was the Democratic state committee choice for the United States Senate nomination. Yet better than half the Democratic county organizations in the state refused to abide by that choice. Mr. O'Dwyer did beve the support of the supposedly powerful New York City Democratic organizations, but it didn't do him much good. He did not win a single county in the state and only two of 67 Assembly Districts in the city.

Similarly, in the Republican primary, aides of Senator James L. Buckley had to activate their volunteer supporters to turn out the vote in counties where the Republican organization workers yawned rather than worked. These are oot the only signs of decay. The Republican Party in New York City is virtually nonexistent except in some white, middle class areas. Almost all the county organizations of both major parties operate out of inelegant headquarters supported by the often small proceeds of an annual fund-raising dinner.

Many of the election district captains, the so-called front line soldiers of the organizations, have long since fled the city but keep up their ties with the organizations in the city to protect ectual or prospective patronage opportunities.

There are exceptions the affluent Nassau Republican organization headed by Joseph M. Margiotta and the Erie County Democratic organization under Joseph F. Crangle. Both combine strong leadership and old-fashioned loyalty, the chief characteristics of past political machines, with well financed modern computer technology.

Another indication of the decline of the parties is that fewer major candidates are the products of the organization or identify with it once they are nominated.

Daniel P. Moynihan, the Democratic senatorial candidate. came into government as a technician 22 years ago. His opponent, Senator James L. Buckley, was a wealthy businessman and idealogue. Both would undoubtedly smiff at a political clubhouse.

If a candidate feels he must meet with one, it's over lunch or dinner at an out-of-the-way restaurant -- something akin to an illicit liaison.

on the party apparatus in New York. He had entrusted his preconvention strategy here to Vice President Rockefeller

Party "bosses" are to be neither seen nor heard in public. Only President Ford, of the major candidates, is relying and company and has no alternative at this late date. The New York Republican organization will have op tional responsibility for the Ford campaign here. Howe in the case of the Democratic Presidential campaign the Buckley and Moynihan campaigns, the candidates to the Carter campaign, following a Kennedy tradif-reached out of state for its New York director, fine Gerard F. Doherty of Massachusetts. The theory is that outsider has no New York enemies or argument to se Mr. Doberty will deal directly with the Atlanta high mand of the Carter organization.

Both major perties may be weak but they are relative united at the moment. The divisions of Vietnam and "reform" versus "regular" battles of the 1960's have ceded in the Democratic Party. The state's Republi, Party has been spared the national conservative-mode. split because the Conservative Party in effect serves at safety valve for discontented conservatives.

its part, the industry, convinced that some form of control would be passed, concentrated on winning the most favorable deal possible, ultimately supporting the weaker version passed by the House. To win this compromise, the industry lobbyists employed some favorite strategems such as estimates that the cost of the testing program would be as high as $2 billion. The General Accounting Office put the figure at $100 to $200 million.

There are a number of supporters of toxic substance control who question whether the legislation in its watered down form would have any meaningful impact. For one thing, the version adopted was closest to the House model in that it requires the agency to defend a delay in marketing a new chemical in court if the company objects. This, say Government officeals femiliar with such litigation, can use up even the most energetic depariment's resources.

Also, the budget of the Toxic Substance Control Office, stready in op-eration, was limited to $10.1 million for the first year, and will be only moderately higher thereafter, which environmentalists considered far from adequate. The job of the office will be to review the notification forms for 500 to 1,500 newly developed chemicals each year, and decide which will need full testing. If the agency wants to ban a chemical, it may face expensive legal challenges. Moreover, the agency is similarly responsible for evaluating 30,000 substances already on the market,

In addition, a full test for cancer causing properties using animals takes about two and a half years, and that lengthy period is questioned.

Those who believe the legislation and the funding are inadequate, cite the experience of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, which last year spent $109.8 million to protect workers from many of the same substances and has been unsuccessful, even its staumchest supporters agree, in controlling more than a handful of harmful chemicals.

It is believed that tests generally will expose hazardous chemicals. But, Glenn Schweitzer, director of the toxic substance office here, said, "It's unreasonable to think that some potentially harmful chemical woo't slip at this lagislation as another tool to reduce the problem of incidents. There's no way to eliminate harmful chemical incidents."

In particular, Mr. Schweitzer is concerned that his office will necessarily have to concentrate on the most widely used substances, and he believes that the greatest hazards are in the little-used chemicals produced by smaller, less sophisticated companies.

Another concern, expressed by Dr. Samuel S. Epstein, a toxicologist at the University of Illinois who originally drafted the legislation in 1970, is that the data from the tests, which are to be conducted by the companies, can be misleading or even falsified. Dr. Epstein cites past cases, including a recent study by the Environmental Protection Agency that found that for 23 of the 24 most common pesticides, the companies' test data, when re-examined, proved inadequate in determining

Dr. Epstein's active interest in the legislation is rare in the scientific community. Although there appears to be latent support among scientists for the bill, almost none have worked actively for it. (Scientists employed by the chemical industry, of course, have spoken only for their companies.)

"There's a general patina of indif-ference," Dr. Epstein said. "Periodically, I try to muster support. It's very, very difficult, Reaction of the scientific community to legislative matters is one of almost total indiffer-

Supporters of stronger legislation believe that the current bill is hetter than no bill at all. "It's a start," said Janie Kinney, counsel to the Consumer Protection and Finance Subcommittee of the House Commerce Committee: "In three years, when this comes up for renewal, there'll be another chance.'

According to legislative staff members, the bill has now passed its toughest hurdle—the conference committee -and now seems assured of easy passage. Some uncertainty over whether the President will sign it persists, but current public interest in toxic substances, combined with support from most of the chemical industry, makes a veto unlikely.

An Executive's Oversight

Anthony L. Conrad, president and chairman of the RCA Corporation, has resigned from both posts after admitting that he had not until recently filed personal income tax returns from 1971 to 1975. Mr. Conrad said that his tax problems were purely personal and-were unrelated to company business. Mr. Conrad was named president last November in what was described as a revolt against Robert W. Sarnoff, pany's declining profits. Under Mr. Conrad, profits had soared. However because of the sudden change in its executive leadership, RCA has had to withdraw a planned public offering of five million shares of common stock.

A Russian Test of Friendship

Overcoming bureaucratic obstacles and considerable physical difficulties, Andrei Sakharov, the dissident Soviet physicist, and his wife, Yelena Bonner, traveled more than 5,000 miles into the Siberian wilderness to visit Andrei N. 5,000 miles into the Siberian wilderness to visit Andrei N. Tverdokhlebov, banished there earlier this year for his public concern over Soviet political prisoners. Mr. Sakharov, who has a heart condition, and his wife have earned a reputation for traveling through Russia to support fellow dissidents, but this journey took on almost epic proportions. They waited 27 hours for tickets on a plane. No one would drive them the additional 27 miles to Mr. Tverdokhlebov's house; they walked. Police officials harassed them continuously; secret police agents had moved next door to Mr. Tverdokhlebov by the time they arrived. Nonetheless, the Sakharovs said, they enjoyed a good visit.

Rizzo Recall Petitions Validated

The validity of petitions demanding a recall election of Frank L. Rizzo, Mayor of Philadelphia, has been upheld by a city judge. Barring further court action, Mr. Rizzo faces a recall referendum in November. A Board of Elections in Philadelphia had invalidated enough of the signatures on the petitions to put the total number below the amount necessary for a recall vote. But the court ruled that the board, staffed by political friends of Mr. Rizzo, had used "incorrect," "arbitrary," and "unconscionable" methods to climinate signatures. Among the names eliminated were those who abbreviated their first names and those who failed to list their middle initials.

We've said it before; we're saying it again. The longer we delay development of a comprehensive national program to ensure adequate energy for the future, the more unmanageable the problem becomes. The problem is multi-faceted, highly complicated.

The answers aren't all that easy to come by. But in every critical situation, there's a point where debate must give way to decision-and action. With energy, we think that point has been reached. In the weeks ahead, we're going to be speaking out on some of the tough decisions that must be made ... pushing for commonsense, peopleoriented approaches.

It is our responsibility to do so, as meaningfully and forcefully as we can.

Evidence Grows On Danger To the Ozone

After weighing the available evidence on the role some spray cans may be playing in the depletion of the earth's ozone shield, a committee of the National Academy of Sciences has concluded that the threat is serious if not yet measurable and that Federal regulation is necessary on later than two years from oow.

The committee's report, prepared at the request of Federal regulatory agencies, concurred with the theory that fluorocarbons are depleting the stratospheric layer that protects the planet from the sun's lethal ultraviolet rays, with potentially dangerous effects oo health and climate. But it called the exteot and pace of the depletico uncertain. The ozoce layer begins 7 to 12 miles above the earth's surface and extends up to 30 miles; some molecules of the propellant gases rise rapidly but others, according to current estimates, take a century.

The committee therefore recommended that more measurements, of the ozone layer and of fluorocarbon drift be taken before a ban oo fluorocarbon propellants is promulgated. The recommendation is based on the calculation that in two years ozone depletion by fluorocarboos will increase by no more than one-sixth of I percent A number of companies have already substituted other atmospherically narmless propellants for fluorocarbons; an ioteroational program of ground, rocker, satellite and palloon ooservation is underway.

Women and the Priesthood

By adding to its canons a stipulatioo that requirements for ordinatioo apply equally to women and men, the Episcopal Church bas brought to an end a decade of formal debate oo whether womeo can be members of the clergy. It is the last of the major American Protestant denominations to da so.

Some in the 2.9-million-member wing of the worldwide Anglican communion have maintained that permitting the ordinatioo of workeo would be theologically unacceptable. The Episcopal Church, like the Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox, believes in Apostolic succession, the uninterrupted transmission of spiritual authority through a succession of bishops, Traditionalists recall that the Apostles were male.

In the debate at the church's legislative conventioo last week, those arguments were voiced again. So were those of members of the church, clerical and lay, who regard womeo's ordination as a matter of "simple justice." The divisions were reflected in the responses to a compromise proposal by the Presiding Bishop, Joho M. Allin, that womeo be ordained io dioceses that would accept them; they ranged from, "What I heard was -separate hut equal" to "very realistic" to "I'd rather have it than nothing at all." That proposal was rejected as "mind-boggling" to implement; 2 years ago, 4 bishops had ordained 11 women, and were censured.

More Divisions Among Lutherans

The Rev. Rudolph P. F. Ressmeyer. a leading moderate in a prolonged doctrinal and political dispute in the Missouri Synod of the Lutheran Church, has formally resigned as president of the church's Atlantic District. The resignation, the third by a moderate among the decomination's equivalent of a bishop in less than a year, is Yet another sign that there is de facto servative body.

The 2.8 million member synod, founded in 1847 hy Saxon immigrants to the present state of Missouri seeking haven from the liberal rationalism that dominated religion in Europe, is the fifth largest, and one of the most traditional, of American Protestant churches, Its fundamental tenet is the absolute inerrancy of the Bible; ecclesiastically, central synod policies are binding.

The present controversy began in 1969, over an issue most Protestant churches settled a half century ago, the application of modero scholarship to the Bible. This year, the denomination's president refused to permit the ordination of graduates of a dissenting seminary, and officially ousted four district presidents, Pastor Ressmeyer among them, when they refused to obey his order.

Pastor Ressmeyer has said he will work with a new church, called the Association of Evangelical Lutheran Churches, to coovince Missouri Synod

Low Tar Better, No Smoking Best

New research has provided the first definitive evidence to support the belief that smoking cigarettes lower in tar-nicotine cootent is better for health than smoking higher tar-nicotine cigarettes. Not surprisingly, the research also supports prior evidence that not smoking at all is better

The findings are the result of an American Cancer Society survey of deaths and smoking patterns of 1,000,000 American meo and women. The survey showed that 1,000,000 lung-cancer deaths were 26 percent lower among low tar-nicotine smokers than high, and that deaths from heart disease were 14 perceot lower.

But deaths from all causes were still 30 to 75 perceot higher among smokers of low tar-nicotine brands than among people who had oever smoked regularly; people who smoked from one to two packs a day of low tar-nicotine cigarettes bad a higher death rate than those who smoked less than a pack a day of high tarnicotine cigarettes.

For the purposes of the study, lowtar-nicotioe content was defined as fewer than 1.2 milligrams of nicotine and, with few exceptions, fewer than 17.6 milligrams of tar. No scientific analysis of the long-term effects of possible previously because most low tar-nicotine brands have been relatively only recently marketed. A number of researchers had been concerned that low tar-nicotine smokers might iocrease their death rate because they would inbale more deeply, and take in more carbon monoxide and dioxide, and possibly, damaging "secret" ad-

Russia to Take Friends to Space

The Soviet Uoion has announced its oext cootribution to the interoationalization of space travel will be the training of eight astronauts from its geopolitical satellites to join Russiao fliers on manned missions starting in 1978.

So far. Soviets and Americans have been the only men to fly in space, and, with one notable exception, the Apollo-Soyuz missioo 13 months ago, they have flown separately. Further joiot missioos have been discussed, but not planned. The United States space shuttle, scheduled to begin experimental service in 1979, and routine flights in and out of earth orbit in 1980, will carry Western European scientists, and, eventually, astronauts.

Since the sixties, both nations have cooperated with their allies oo unmanned missions, flying scientific instrument packets and biological experiments for them. Last week, the Soviet Union launched two astrooauts in a spacecraft that carried East German camera equipment. As Western European Communist parties have drifted, Russia has increasingly sought visible demonstrations of the benefits of Eastern Europe's ties with Moscow.

labor force, and the apparent return to the city of some suburban families. Another reason is parents' growing desire to have more say in their children's education, particularly on the "moral" side, and the feeling that tack of discipline and permissiveness are becoming pervasive in the public schools. A turnabout of the antireligioos sentiment of the youth of the last decade is also judged to be a fac-hes in which women have joined the cootabute to enrollments in private schools. The resurging controversy over busing to eod segregation, and the integration issue itself, made for an overwhelmingly white and middleclass enrollment.

Thus the demand for space in private schools has continued, despite tuition increases that make them as expensive as college. At Catholic parochial schools, enrollments, which had declined precipitously, seem to be stabilizing. And at Hebrew day schools, enrollments are so high across the nation that nearly two dozen oew ooes will open this year, about half of them in the New York City area.

Current estimates on private-school enrollment show 30,000 pupils attending more than 70 schools in the New York City area. (Nationwide, enrollment at private schools has grown 13.7 percent in the last six years according to one survey.) The schools of the Archdiocese of New York and the Brooklyn Diocese served 287,800 pupils last year. That figure may fall by 1 percent, coropared with 3.3 per-cent the year before. New York City Hebrew day schools serve 54,000 pupils of the 92,000 estimated for the whole country.

Meanwhile, the crisis in public education is growing. The dropout and suspension rates are increasing. Needior students are facing cutbacks in key services and prospects for improvement are poor.

There have been profound sociological and ethnic changes, too. In 1960, slightly more than 10 percent of the pupils in the city school system were eligible to receive free lunches because they came from low-income families. Today, 51 percent are eligible.

In 1960, almost two-thirds of the city's public school pupils were white. Today two-thirds are black and Hispanic. Some observers like Bayard Rustin look askance at the "coincidence" of the system's new ethnic composition and the drastic cutbacks being made. On the other hand, many whites associate the decline of the public schools to ethnic change, a view that may teod to further weaken them.

Private schools play down the possible benefit they may get from troubles in the public school system. And educators disagree on the extent to which these difficulties and other cultural and sociological factors account for improving prospects in the private and parochial sectors.

That there is improvement is clear, and with it has come a perceptible change. Pupils that go against the traditional stereotype, some from families returning from the suburbs, are appearing. Noo-Catholic, and often black and Hispanic pupils, are turning more frequently to parochial schools in search of a better edocation.

Both the private and parochial schools say they are seeing new kinds of parents, who are more active and academically demanding. Money means more to these less affluent families, as it does to those in which

At the coeducational Dalton School, tuitioo this year is 8 percent higher than last year's, which raoged from $2,187 to $3,407 for some 1,250 students from nursery to high school.

Despite the cost, the headmaster, Gardner P. Dunnao, says, "Applications are much higher than in recent years. And one interesting trend is that 15 percent come from people who once lived to the city, moved to the suburbs, but are now moving back."

As to parochial schools, Monsignor James A. Feeney, the superintendent of schools for the Archdiocese of New York, which has 365 schools serving 150,000 pupils in Manhattan, the Bronz, Staten Island and seven upstate counties, says:

"Five years ago we had serious doubts as to whether we would survive. We feel now we have turned the corner on that."

His counterpart in Brooklyn and Queens, the Rev. Vincent D. Breen, says he is "very optimistic" because of growing parent involvement.

A spokesman for the National Society of Hebrew Day Schools, to which most of the 207 Jewish parochial schools in the New York City area are affiliated, said that the increasing popularity of ethnicity is one reason why those schools were expanding.

David Vidal writes about education for The New York Times.

What Do We Save By Hurting Paraprofessionals?

Some Cuts Are More Stupid Than Others

This school year, as last, the cuts inflicted on public education are larring millions of people in the City of New York.

For the 1.1 million school children, the layoff of thousands of teachers this year, on top of more than 10,000 last year, means still higher class size. In one Manhattan high school this week, 44 students showed up every day for a Regents class in social studies. They are the manhattan high school this week, 44 students showed up every day for a Regents class in social studies. a Regents class in social studies. They sat on radiators and window ledges.

The school and the class are not atypical. The budget cuts also mean fewer course offerings. This year, in order to keep a job teaching French, a high school French teacher had to have more than 16 years' seniority. This means that the teaching of French is rapidly vanishing from our city schools. The same disappearance is true for other languages and other courses some people consider "non-essential"—art, music, physical education and a broad range of additional subjects.

The cutbacks mean a shortage of supplies and facilities—unused laboratories and libraries, gymnasiums and sports equipment, school newspaper offices and printshops.

For the pareots of our school children, the budget cuts in education mean excruciating decisions-to stay in this city or to leave, to dip into funds set aside for college and pay tuition at private or parochial schools, to worry and suffer guilt that you may not be doing the best thing for your child. For hundreds of thousands of poor parents, of course, there is no decision that can be made—they are left with little but anguish.

For those most immediately and directly affected, the laid-off teachers, the cuts mean hardship and indignities never expected when they were encouraged to go into teaching for its professional rewards and especially, for its job security. Whole groups of teachers and those who provide necessary supportive services bave been wiped out or halved. Attendance teachers, guidance portive services bave been wiped out or halved. Attendance teachers, guidance counselors, teachers of the homeboond and other groups—including our youngest and newest teachers—have been hit extremely hard.

Few people will argue that the cuts in education were made with wisdom or foresight. At best, basty, ill-conceived slashing was done under great pressure. At worst, cutting the schools was considered less of a political liability than cotting other services and producing uproar from greater numbers of New Yorkers than public school parents, students and teachers. But one set of cuts stands out as particularly stund because it saves practically nothing of cuts, stands out as particularly stupid, because it saves practically nothing while destroying an important service, and because it mortgages the future to meet the budget exigencies of today. It illustrates more than anything else the self-defeating nature of New York's response to austerity.

Among those laid off by the Board of Education since last year are more than 3,000 school paraprofessionals, nearly a third of a corps of predominantly black and Hispanic women, most of whom bad been plucked from lives of poverty and welfare. They were trained to perform an important service in the schools by assisting teachers. Today's paraprofessional leads small group instruction and provides individual help wherever possible in reading, math and phonics. She tutors, reads stories and acts as a trouble-shooter to identify classroom problems. In many instances, the para can communicate with parents she knows as a neighbor. When a teacher must be absent, the continued presence of a paraprofessional they know helps children accept the teacher covering the class-and is an enormous aid to the new teacher. There is a continuity of learning and authority.

Through the contract the UFT negotiated for paraprofessionals, their salaries and benefits were-upgraded and they were helped to belp themselves with a career ladder program of college study leading to bachelors' degrees and teaching jobs. Thousands were in college while working, a sizeable proportion had won their degrees and several hundred had actually become classroom teachers. For the first time, this group of people had meaningful work that filled a genuine public need—and real hope for the future.

Now, through a combination of layoffs, the budget cuts and the imposi-tion of tuition at the City University, many hundreds are back on unemploy-ment lines and welfare rolls, and the career ladder program is in immediate danger. Summer stipeods-which have made it possible for many of the paras to continue their education over the summer-were denied this summer. The UFT has gone to arbitration on the stipends and expects to win them back. We will fight to retain all aspects of the career ladder program and upbold

But just think how ridiculous these cutbacks are. Public funds go to pay paraprofessiooal salaries, which are oot very high—the average is about $5,200 public funds, we purchase the services of the paras in our schools-services teachers need to belp them do an effective job. We provide a vehicle for integrating the public school staff now and, through the college program, in the future. We belp to break the cycle of poverty and welfare. And, last but not least, we get back a portion of our investment in the taxes paid by these working paraprofessionals and teachers-to-be.

By laying off paras, by denying their stipends, by threatening the college program, we send thousands of people back on unemployment, welfare and Medicaid, now and possibly for years to come. The amount of public funds spent is virtually the same; it may even be rpore, cansidering that peaple an unemployment and welfare don't pay taxes. We are saving next to nothing. But we are denying children the services of the paras, we are pushing far into the future the genuine integration of our school staff and we are once again needlessly placing people on the treadmill of poverty and welfare.

The whole thiog is irrational. It is a powerful example of how allegedly intelligent people can behave foolishly in a time of crisis-and burt us all in

This fall, the School of Visual Arts will be trying to give art students what Brandon Wilde already has.

The ability to see, to visualize spontaneously. To create with the unself-conscious imagination of childhood. But, because our students are much older than young Brandon, they bring with them the conditioning of a controlling world, a world that often diverts a natural talent from taking a natural course.

At the School of Visual Arts in both Day and Evening Programs, the process of becoming an artist is the focus of our curriculum. We understand what it requires, and believe in its possibility to produce personal, original work. We offer Degree and Non-Degree programs in Fine Arts, Media Arts, Photography and Film. Our highly professional faculty helps students to discover fresh ways of seeing while understanding the commercial world they must enter.

Schedules and catalogues for Day, Evening and Saturday Sessions are available now. Registration for the Fall Semester is in process now. Call, write, or come in and talk with one of our special counsellors about our Degree and Non-Degree programs for the development of artists.

Questions and a Yawn

President Ford last week officially launched his campaign for election with an address that limped haltingly to its anticlimax.

Having apparently concluded that nothing more was to be gained from that allegedly non-political, televised performance of "A President at Work," Mr. Ford's managers chose as the site of the opening event the University of Michigan, the President's alma mater and arena of his football exploits. The setting thus combined nostalgia with an emphasis on youth and the

If the formula fell sbort of achieving its intended goal, it was probably because Mr. Ford underestimated the audience's memory of his Presidential record, iocluding the Nixon pardon and the list of vetoed bills. Mr. Ford's original scenario, sketched out with considerable imagination and force in his acceptance speech at Kansas City, had borrowed heavily from Harry Truman's successful run against Congress, Last week it became evident that the strategy of painting a picture of a do-nothing Congress is not easy to repeat under the shadow of a no-saying President.

"The question in this campaign of 1976," Mr. Ford said, "is not who has the better vision of America. The question is who will act to make that vision a reality." The most obvious deficiency in Mr. Ford's opener was precisely the lack of discernible evidence of any vision that might be turned into reality.

The President's most specific proposal was for legislation to aid "every American family that wants to own a home and is willing to work and save for it." To that end, Mr. Ford called for subsidies that would suhstantially reduce the required down payments on homes. But as was the case with his earlier promise to expand the nation's public parkland, the new proposal by candidate Ford seemed to ignore President Ford's negative action in the very area in which he now promlsed positive movement. Specifically, the Presideot last year vetoed a measure to reduce home-buyers' mortgage rates, subsequently giving his approval only after Coogress came back with a less generous subsidy.

The President was well within acceptable campaign

ocratic opponent, was offering "smiles" rather than "specifics" and based bis appeal too vaguely on a call for the voters' "trust."

The fact is that to date both candidates are equally vulnerable to this charge by Mr. Ford. The President has capitalized no less than Mr. Carter on the issue of personal trustworthiness. In the aftermath of Watergate, a pledge of integrity in the White House is, of course, an inevitable and proper ingredient in any candidate's campaign.

But trustworthiness, though crucial, is not enough. Personal integrity is more than ever the indispensable starting point; but it is no substitute for a candidate's obligation to spell out a program in pursuit of credible goals. So far, neither candidate has met that test. Each has assailed the other for being vague, and neither of the two can be faulted for this criticism of his opponent.

Mr. Carter has made some rather general pledges of balancing the Federal budget by 1981 with the use of some $60 billion be expects to flow from an improved economy. Mr. Ford, with comparable lack of specificity, bas pledged the creation of 2.5 million new jobs each year, "affordable" bealth care and the preservation of peace through strength.

"In my Administration," Mr. Ford said at Ann Arbor, "the education needs of America's middle-income families will neither be forgotten nor forsaken." Against a record of a substantial recent drop in the proportion of college attendance among youths from middle-income homes, the question is relevant why the present Ford Administration bas not even begun to do what the next Ford Administration promises to accomplish.

Taking note of recent polls which suggest that many disenchanted voters may stay home in November, Mr. Ford said that if the people are not excited by the candidates, "let them be excited about America." This misses the central point in the relationship between a self-governing people and candidates for high office. The voters' patriotism is oot at issue; their love of America will be of little avail without the service of a leadership capable of charting a steady course,

Perhaps the Presidential debates will breathe life into the campaign. For the moment, the candidates are running a race that leaves the electorate with many questions and a yawn.

S.1: 'Old Monster in New Clothes'

To the Editor:

Any complacent view that S. 1, the mammoth bill to "codify" the Federal criminal code, is permanently dead is unwarranted. It now appears that early in the next Congress, Senator Kennedy and other liberal Senators will cosponsor a substitute bill with a new number, supposedly "clean" and entitled to bipartisan support and early passage. :

Analysis of the 35 or so changes which will be mede in the 800-page S. 1 discloses that although the changes move in the right direction they simply do not go far enough.

Many of the borrors which have aroused widespread public anxiety about the repressive features of S. I will remain intact, or only slightly changed, it should be noted that a more liberal bill, H.R. 12504, introduced in the House hy Representatives Kastenmeier, Mikva and Don Edwards, made more than a thousand changes in S. I end that even then some repressive provisions slipped through.

Analysis of the revised S. 1 is possible even before it emerges from the committee process in view of the announcements as to the areas under discussion for compromise. That analysis discloses that many changes are merely cosmetic; others are limited.

This is a back-up to the Official Secrets Act provision incorporating into statutory law what the Federal prosecutors sought unsuccessfully to achieve hy the Ellsberg-Russo indictments.

Labor will be confrooted with a partial overriding of United States v. En-mons, 410 U.S. 396 (1973). Enmons declined to bold the Federal extortion statute applicable to violence in a legitimate labor dispute. The revised S. 1 will apply the Hobbs Act (extortioo) provisions to violence in a labor dispute except for incidental violence which arises out of picketing.

The revised S. I will permit the President to declare a national defense emergency upon real or threatened. "disturbance of the international relations of the United States" (Angola? South Africa? Korea? Spain?)

If anything, the country is in a more dangerous posture of having its basic freedoms taken away than when S. 1 was an obvious target. The country must be sufficiently sophisticated to spot the old monster, S. I, in its new party clothes. The revised S. #### On Wind Power To the Editor:

Mr. Inglis's letter of Sept. 5 rai two points which should be challeng First, with regard to the Amer Physical Society's "seriously critic review of the Rasmussen Report, neglects to mention that the A.P.S. view was concerned with the di-report issued in 1974. The final rep-

Even ardent proponents of w power are dubious of the ecocon of wind turbine generators, the rejected costs of which are far in exc of current utility costs for coal or clear power plants. (Of course, f cost increases have only a nomiimpact oo the cost of electricity fr fission.) Further, the number of wir mills needed to replace the electric otherwise generated by oil and t nium would be staggering and tainly seen by more than a "few p ple." #### F.B.I.: Undeserved Slur To the Editor:

Campaigning Gov. Jimmy Carts has obviously been grossly misled h vicious distortions frequently aired i the news media about the F.B.I. and carried away by his own campaign oratory.

His reported public assertion a Brooklyn College Sept. 7 that the record of the F.B.L was a "disgrace" when it "ought to be purer than Cae sar's wife" was an unwarranted blanke insult to countless dedicated Ameri' cans undeserving the shir.

For this heedless slander, Mr. Carter owes a prompt apology to thousand. of present and former F.B.I. employeewho have made up the complement o the personnel of an agency that har established a record for excellence and integrity that would be hard to match anywhere. These unnamed countless thousands can match integ rity with Mr. Carter or anyone he can drag out, either from his state of Georgia, any organization he has ever been associated with or anyone from anywhere, including Caesar's wife.

With all their advance ballyhoo. headlined in the news media, zealousprobers, digging for months to come up with positive evidence of the "pervasive internal corruption" they were billed as investigating, have been glaringly unable to produce as promised, and to pretend that they did is a fraud. Reshuffle in Britain... Although it has now been in power for more than 30 months, Britain's Labor party remains an uneasy coalition of left and moderate wings whose rival claims most be kept in delicate balance by any Prime Minister. James Gallaghan's Cabinet reshuffle on the occasion of the departure of Home Secretary Roy Jenkins was an example of that balancing act; but in spite of that it did bring promotions for some of Labor's abler

Two junior Ministers, Roy Hattersley and William Rodgers, were given long-overdue elevations to the Cabinet as Secretary for Prices and Consumer Protection and Secretary for Transport, respectively. Mrs. Shirley Williams, one of the finest talents to emerge since Labor's return to office in 1974, has been shifted from Prices and Consumer Protection to the more prestigious post of Secretary for Education and Science.

There was disappointment among Labor moderates that Mr. Callaghan did not assign the Home Officeone of the Big Three ministries-to Mrs. Williams, who at 46 is widely considered a potential Prime Minister. Instead, Mr. Callaghan rewarded another moderate, Merlyn Rees, who has spent more than two years in the Trustrating job of Secretary for Northern Ireland. Defense Secretary Roy Mason was transferred to the Ulster

With Anthony Crosland remaining Foreign Secretary and Denis Healey continuing to direct Britain's drive for economic recovery and inflation control as Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Callaghan now has about as strong a team as his party's balancing requirements allow, Roy Jenkins will be sorely missed, though Britain's loss will be the European Community's gain when he becomes President of its Commission in Brussels next January.

Mr. Callaghan can take comfort from several recent developments: the overwhelming endorsement by the giant Trades Union Congress of its "social contract" with the Government on wage restraint; the T.U.C.'s strenuous effort to avert a strike hy the Seamen's Union, which could wreck Britain's economic strategy: a narrowing of the foreign trade deficit for August, despite the continuing weakness of the pound; and figures showing fewer strikes in the first half of 1976 than in any like period since 1953.

The Government's problem abroad remains one of convincing financial and husiness circles that Britain can stay with the stern economic measures necessary to curb inflation and lay a sound foundation for recovery-and apply harsher controls if necessary to arrest the flight from sterling.

At home, the Government's political problems are those presented by Labor's unreconstructed left wing, which will mount savage attacks on Mr. Healey's economic policies and even demand a drastic nationalization of major banks at the party conference later this month. If Mr. Callaghan can turn back those challenges, not only the Prime Minister but Britain's friends and allies will begin to breathe more easily.

...Renewal in Canada

والمراوية ويرادي والمواصوص والمتباه ومالمك والماليون ويراضيه بتنظر والمواصية والهالمالية

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau bas carried out an unusually sweeping Cabinet revision in Canada for the most obvious of reasons: A poll shows his Liberal Party commanding support from only 29 percent of the electorate—its lowest standing since 1958 and 18 points mediad his Progressive-Conservative opposition.

In bis effort to provide a new look for a Liberal administration in power for thirteen years-the last eight under his premiership-Mr. Trudeau named seven new ministers whose average age is only 41 and who include two womeo and the first Indian to achieve Cabinet rank in Canada. Three veterans were retired and nine holdovers moved to different ministries.

One major surprise, hut also a reflection of the Cabinet's difficulties in Parliament, was the return of Allan J. MacEachen to his former job as Government leader in the House of Commons, Mr. MacEachen was reluctant to leave the Foreign Ministry after only two years, during which he substantially expanded Canada's ties with developing countries; but he was needed in Commons to replace the veteran Mitchell Sharp, who

The Government's unpopularity derives in large part from problems afflicting many countries: a sagging economy, inflation, high unemployment. But aggravating factors include dissension in Liberal ranks. John Turner, often mentioned as Mr. Trudeau's successor, quit abruptly as Finance Minister a year ago. This year brought the resignations, amid controversy, of two ministers from Ouebec. Mr. Trudeau was savagely criticized for circumstances that barred Taiwan from the Montreal Olympic Games.

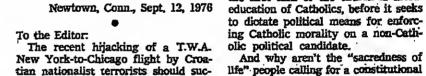

Mr. Trudeau does not have to face the voters until 1979, so there is time for a turnaround in the economy and in his Government's fortunes. But be has never before had to come back from such a low point; and this time be faces a confident Conservative Party under the vigorous new leadership of 37-year-old Joseph Clark. The only certainty is that the next three years will be lively ones on Canada's political fronts.

Sumac Fire

Some say that sumac's color aignals the autumnal equinox, though they cannot readily explain why an occasional branch or even a whole clump turns color in late August. In any case, by now most of the sumacs at the roadside and in the corner of the back pasture begin to look like Sioux war bonnets and are ready to lead the parade right into Indian summer. They are full of the most brilliant reds one will see until the Sumac is native to almost every area of the world except the polar regions, and the name comes almost unchanged from the Arabic down through Old French. The wild species are outcasts in most places, but in earlier times people found many uses for them, in tanning, in dyeing, in cabinet work, as condiments, as a varnish base, even as an oil for candles. And everywhere the birds continue to feast on the generous seed beads of the common staghorn sumac. There is a poisonous species, whose leaves are as dangerous to the unwary as those of poison ivy, but it is rare in our area. Its leaves too are compound, but they are short and rounded, not long and feathery.

Sumac is stubborn and persistent. Give it an inch at the edge of a pasture or along a back road and it will take the proverbial mile. But it does have its own beauty, particularly when autumn turns the equinoctial corner. Crimson is its basic color, but it also achieves a fine, clean vellow, a rich orange and, at times, a splendid purple. One wonders why the legend-makers never gave it credit for lighting the autumn flame in the forest, setting off the whole blaze of color. Legendary or not, there it stands now, full of cool autumn fire, ready to set the whole woodland aflame.

Of Religion and the Presidency

To the Editor:

Thomas P. Slavens (letter Sept. 12) argues that Jimmy Carter's brand of Christianity should not be disturbing because it is really "in the main line of the Christian tradition." Assuming that a tradition with as long and complex a bistory as Christianity has ooe main line, this argument is still not sufficient for some of us who have winced a little at Mr. Carter's description of himself, just as we have winced when his opponent was nominated amid a marathon chorus of "God Bless America."

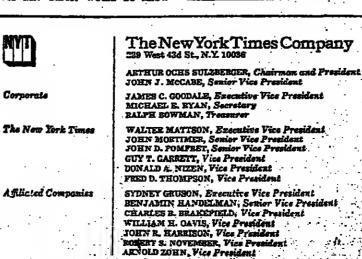

Mr. Slavens likens Mr. Carter to every American President, "with the possible exception of Lincoln, who never joined a church but who was, of course, a committed Christian." That "of course" is just a bit smug, as if to say, "Now who could possibly dream of a good President who wasn't a good Christian!" Andrew Johnson and Rutherford Hayes also never joined a church. Neither did Thomas Jefferson. The author of our Declaration of Independence was, in fact, a closet agnostic and did not originally want to write "endowed by their Creator."

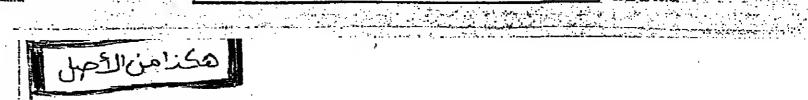

If Mr. Slavens can be too confident of Christianity's scope, so perhaps can Mr. Carter. No one of sound mind believes Mr. Carter would be knowingly bostile or cruel to non-Christians, but could be make a bad decision as President simply out of a lack of awareoess? There is a climate for such mistakes. Even the none-too-evangelical New Jersey State Legislature is considering two-yes, two-hills to reinstitute "nonsectarian" prayer in the public schools. This is hardly a persecution, but it is still an unfair demand on those few who do not wish to pray or meditate in school. The point is that the great totality of America is broader than the main line of Christianity. We have an important and sizable minority of non-Christians, encompassing the most orthodox of Jews and the most unorthodox of atheists, which is not only a part of the American people but a part which has made many valuable contributions. The President owes them the same loyalty be owes every-JONATHAN E. FREEDMAN Princeton, N. J., Sept. 12, 1976

The Myth of Busing: Some Contradictory Evidence

On August 2, 1971, Richard Nixon moves owed much to the rancous husdisavowed, with a bitter anti-busing ing dispute in Boston and to electionstatement, a plan put forward by his year politics; but what about the actual own Department of Health, Education and Welfare for the desegregation of schools in Austin, Texas. The next day, in little-noticed testimony, Dr. David H. Porter described to a Congressional committee how busing had been used to end segregation in the schools of Harrisburg, Pa., in 1970. Was it working? Senators asked Dr. Porter, the Harrisburg school superintendent. He thought so, Dr. Porter said, but four years of "statistically accurate comparisons" would be required to

Five years later, Gerald Ford, sounding much like his predecessor in 1971, proposed anti-busing legislation; carlier, his Administration was disclosed to have been debating whether to ask the Supreme Court to reconsider its previous decisions upholding busing as experience of communities like Harris-

Just before desegregation began, the population of that city was 58 percent black, but five of its elementary schools were 88 to 99 percent black. Desegregation by busing, under orders from the Pennslyvania Human Rights Commission, made these five schools only 56 to 64 percent black. Now, Harrisburg has six elementary schools, all from 59 to 74 percent black, and five Early Childhood Centers, all from 55 to 69 percent black. Since blacks are 69 percent of total enrollment, desegregation has clearly been achieved.

Dr. Benjamin F. Turner, now the superintendent, reports that reading test scores-contrary to what popular opinion would predict-have improved during the same six-year period. Children in the first three grades this year desegregated system, but took part in a kindergarten program; they are reading at substantially higher levels than were children who were in the same grades in the segregated schools of 1989. Third graders in that year, for example, read at levels ranging from 2.6 to 3.9, against a national mean of 3.1 on the Stanford Achievement Test; third graders today are reading at levels of 3.5 to 4.2, compared to a national mean of 3.8.

Children in higher grades, who did not attend kindergarten, are not showing as much improvement, but are still bettering the test scores of 1969. Mr. Turner gives much credit for the imnent to the Early Childhood Centers and to special reading coordigrant under the Emergency School Aid

As for the general supposition that desegregation causes "white flight," you can't quite prove it by Harrisburg. The white student population of the city has declined by more than 4,000 in the last decade—but 43 percent of the loss came before desegregation in 1970. Only 12 percent of the decline took place in the first two years of desegregation. A major loss-32 percent of the total-occurred in 1972-73, after Harrisburg was hit by tropical storm Agnes and the Susquehanna River floods, But the loss of white students dropped back to 13 percent in the 1974-75 school years. So "white flight" began before desegregation, showed no surge after desegregation, and was most aggravated by natural

These results from Harrisburg square exactly with the Federal Civil Rights Commission's recent report that 82 per cent of school districts that have de-flight" between districts that desegre gated and those that didn't (except that districts that were more than 40 percent black to begin with suffered higher losses of white students following desegregation). The Commission contended plausibly that desegregation could not be held wholly or even primarily responsible for a white exodus from the cities that has been going on since World War II.

Cooperative community leadership has resulted, according to the commission, in successful desegregation in numerous districts—for example, Dallas and Milwaukee. Opposition seems to be expiring in Louisville. But four of every ten black and three of every ten Hispanic students still attended seg gated schools in 1974. Schools in New York, Los Angeles and Chicago, the nation's largest cities, are still effectively segregated. And only 7 percent of public school children are being bused to achieve desegregation—al though half of American school chil-

Will the Debates Really Matter?

WASHINGTON-There is a recurring tendency on the part of the press and the public to view a Presidential campaign as a cross between a beauty contest and a tennis match. It is like a beauty contest in that the condidates are judged on their physical endowments such as their smiles their profiles and their hair; and like a tennis match because they are judged on their acquired skills such as speechmaking and news conference tech-

Occasionally, there are extremely close contests in which those marginal factors are decisive, But most national elections turn on much more impersonal and predictable considerationsthe issues, the records of the two candidates, the self-interest of the voters, the relative strength of the two parties. These are the fundamental formative influences in a campaign.

In this, election, these basic influences are working in favor of Jimmy Carter and the Democrats. That is not to say that his victory on Nov. 2 is personal Northing in life is corbein It is possible to imagine scenarios in which Mr. Carter will lose. But it is much more probable that he will win a solid victory in the popular vote and achieve an Electoral College landslide.

This probability rests, first of all, on this year's issues. Economic matters including unemployment, inflation, job uncertainties, taxes and health insurance are uppermost in voters' minds this year. None of these issues work to Mr. Ford's advantage.

Nearly one family in every three has had one of its members out of work at some time in the last three years. The unemployment rate nationally is close to 8 percent end considerably higher in many of the older industrial cities of the East and Middle West where Mr. Ford would have to do well in order to win. Many workers who have kept their jobs feel insecure, while meny in the middle classes have had their standard of living eroded by inflation.

Nor is the public outlook about the economy favorable to Mr. Ford. The public opinion taken in early September showed that nearly three-quarters of the voters believe that the economy is getting worse or not improving. Whether or not this pessimism is justified by objective facts, it is a powerful drag on the Ford campaign.

When voters are deciding on economic issues, they are voting their perceived self-interest. There are times when other issues override pocketbook concerns. But unlike the two previous campaigns, this year the so-called "social issues"—crime, race relations, drugs, youthful rebelliousness - are unimportant.

The best issue for an incumbent is foreign affairs. It is the one domain about which he presumably has special inside information and over which he can exert most control. But this year, foreign policy is a critical issue only with Reaganite Republicans, disaffected with Mr. Ford.

staff to hurry him off on overseas missions and make him look "Presidential," Mr. Ford is not viewed by the public as a strong leader in foreign

Mr. Ford's failure to establish his personal mastery as President is the major political fact about his record. Although he is the White House incumbent and his opponent is an exgovernor new to the national scene, there is not the wide discrepancy that would normally exist between the two men in terms of public confidence and a sense of authority. Insofar as Watergate, the Nixon pardon, and an anti-Washington mood are electoral factors, Mr. Carter as an outsider probably has

Finally, there is the relative strength of the two parties. In The Times/CBS survey, 39 percent of voters identified themselves as Democrats and 21 percent as Republicans. When self-described independents were pressed to say which party they usually voted for, the gap widened even further with the Democratic percentage rising to Richard Nixon closed this gap because he had both the foreign policy issue and the "social issues" working in his favor. Dwight Eisenhower overcame it because of his enormous personal prestige. Without foreign policy or the social issues or personal authority to help him Mr. Ford has an extraordinarily difficult task.

It is possible to imagine Mr. Ford doing so brilliantly and Mr. Carter so dismally in the debates that these probabilities may be turned upside down. But what is there in the career of Mr. Carter, so intelligent, so articulate, so self-disciplined, that suggests he will ruin himself in debate?

The debates are more likely to confirm the electorate's basic tendencies than to alter them dramatically. Television enhances a preoccupation with superficial matters like Mr. Carter's toothy smile and Mr. Ford's wooden speechmaking. Such attributes decide beauty contests and athletic contests. They do not decide a Presidential election when the basic political forces

The Battle Ribbons of Common Cause.

IN THEIR OWN GOVERNMENT

THE BATTLE TO GET THE VOTE FOR 18-YEAR-OLDS. —

THE BATTLE TO CUT OFF FUNDS FOR THE WAR IN VIETNAM.

I don't think it would be an exaggeration to say that some of the most promising developments that have taken place in the country lately would not have taken place if it weren't for the battles fought—and won—by the 260,000 members of Common Cause and their allies.

Let me be specific.

In the past five years, we have seen astonishing reforms in the way that election campaigns in this country are paid for. At this very moment, we are witnessing the first American presidential campaign in which there are no fat cats—no big money contributors to whom the winning candidate would be obligated.

This historic change in our system was brought about substantially through the efforts of Common Cause.

The law suit that made waves.

In the last two years, 55 corporations or corporate heads have been convicted or indicted for illegal contributions. The first of these scandalous revelations concerned political campaign gifts here at home. Later revelations involved bribes to secure arms sales abroad—bribes in some cases so huge and controversial as to produce major political scandals in the countries involved (e.g., Japan, Italy). All the revelations, from first to last, were consequences in one way or another of a single law suit brought by Common Cause against the Committee to Re-elect President Nixon.

And Common Cause, working closely with forward-looking members of Congress, has played a key role in a burst of Congressional reform such as this country has not seen since the early years of this century—including the dismantling of the tyrannical seniority system and the deposing of some of the most autocratic chairmen, as well as the opening up of most of the hitherto-secret bill-drafting sessions of Congressional committees.

When we came into being six years ago, our rallying cry was, "Everybody's organized but the people." Today, as a result of the spadework that Common Cause members and others have done, the public interest is being more vigorously defended and our system of government is beginning to work again. Bit by creaking bit, the apparatus is becoming more responsive to the citizen-taxpayer.

If those battle ribbons were actually issued, our members would be entitled to wear them with pride. (It doesn't mean, though, that we fought the battles single-handedly!)

A lot of Americans don't even know we exist—but in the halls of Congress and the state legislatures, they know we exist—and they view us with a mixture of respect, antagonism and apprehension. A lot of the politicians don't like "mere citizens" to be interfering in their work. But they respect the extraordinary capacity of our members to stir up grassroots pressure.

Who are we?

All kinds of people. Democrats, Republicans, Independents are represented, not only in every state but in every Congressional District in the nation.

Our members aren't cut to a pattern. They think for themselves. You can get an argument from them on almost any subject. What they agree on is that they want our system to work. And they're willing to fight the battles to make it work.

Where does our money come from?

It comes mostly in little checks from a lot of people for dues ($15.00 a year) plus gifts of $100 or less. This accounts for 94% of our income. In other words, we have a broad financial base resting squarely on our members. If the actions of Common Cause didn't please the members, we'd soon be out of business. And that's healthy.

What do we do with the money? We fight battles. We have fought literally hundreds of battles in Congress, in the courts and in the state legislatures. And we've won most of them. That is a matter of record.

What are the battles ahead?

Beyond comparison, the biggest battle is to take Congress off the auction block by establishing the public financing of Congressional campaigns. It isn't often that one gets the chance to make history, but a victory here will be authentically historic. And the fight will be rough. The flood of special-interest money pouring into Congressional campaigns is without precedent.

Other issues will be selected by our membership through the Governing Board they elect, and through the yearly referendum by which they decide on the issues to be given priority.

Incidentally, Common Cause members discover that being active citizens is not only good for the political system, it's good for them as individuals. They learn how our political system really works.

PROVIDENCE, R.I., Sept. 18-A fumbled punt at its:16-yard line cost Yale an early touchdown today in the Bulldog's opening game against Brown. The contest was a key one on the Ivy League schedule because these two tams, along with Harvard, were the favorites to win the championship.

The Browns went shead 7-0 at the start of the second quarter after Paul Michalko, the quarterback, passed 11 yards to Bill Hill, a halfback, and Greg Rocke kicked the conversion point. Brown led, 7-6, at the end of the third quarter.

The date was an early one for a pivotal game in the lvy League. The eight members backed up the schedule by one week this year and started League contests on opening day rather than three weeks into the season as in th past. The coaches made this decision three years ago and the reasoning was that it would be better for Ivy teams, which have no spring practice, to play one another on opening day rather than non-League teams which might be more advanced because of spring practice.

Seaver, backed by a nine-hit attack that included home runs by Dave Kingman and Ed Kranepool, defeated the Pirates for the second time in six days. He allowed only five hits in a 6-2 triumph that dropped the Pirates four games behind the Philies, who beat the Cubs in Chicago, 4-1. The Pirates, who trailed Philadelphia by 141/2 games on Aug. 24, had taken 18 of 22 contests to lop 111/2 games off the Philadelphia advantage.

Seaver, winning for the third straight time, accounted for one of Pittsburgh's rare losses with a five-hit shutout on Monday. In that game, he struck out 12 Pirates to run his teague-leading total to 221. He also lowered his earned-run average to 2.40, the best among the league's starting pitchers. But, strangely, he had only a 13-10 won-lost record to show for his efforts.

Forego, Shoemaker Riding, Opposes Nine Rivals in the Woodward at Belmont

BY STEVE CADY

After an outfit with the official name of "The World's Greatest Jazz Band" played behind the stands, America's greatest race horse went to the post at Belmont yesterday for the $173,200 Woodward Handicap.

The equine star, Lazy F. Ranch's Forego, carried highweight of 135 pounds in the 114-mile test as he continued his bid to become thoroughbred racing's Horse of the Year for the third straight season. With the Woodward changed from a weight-for-age event to a handicap, Forego was conceding from 14 to 29 pounds to 9 rivals on a drying track labeled "wet fast" at the start of the program.

Forego won with a stretch rally,

Who Was the Villain at Forest Hills?

To the Sports Editor:

Parton Keese, in his Sept. 4 story of the tennis match at Forest Hills between Hie Nastase and Hans-Jurgen Pohmann, says in his opening sentence, "Ilie Nestase disgraced Forest Hills yesterday." The story describes a kind of behavior one expects from either drunks or seriously deranged people. If Nastase were playing baseball, basketball or football and did any of the things Reese describes, he would be out of the game in seconds. Hockey, of course, is different.

But both hockey and tennis suffer from the failure of the same people— the rulesmakers and the officials. Hockey uses the excuse that it is a cou-tact sport. What is the excuse of the tennis people? Racquets are thrown. obscene gestures are made, fans and officials are cursed opponents are threatened. What is tennis, some kind of a brawl?

Remember when tennis was considered a gentlemen's game? JAMES B. KELLEY. Convent Station, N.J.

Forest Hills Is a Disgrace, A Slave of Commercialism

To the Sports Editor: The lead on The Times story read, The Nastase disgraced Forest Hills

Quite the contrary is true. It is Forest Hills that disgraced itself as well as those who professionally play, pro-mote and publicize tennis.

In this decade we have witnessed the decay of what once was an elegant athletic competition at the highest level of sportsmanship and skill. Today, it has become the Barbie doll of the Las Vegas-TV-Drydock Country-Great Neck conglomerate.

It has richly earned the likes of Nastase, King Connors and the pornojester, Riggs. Compare these clowns with the class of a generation ago: Kramer, Sedgman, Brough, Hart and Seigner, Company the dissiplined official Seixas. Compare the disciplined afficionados of that era with the dilettantes and thrill-seekers that occupy the stadium today. When did you encounter such weak-spined officials who permitted fans to usurp the role of the linesmen, waive rules of play and conduct and in general permit themselves to be berated publicly as exemplified by today's clowns of the court?

When Forest Hills gave up grass for artificial turn and resorted to night competition, it took the final step in joining the other yaudeville acts that now pose as sports in the carnival of professional athletic competition.

Pohmann, Not Nastase, Is Viewed as the Villain

As an avid tennis (and Ilie Nastase) fan, I was appalled, as were so many others, at the goings-on at Forest Hills. However, I am more appalled at the complete lack of mention, let alone understanding and sensitivity, of the not-so-subtle, ugly and seemingly cal-culated manner in which Hans-Jurgen Pohmann manipulated the already ba-

Nastase usually begins a match with two strikes against him his temper and personality, and an audience with built-in hostility towards him. Conse-quently, in light of all of Pohmann's antics and those of the spectators, who, pray tall, is naive enough to expect Nastase to behave with Anglo-Saxon sportsmanship?

No Room for Gentlemen In Today's Tennis World

To the Sports Editor.

I have been a tennis professional for nearly 40 years and until recently rather prided myself on producing a number of players who, although never of championship caliber, were creditable performers.

Now that I'm coming to the end of my career, it saddens me to realize that the long sun hours have been wasted and that I've shortchanged my

It's too late now for me to applicate to the 12-year-old I removed from a tournament years ago because he threw his racquet over the backstop after he failed to return a hall that he thought was out, or to write a note of contrition to the grid I reprimanded for a gentle. "damn" after she blow an easy volley. The best I can do is to hope that these few words will be printed and that some of you, my earnest pupils, will read this apology.
Instead of concentrating on the eliptical swing, I should instead have tested your vocabulary with special quickness in getting to a drop shot, I should have timed you as you rushed from your service position to your opponent's service line to protest when the linesman called your serve a fault.

Forgive me, those of you who did not win the sportsmanship award at the close of the summer. That meager silver cup should have been replaced with the choicest vulgarisms, the foulest obscenities and the most vamperous contempt for all linesmen in general and for that man in the umpire's chair in particular.

Nastase 'Stole' Match Using Lunatic Antics'

To the Sports Editor:

The debate over lie Nastase's behavior at Forest Hills during the match with Hans-Jurgen Pohmann 18 almost as bizarre as the incident itself. I was in the stands, and with few exceptions everyone was appalled at the weird, hereic antics of Nastase and astonished that he got away with it. His intimidation of officials and call reversals literally stole the match from

Condoning the behavior by calling him a "tennis genius" is absurd and irresponsible. Genius or no, a professional tennis player who screams, spits, shouts vulgarities and makes obscene gestures doesn't belong on a tennis court. Such behavior debases his op-ponents, the officials, the sponsors, the fans and the enchanting game of tennis

Nastase seems less controlled as time goes on. Perhaps his "genius" has peaked and starting to decline. Perhaps

And Now a Few Vital Statistics About the Sport Fan

By PAUL T. OWENS

Most of us have been raised following some kind of sports average. Whether it was the betting average of a major league baseball player, how many yards our favorite football player carried the ball each time he ran or some other fact about a running, scoring and sweating hero, our thoughts were filled with numbers. In fact, so smart and accurate were we with all that we knew about sports that our parents wanted to know if we could trade it in for better grades

We never developed though, a taste for statistics about the spectator, the fan who needs heroes and hot dogs to make sure he's still alive.

Mailbox: On Curt Flo

To the Sports Editor:

How consistent! Our throwsway society extends even to the great national pastime - baseball, Murray Chase's moving profile of former outfielder Curt Flood (Sept. 9) pointed up more than just a "Forgotten Man."

In a sport notorious for its backs and retreads—more commonly referred to as major league managers—there is no room for a proud individualist who had the temerity and imagination to buck the system, So the $100,000 player of just a few years ago is this year's idie discard.

Perhaps, in the near future, instead of filling up those dreary "Whatever Happened to ..." books, America will find a use for its greatest, wasted natural resource—understilized octobe.

Yankees' Playoff: 2d Hottest Ticket As New Excitement Grips the City

Jack Dempsey will be at these playoff games. "This is still the Big Apple," said Steinbrenner, who also huilds ships in Cleveland.

Mike Rendine, the Yankee ticket manager, started formulating plans for selling playoff tickets as far back as July, when he understood that this was no false alarm, that these Yankees were for real. Every morning he would look of the standings in the analysis and the standings in the superconding the sould look of the standings in the superconding the supercondings. look at the standings in the papers and see the Yankees in first place. By eight games. By nine games. By 10 games.

And more And more.

So he got ready. He began setting up shop in a room on the hasement floor of the Stadhum—Bl39, the "Ready Room"—and now that room is command central for ticket distribution. It is a concrete bunker with a thin red carpet. It has chairs and tables, and men and, women who work at processing ticket orders. It is the busiest room in Yankee Stadhum.

Licket Demand, Soars "We're busy as hell," said Mike Tinghitella, who has been selling Yan-kee tickets since 1947. "We never expected this much volume of mail. This demand is tremendous." Rendine expected. He hired 15 temporary employees to

He hired 15 temporary employees to meet the mailman.

Each morning's mail brings more bags of letters. Large, canvas bags of letters. There were 6,000 letters requesting tickets, in multiples of at least three and usually 12, that arrived at the Ready Room on Thursday. There were 6,000 more on Friday. Mostly they came from the metropolitan area. But Steinbrenner received one request But Steinbrenner received one request from London And Carmen Kaiser, one of the temporary helpers, received one

"My God, look," she said, as she was typing the order. "Tve got one from Alabama. I can't believe it." Each ticket request must be accompanied by a certified check or money order. No personal checks are accepted. No cash is accepted. Period. Orders with cash or personal checks are simply aent back. Unfilled.

"We can't take eash, and we can't trust personal checks from anyone," said Rendine. "Maybe 5 percent of the orders come in like that, and we just send them back. Maybe 1 percent come in without postage and handling money. We send them back, too. It costs us $2.40 a letter to send out the tickets, and we can't afford to do it."

There are the wise guys who try to bend the rules a bit. They're the ones who send in their applications with a sweetener maybe a $10 hill clipped.

Locking the Ready Room

"It's a hribe," said Tinghitella, who takes pride in the responsibility of padlocking the Ready Room overy night so nothing gets borrowed in the middle of the night, "No other explanation I can see. They want us to make sure they get their tickets. We just send the money back. That stiff doesn't work."

The men in the Ready Room process all orders. Jim Sarrantonio starts by opening all letters. Other men separate the complete applications from the the complete applications from the bogus ones, record the numbers of ticket requests and match them to the checks. Once in a while John Guglielmo is called in; be's in charge of searching out irregularities. He has a trained eye for potential scalpers—on Friday he uncovered what looked like a scam. He had I8 different requests for four strips of tickets each from 18 different people in New Jersey. The catch was that the handwriting on all 18 applications was the same, and the 18 money orders were all numbered in sequence from the same hank.

"Normally, I'd send them back," Guglielmo said, "But since there's no limit on how many tickets you can huy, I guess we'll have to fill them all."
Ultimately, the requests are given to the women typists, who log each order on special manifold sheets and address the mailing envelopes. The tickets will not be sent out until today or tomorrow. The tickets are locked in a vault near Rendine's office on the ground floor. Only three men—Bobby Overland, Jerry Waring and Clem Jurgens know the combination to the vault. Those men are in charge of sorting the playoff tickets, coding them and assigning them to the proper distributor. As you might imagine, lately they are

"I get calls from guys I haven't seen since high school who know that I work with these tickets," Overland said. "My first question to them is-Hey, what have you been doing for the last eight years? Their first ques-tion to me is—'Can you get me some tickets? I tell them to write in, just like everybody else.

"Seriously now, can a jeweler be conned out of his gold?"

The Yankees have designated 51,308 seats as mail-order hox and reserved for the three Stadium playoff games, Oct. 12-14. Should either of the final two games become unnecessary because the playoff has already been won, money will be refunded.

There is no limit to the number of tickets one may huy now although Steinbrenner reserved the right to set a limit if individual orders appear too hig. One must buy "strips," single tickets for all three games, $24 for box strips and $18 for reserved strips.

"We want the public to see us," Steinbrenner said. "We don't want this to be a closed show. It must be clean." But in all probability, about 33,000 seats for each game will be sold to the general public, with about 18,000 seats a game already reserved for "priority huyers," who have first op-tion on the tickets. These include season-ticket and group-plan holders. sponsors, players and their families. Stadium employees, basehall executives, media representatives, politicians and special interest groups who have done husiness with the Yankees all

Game-Day Supply Small

Assuming the Yankees sell out their mail-order tickets, the 2,396 remaining general admission and bleacher seats will be sold, for $4 each, over the counter on game days. With mail order, the era of the sleep in at the ticket booth is gone forever.

There may be an additional 3,128 hleacher seats available to the general public at $4 each on game days. Those seats are being huit now, at a cost of $136,000—Steinbrenner and his friend Larry Fisher are chipping in $30,000 apiece. The Yankees are paying the remainder, but Steinbrenner says that New York City has agreed to reunhurse the cinh at a later date. the cinh at a later date.

Steinbrenner is awaiting a league ruling on his plan to give those seats riling on his plan to give those seats away, during the playoffs, to underprivileged children. If the league says, no, sell them to the public, he will comply. Either way, he has put himself in a position to hecome a hero with some segment of the population. It's a position he doesn't mind being in at all.

Red Sox: Lost Romance

BOSTON, Sept. 18—The Great Wall still stands in left field and so does Carl Yastrzemski. But otherwise, Fenway Park is a changed and sometimes lonely place these days, ona year after the Boston Red Sox cap-tured the public's fancy as the under-dogs who became folk heroes. And now, where has the romance gone? You can stand in

It matters not that Cincinnati won the World Series. There is no one in Boston or Cincinnati who can complain of the sports. nati who can complain of the sports-manship and skill and the delicious anxiety this World Series brought into our lives."

Now the Red Sox rank fourth, the "delicious anxi-Sox rank fourth, the "delicious anxiety" has gone, and so has stoical Darrell Johnson—dismissed in midseason, one-quarter of the way through his glittering new two-year contract. The ageless Cuban pitcher is one year older, and so is the rookie of the year. Lynn, Fisk and Rick Burleson did not even sign their contracts until August, and were booed by the people who had cheered. Carbo was traded. Lee burt his arm in a team brawl with the Yankees. And Tom Yawkey, the proud owner of the romantic Red Sox, died on July 9 while the gloom was gathering around his old ball park.

Dick O'Connell, the executive vice president and general manager of the team, still has the wist watch they gave him as "executive of the year."
But he can step out of his paneled office behind third base, sweep his eyes over "The Wall" and he known better than most that a great deal is missing along with the magic.

Even after getting off to a slow start, they always felt they could do

Last year when we didn't have good pitching we got good hitting. This year when we didn't pitch we didn't hit. Last year the line drives dropped in. This year the other team caught the ball."

Do the Red Sox realize they can't win it "tomorrow" anymore?
"It should be fairly obvious to them now," Dick O'Connell said with a smile and a sigh. "It's sad."

Nettles, Ellis Click for Yanks' Victory

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 18-Graig Nettles, a Yankee who has been overshadowed this season by more beralded teammates, continued making up for his lagging recognition today by hitting his second consecutive gamewinning bome run.

With a two-run shot off Bill Travers in the fourth inning, Nettles raised his American League-leading home run total to 28 and lowered the Yankees division-clinching number to six.

While the Yankees defeated the Milwaukee Browers, 5-3, Baltimore lost to Cleveland in the first game of a doubleheader. That meant any oumber of Yankee victories and Oriole defeats totaling six would end the Eastern Division race.

Nettles's homer, which followed Chris Chambiss's infield single and broke a 3-3 tie, also gave Dock Ellis his 16th victory against seven defeats, making him the team's second biggest winner behind Ed Figueroa, who has

The left-hander had a chance to pitch an inning in Cleveland last Tuesday, but passed up the opportunity because he was miffed with Martin. This time, though, he worked a hitless inning, picking up his 21st save.

A Lesson in Popups

The Yankees haven't had many problems this season, but they encountered ooe last night when Lou Piniella, the right fielder, and Willie Randolph, the second baseman, failed to communicate oo two consecutive pops to short right. The Brewers scored three runs in that inning, but they didn't exactly batter Ellis while doing it. Of the four hits they collected in the inning, two did oot leave the infield and a third was Mike Hosan's bloop just out of Nettles's reach behind third that fell for a two-run double.

How to Select a Racquet

In the United States Open men's final, Bjorn Borg used a Bancroft wood racquet weighing 14½ ounces, a mooster. Jimmy Connors used a lighter Wilson T-2000 metal. Borg's racquet was strung with gut at about 75 pounds of tension—extremely tight. Connors's was more loosely strung. Connors won the match. Did his racquet make the difference?

Some people may think it did. But in the end, the racquet will play ac-cording to the skills of the person wielding it. It may also give him a feel-ing of confidence and comfort, which is why choosing the proper racquet is important.

There are so many racquets on the market that a buyer may easily become confused. Wood or metal? Fiberglass or graphite? The prices range from $10 to

First of all, it would be advisable to discuss with a tennis pro the kind of racquet that is right for you. He has given you instruction and knows what you are capable of. He can offer valu-able tips.

Hard and Consistent Strings

Because of the wide price range, you should decide how much you want to spend. A beginner may start with an inexpensive model and, as he improves, switch to something better in quality. He should examine the frame for symmetry and to see if it has cracks. The mery and to see it it has cracks. The strings should be consistent and be hard to the touch. They are important because they will give you "feel" on your shots. Strings that are worn will not do so; you will hear no "zing" when recount and hall make contact.

The average player usually has an idea of the kind of racquet he wants. But for the heginner, it's much harder But for the heginner, it's much harder to choose. He sees that the racquet has a handle, throat and head. The handle is covered with a grip of leather or plastic. The grip and weight are important, for they will affect your game. If the grip is too small, you will not be able to control the racquet well on contact with the ball; it may shift in your hand. If the grip is too large, control may again he a problem; large, control may again he a problem; the racquet may fly out of your hand because you have not been able to hold it firmly.

So the idea is to try several grips and choose the one that is most comfortable. The same holds true for weight. A racquet that is too light will twist in your hand; one that is too heavy will make you arm-weary and possibly bring on the common ailment known as teonis elbow. Borg has the strength of arm and wrist to wield his weapon Some racquets are heavy in the head and light in the handle, or vice versa. Again, you should choose the one with which you feel most comfortable. Later, as you learn more about the intricacies of stroking, you may find that you prefer a head-heavy or handle-heavy

Merits of Wood and Metal

Racquets are marked light, medium and heavy, ranging from 13 ounces to over 14. For a man, medium should be 13½ to 14; women players rarely can manipulate a racquet that is more than 13½. Grip sizes are available in 4½ to 4½ mehes

A youngster about 12 should be able to swing a 13-ounce racquet with a small grip. Special racquets weighing 11 or 12 ounces and with short handles are available. one of the biggest cootroversies in tennis has revolved around the comparative merits of the wood and metal racquets. Some players start with wood, then switch it. It goes the other way, too. Many swear that metal racquets, because of their design, have cured tennis elbows.

Again, the matter boils down to personal preference, to the feel a racquet gives you. Metal may play too fast, wood not fast enough. One may give you touch at the net, the other a cer-

To conclude: keep trying different models until one turns up with the right feeting.

Army Rally Overcomes Holy Cross

By DEANE McGOWEN

WEST POINT, N.Y., Sept. 18-Nn one will be able to accuse Army's football team of a lack of persistence nr courage. Not after what happened today in Michie Stadium.

A crowd of 24,176 could hardly believe the roaring finale io which the Black Knights fought back for a 26-24 victory over Holy Cross.

Holy Cross seemed to have this game well in control, and their fans felt assured of a triumph. Instead the Crusaders suffered their second defeat against no victories and Coach Neil Wheel, in his first year at the helm, won't forget this loss for a long time.

Army, trailing by 24-6 as the final period began, stopped Holy Cross on the Cadet S-yard line, but then had to punt. Holy Cross fumbled and Army started a drive that ended with a touch-down with 7 minutes 14 seconds to play. The score came on a pass from Leamon Hall to Clennie Brundidge, the fine end, who took the ball out of the hands of a Crusader defender. Hall then connected for a 2-poit conversion with Mark Logue.

Cadet Defense Stiffens

Army kicked off and its delenses, porous throughout the firt half, stift-ened. The Cadets took over on their 48 and in six plays scored again. Greg King burst through the middle of the line from 8 yards out. The conversion pass failed, leaving the score 24-20

By now the fans on both sides of the field were urging. "Keep going, Army!" or "Hold 'em, Holy Cross!" From their 20, after a Holy Cross punt had gone into the end zone, Army marched 80 yards with an air attack that befuddled the Crusaders. George Dunaway caught a pass on the Holy Cross 41. Then Hall tound Brundidge again for a gain of 5. Hall passed 10 yards to Tom Briggs, who stepped out of bounds in the 26. Then Hall hit the flet Dunaway again, this time in the end zone. The clock showed 47 seconds to play.

Hofstra Routed by Post, 27-6

By AL HARVIN

BROOKVILLE, L. I., Sept. 18-They fought the battle of Long Island a little early this year, but the outcome, a 27-6 victory for C. W. Post ever Hofstra, was not unexpected.

The Pioneers, who had the game moved up from Thanksgiving Day in case they got a postseason bld, dominated the flying Dutchmen, sacking Hofstra's quarterbacks 10 times for a loss of 106 yards, intercepting them 5 times, and turning three of theos into scores. Post also recovered two fumbles and turned one into another touch-

In addition, the Post defense held Hofstra to a net total of 8 yards on the ground while the Pioneers' nffense was rolling up 213 yards rushing.

Prodromides also led the Hofstra rushing attack with 62 yards in six carries, followed by Major Finklin, Sg io nine and one touchdnwn. Sal Casciola, Post's junior wide receiver from Babylon, was the leading receiver with three catches for 62 yards and one touchdown.

The victory made Post's won-lost record 2-0 and 1-0 io the Met Conference, where it is the defending champions. Post has now won 17 games without defeat.

Post Intercepts 4 Passes

The Flying Dutchme were unable to move the ball on the ground or in the air against the Post defense in the first half when they were beld to minus 15 yards rushing and four of Bob Girolamo's 15 pass attemps were intercepted. Post turned three of the interceptions into touchdowns.

Brian Zach, a defensive tackle, got a hand on the first interception and it was caught by Bob Michalowski, a linebacker who was brought down on the Hofstra 35-yeard line.

From there it took the Pioneers only four plays to get their first touchdown, a 9-yard pass from Prodromides to Larry Esposito, his fullback, only 2 minutes 11 seconds after the game atarted. Ken Rebders stalled the next Hefstra drive by picking off a Girolamo pass at the Post 39 and returning it 10 yards, but the Pioneers were unable to turn that break into a score.

On the first play of the second period, however, Barry Tice a cornerback, picked off another Girolamo pass at the 28-yard line, and returned it to the Hofstra

A 15-yard clipping penalty provided a momentary setback for Post, but six plays later came its second touchdown on a 10-yard pass from Prodromides to Casciola at 2:48.

Rehders the safety, picked up his second interception of the half on the next Hofstra series, and this time Post needed only three plays to score, Prodromides pitching out to Finklin, who slipped away from a swarm of Hoistra defenders, and ran for 28 yards for the score. Post was offside on the first Steve Tomlinson kick, and his second was wide right leaving the Pioneers with a 20-0 halftime lead.

was the last one of the regular season for both teams.

The crowd of 62,503 was a stadium record. What the fans saw was the sixth meeting between the teams, with Penn State halding an edge of 4-1. The five previous games were played at Columbus, Ohio.

Neither team managed much of a threat the first time it had the ball, although each moved for a couple of first downs within its own territory before punting. Jeff Logan, Ohio State's successor to Archie Griffin at tailback, picked up 20 yards in his first three

Joe Paterno, Penn State's coach, said last night that "we have to pass for about 150 yards to control the game." He had been saying all week, despite an opening 15-12 victory over Stanford, that the Lions must improve their passing game. John Andress, a senior, was up for improvement. His had not been the best passing game in college football, even though he quarterbacked the Lions into a bowl game last season.

The second time Penn State had the ball against the Buckeyes, however, Andress began connecting. He took Penn State intn Ohio State territory with Long completions to Rich Mauti and Mickey Shuler. But on a fourth-and-one play, Steve Geise failed to make a first down on the ground for Penn State, and Ohio State took over on its 36-yard ilne.

Buckeyes Finally Throw Pass Rod Gerald, the new sophomore quarterback for Ohio State, threw his first pass of the season late in the first quarter, and it was incomplete. On the next play he tried his second pass and was sacked for a 12-yard loss. Early in the second period, he tried to throw again and this time was dropped for a 13-yard losst to the Buckeyes' 9-yard line. Coach Woody Hayes had not permitted Gerald, a good runner, to throw the ball in the 49-21 npening victory over Michigan State last week.

Ohio State Intercepted a pass in the end zone, hen scored a touchdown that was set up on a long run by Logan. Penn State lost a fine chance to score after Andress's passes had got the Nittany Lions to the Ohio State 40. On a second-down play, an Andress

Princeton Topples Cornell On Howe's Field Goal 3-0

ITHACA, N.Y. Sept. 18-Chris Howe kicked a 23-yard field early in the fourth quarter today and gave Princeton a 3-0 victory over Cornell today in the teams' season opener.

Howe's kick was set up when Cornell fumbled a punt. Princeton's punter, Mike Stein, angled his kick for the flag and the ball bounced off Cornell's Eamon McEneaney at the 11-yard line. Mike Shorwood recovered the ball for Princeton. After failing twice from inside the 2-yard wire, Princeton decided to let Howe kick.

The Princeton defense limited Cornell to 137 yards, only 22 passing A linebacker, Steve Lang, led the Tigers' defense with 12 tackles and five assists. Garland Burns intercepted two passes for the victors.

Isom Gains 161 Yards Princeton's Bobby Isom of North Babylon provided the game's only of-fensive spark, gaining 161 yards nn 34 carries. Ken Talton led Cornell with 35 yards on nine attempts. Both quarterbacks, John Flannery nf Princeton and Mike Tanner of Cor-

But Czechoslovakia has yet to arrange its own series with the professional league considered by the Europeans to be the strongest. "We have sent a letter about it to the National Hockey League, said Miroslav Subrt, the president of the Czechoslovak Ice Hockey Federation, "but we have not yet received a reply. They have shown to interest in a point. no interest up to now."

Russia is the magic name oow. The Czechs, they're almost modest. The Russians, they're arrogant and they make excuses."

Because the Soviet Union displays the same confidence and arrogance as Canada does about its team, the Soviet team remains Canada's No. 1 rival. The Czechoslovaks, who attach no ideological significance to hockey victories (except when playing the Soviet Union) do not inspire the same outrage in Canadian fans and players. Had the Czechoslovaks beaten Team Canada, a return series would have materialized immediately. As it is, the team goes back to Prague with $100,- 000 for the Czechoslovak Federation but with no plans to meet the N.H.L.

So in sports, as in politics, Czechoslovakia remains in the shadow of the Soviet Union, struggling to establish its own identity. From their first practice here the Czechoslovaks showed a styleand temperment that contrasted with that of their Soviet neighbors. They bounded onto the rink in practice jerseys of lemon yellow, tangerine orange and mint greeo with stockings to match. Talking and joking loudly, they clearly were having fun. The Soviet players would skate through their workouts in silence.

On the ice the Czechoslovaks were exhorted, admonished and praised hy their Slovak coach, Dr. Jan Starsi, who immersed himself in the practice sessions, gesticulating and shouting in a manner rather more Latin than Slavic.

Other Things to Celebrate During their free time the Czechoslovak players were permitted to ex-plore the city and its shopping com-plexes. They were always happy to give autographs and did oot shy away from photographers as was the way of the Soviet squad. .

In losing to Team Canda, the Czecho-slovaks felt no disgrace and soon they were able to put the series in perspec-tive. # Holyoke Is Now Pulling Its Oars

By MARGARET ROACH

When the first national invitation women's regetta was staged on the Connecticut River at Holyoke, Mass., last year, Mount Holyoke College didn't have a crew of its own, and served only as the host. Last spring. Liz Merrill, then a sophomore, heard of a meeting on campus about forming. of e meeting on campus about forming a crew. She had never had an active interest in sports, "but it was a new sport, and I thought it would be nice if Holyoke had a crew. so I ettended."

That meeting was the beginning of rowing at Holyoke, an all-women college, Miss Merrill, who became the coxswain of the lightweight eight, and eight rowers began practicing under the supervision of Bart Apfelbaum, who agreed to coach the team. He was graduated from Trinity in

"Crew was the only sports I qualified for because of my size," said the 5-foot-1-inch, 107-pound Miss Merrill. The 20-year-old psychology student grew up in Tacoma, Wash: "I had never seen a shell of a race—I didn't even know crew racing existed before last year," she confessed.

A local physician, Robert O'Malley, presented the idea for supporting a Mount Holyoke crow to the Greater Holyoke Chamber of Commerce. He also raised funds from friends to assure equipment and coaching for the crew. The Friends of Mount Holyoke Rowing was formed, and the community's largest employer, National Blank Book Company, also offered support. Mass Merrill calls O'Malley "our

Red Rolfe, who died of cancer in 1969, was a Dartmouth graduate who played third base for the New York Yankees, 1935 through 1941, when the Yankees won five American League peonants and five world championships. He managed the Detroit Tiggers after World Wer II and served as Darts after World War. II and served as Dartmouth athletic director, 1954-1966. Hamilton, a 1927 graduate of Nevy, coached the Navy foothall team in the mid-30's, was director of athletics at Annapolis in 1948 and then was athletic director at the University of Pitts-burgh, 1949-1960. Ketz served Union College for 40 years in many administrative positions, including chairman of the department of education, athletic director, director of physical education and track coach.

Samborski had a similar 50-year cafrom Harvard. He left Harvard in 1970 after seven years as the Crimson direc-tor of ethletics and was commissioner of the Yankee Conference, 1970-1973.

last year, in the preseason poll issued by the Intercollegiate Soccer Association of America the Dons were ranked 12th. This year the 18-member National Ratings Board has the Dons on top with 13 first-place votes. Clemson is ranked second with three first-place votes, while the other first-place vote has gone to Southern Illinois, Edwardsville, which is ranked fourth in the presenson poll.

Hartwick is in sixth place, below Southern Illinois, and this makes the poll very questionable, because Hartwick beat Southern Illinois in a tournament last week. They say the tourna-ment was not part of the regular sea-son, but the members who vote to rank teams should be aware of these teams status. Hartwick beat S. I. U. only 2-1 but, judging from the game, was far superior to the Cougars, with better players in every position except a couple.

The inefficiency of the ratings board, made up of coaches, was clearly demonstrated at the end of the regular season last year. Clem-son was ranked on too before the regional rankings came about Clemson was ranked second to Howard, which wes ranked fifth in the final regular-season poll. "Some of the people who vote doo't know what the hell they are doing," a coach said at last week's tournament, which Hartwick won and which was held in Oueonta, N.Y., site of the Hartwick campus.

They vote on the basis of reputation," said the coach, who didn't want to be identified "because I know a lot of these guys."

The following are the teams we believe to be the 10 best in the (1) PHILADELPHIA TEXTILE—Although the Rams lost their coach, Walt Chyzowych, who became coach of the United States World Cup team, they have too much talent not to do well. Barry Barto, an alumnus, will coach a team that will play a tougher schedule than in-previous years, but who cares when you have players like Dale Russell, John Nusum, Elson Seale and

(2) HARTWICK-It also has e new coach, in Jimmy Lennox, who replaced Timo Liekoski, now in the pros. The Warriors heve an abundance of quality olayers, like Glenn Myernick, Steve Long, Billy Gazonas, Duncan Mec-Donald, Jeff Tipping, Art Napolitano, Esteban Reynoso, Angrik Stepanow and Joey Ryan, and a good goalkeeper in Keith Van Eron.

(3) SAN FRANCISCO-Mal Roche and Andy Atuegbu are Negoesco's biggest assets on the forward line, but the absence of Paul Korn will hurt. Defensively, the Dons' "Norwegian Connection" of Tom Tronstad and Bjorn Dahi should thwart opponents. 'Depth" will oot be Neogesco's favorite word. It wasn't last year, but he still took the Dons to the top.

(4) ST. LOUIS-Harry Keough'a intricate scouting system extends no further than his backyard, but the Billikens heve always fought with those who rely strictly oo foreign aid. Keough's son, Ty; Donny Huber, Larry Hulcer, and Don Droege are the Bills' top players.
(5) CLEMSON—Playing one of the toughest schedules in the nation, the Tigers of Dr. Ibrahim M. Ibrahim will be much stronger this season with the addition of Kenneth Illodigwe, a forward who transferred from Howard and sat out last season, Besides Illodigwe, a sensatioo as a freshman with Howard, Ibrahim will have Clyde Wetsoo, Rennie Phillips and Dennis Carrington, an excellent goalkeeper who missed part of last season with a broken collarhone.

(6) ADELPHI-The Panthers are in Division I, where they heloog. Dr. Mel Less, the coach, will easily replece the goalkeeper, the only player he lost to graduatico. But Less has also stocked his team with two good players in almost every positioo. "We have more depth than ever," he warns.

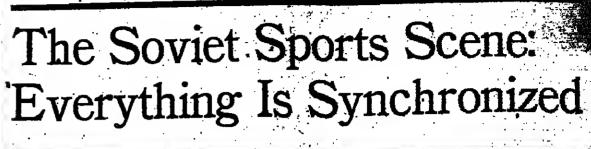

(7) SOUTHERN ILLINOIS, EDWARDS-VILLE—The Cougars are oot so good as last year. Greg Villa, their main offensive theat, barely qualified academically. If he drops out, they will he in trouble so deep that not even Bob Guelker, one of the best coaches in the country, will be able to right them.

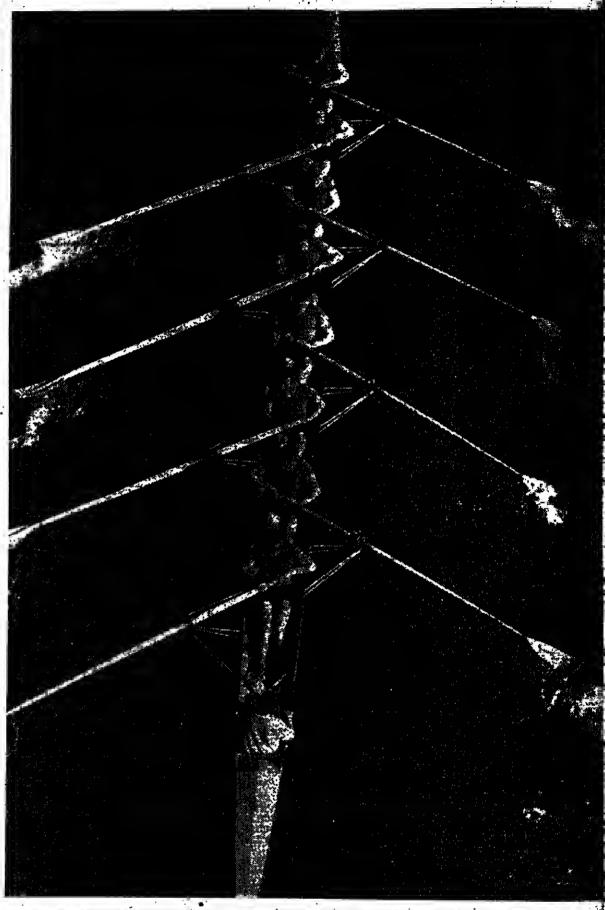

(8) QUINCY-Except for St. Louis; University, no one has done better than the Hawks in the last decade: They will miss Sam Bick and Jim Pollihan, now successful professionals after only a year out of school, hut Jeck Mackenzie, the coach, hes the knack of filling gaps easily.

(9) BROWN—Many will argue that Brown beloogs higher. Perhaps so. E will be interesting to see how the team replaces Steve Ralbovsky, the first draft choice of both pro leagues last year. However, Cliff Stevenson, still has Fred Pereira, a forward anyooe, locluding the pros, could use. (10) HOWARD-Lincoln Phillips is ewaited by a season that will oot be remembered. There are problems everywhere, hut Phillips still insists his Bisons will be competitive. Other schools that get our vote are Connecticut, Baltimore, Seattle Pacific; Army, U.C.L.A., Penn, Appalachian State, Cornell, South Florida, Indiana; Fairleigh Dickinson, West Virginia and Colorado College, San Jose State, Penn State and Oceonta State.

Haden will not be calling the plays for the Rams. It you watch the side-10 fingers," says Knox, "there's almost one of the Rams' assistant coaches, going through body contortions involving his arms, legs, fingers, nose, ears and alhours. and elbows.

Meyer will be using body semaphore to pass the play-call from the sideline to the field. This is a new system in the N.F.L. replacing the messenger guards Paul Brown used 30 years ago. The play selection is made up in the press box by Leeman Bennett, another assistant, who phones it down to Meyer. Chack Knox, the head coach, monitors the call, seldom changing it, and Meyer passes it out to the huddle. The messenger who can make mistakes is eliminated.

Body semaphore can handle the Ram offense. "With two arms, two legs and 10 fingers," salws knox, 'there's almost no limit to the signs you can make." How about the stealing of signals by the other team? Knox is not worled. Besides the Rams have "live" and 'fake" signs, holding the nose, or ear lobe or elbow.

Promoters Revive Farm For Rich Jumping Event

"This event," said Mason Phelps with more than a touch of pride, "is going to be the richest jumping show in the United States."

And it hasn't even been held before. Weeds have been growing on the course for 20 years, and Phelps cheerfully admits that he figures the financial picture, for this year at least, is a bleak one.

ican Jumping Derby and it is sched-uled for Thursday, Friday and next Sunday at Glen Farm in Newport, R. I. Glen Farm has been idle for two decades, but Pheips and his co-promoter, Carl Knee, are putting up $43,000 in prize money.

Phelps is 28 years old, tall, rather thin and was a member of the United States Equestrian Team's three-day squad from 1965 through the Mexico City Olympics in 1968. Knee is a pro-City Olympics in 1968. Knee is a professional trainer who operates Rock Bottom Farm in Lagrangeville, N. Y.
The Derby's main event will be Sunday and the purse will be $35,000, with $8,750 going to the winner. Two warm-up classes will be held Thursday and Friday with total purses of $13,000.
The Derby, of course, will not be a jumping event in the usual sense of the word. There will be no high jumps or sudden twists and turns.
"Actually," said Pheips, stretching his

"Actually," said Pheips, stretching his legs in the Derby office the other day, "the best way to describe a Derby is that it is more like a cross-country course with hunter-type fences and one wasn't anything going on there for 20 years, and last year Carl and I began talking about doing something with it. I was riding with Carl at the time. "Well, we decided that we would like to do something different and this is it. There are no jumping derbies in the United States. Of course, Grand Prix jumping events used to be rarities, too, jumping events used to be rarities, too, but there are plenty of them now.

Phelps said Glen Farm went through a lot of changes over the past 10; months or so that it actually was ready for the Derby a couple of months ago.

"We talked to just about all tha jumper riders and owners in Florida last year," Phelps said. "They were unanimous that we had a good idea. So we went ahead.

"We're not kidding ourselves on fi-

"We're not kidding ourselves on fi-nancing. We have a budget of $140,000 and we figure we'll be $25,000 in the hole when we close up shop. We've put a lot of money into the project that, of course, will not have to be invested again.

"We needed permanent water pipes, an electrical system and jumps. These things run up and when we looked at the bills, we had to come up with $16,000."

Another problem that has popped up is that the Derby is not being sanc-tioned by the American Horse Shows Association. This means no foreign riders may compete.

There are 72 entries and each one had to put up a $100 nomination fee.

To show in the main Derby evect on Sunday will cost another $500. Frank Chapot, captain of the U. S. E. T.'s jumping squad, has designed final negotiations for the syndication of Forestone's colt. The breeding syndicate, in what is said to be a $5 million deal, reportedly consists of 32 shares of which firestooe is retaining six. The latest word is that only two shares are stall available.

Honest Pleasuer, last season's 2-year-old champion, was the strong winter-book favorite for the Kentucky Derby. But he was defeated by Bold Forbes.

A crowd of 32,440 turned not under clearing skies that brought sunshine for most of the afternoon before becoming overcast.

Betting Tax Stirs Confusion Horseplayers are still confused about the gambling-tax legislation passed by Congress last Thursday and sent to President Ford.

According to Washington scources, a According to Washington scources, a technical amendment to the measure "probably" will be made early next week. But nobody sems to be sure. Unless the language is changed, horsebet proceeds of $1,000 or more will be subject to an on-the-spot withholding tax of 20 percent regardless of the size or type of wager.

"We're hoping they'll do the logical thing and make a change," said Patrick Lynch, a vice president of the New York Racing Association. "But Government knows very little about racing's problems, so you can't take anya'thing for granted."

Present law requires horseplayers who win a bet lat odds of 300-1 or more to fill out a tax form before col-lecting their full proceds. I had chosen the topmost heat because I wanted to explore the upper regions of the river. I soon discovered that it had a healthy population of small trout - most of them fingerllog-sized hrook trout — but that there was little cover for larger fish io that area. In our four hours of an-gling we caught several fish, all brook trout, releasing all but two about 11 inches long.

After leaving Bergen and the Connet-quot, we journeyed east to Carman's River in Brookhaven, where the fee is only $1 for a day's fishing.

Carman's doesn't have the number of trout possessed by the Nissequogue or the Connetquot, but it is an incredibly lovely stream now fully protected from development along its entire 12-mile stretch. The recent purchase of 114 acres from a developer by the state completes the acquisition of a 4,000-acre corridor on both sides of the stream from its source to the sea. One may fish the Nissequogue and Coonetquot through Nov. 30. Carman'e closes Sept. 30.

Woods, who has fished all three streams often, bad spent most of our time on the Connetquot spotting rising or cruising fish for Reinfelder and me, and he cootinued this selfless performance on Corman's ance on Carman's.

Noting that a great many springs feed the east shore of the section of the river we were on, he told me to drop my dry fly, a No. 14 Adams, close to the edge of the watercress that grows in profusion along the stream. Five minutes later I had a nine-inch brown trout which Talescad. trout, which I released.

Boats and women seem to have had an affinity-for each other since the days of the square riggers, when it was considered good luck to name e boat for a woman, says Norman Brouwer, ship historian of the South Street Seaport Museum. "Ships were regarded as living things, particularly by the Cape Horn ecamen who would he at sea for as long as five mooths without sighting land."

Of course, it was also considered had luck for a womeo to step on board, something Aronow certainly would not have objected to.

With his new design he has combined classic lines outside with an interior not generally found on a 35-foot powerboat: mirrors on the front bulkheads, rich teak workmanship throughout, one large weatherberth, indirect lighting

When asked what makes a boat sexy. Aronow, a world champion offshore vacer, declared:

Hounds Will Runat Exhibition in Virginia

By WALTER R. FLETCHER

In the same rolling country where George Washington rode to the hounds George Washington rode to the hounds more than 200 years ago, a colorful pageant will be enacted Saturday at the Fairfax steeplechase meeting at Belmont Plantation in Leesburg, Va. Randolph Rouse, master of News hounds, accompanied by Albert Poe, the huntsman, will lead the Fairfax park across the infield in an exhibition bogs the infield in an exhibition between races on a steeplechase card that has attracted the top timbertoppers in the country.

fax Hunt, which will celebrate its golden anniversary in two years, take off with the pack and engage in a fourhour run.

The foxhunting season in Virginia has begun again after its customary five-month hiatus.

"We don't hunt from the beginning of April until the end of August," said

Rouse, master since 1964. Discussing the pack, Poe said: "We have 50 dogs at the kennel. They are a cross between English and American foxhounds, leaning toward the English type, which is bigger with more bone. The American, however, is much speedier. I plan to change the type here by breeding more to the American forkhound, so we will have a faster-running pack. We may also use a Walker hound in the breeding to add stamina and hunting ability.

"We will keep the tri-colored coat," Fise continued. "The lemon-and-white coat, favored by some packs, is hard to see in the snow, and red is difficult to distinguish in the woods." to distinguish in the woods."

For a hunt, Rouse and Poe use 36 dogs, with eight running at the front end. "When a pup becomes a year old." said Poe, "we start him with the pack, and he runs until he's 6. The dogs run in groups, and those up front usually stay there for about three years."

Several times a year various packs from the East compete against each other, notably at the Mariborough Hunt Bowl in Maryland, the Virginia hound show at Oatlands (a national landmark near Leesburg) and at Bryn Mawr, Pa. "More women ride with us than men, about a 60-40 ratio," said Rouse.

The feature on Saturday's steeplechase card is the Bowman Bowl, named for the late A. Smith Bowman Sr., who helped organize the Fairfax Hunt and was its first master.

A. Smith Bowman Jr., a director of the hunt and president of a distillery in Fairfax County, recalling the early years, said, "Because we were close to

"Our listing in the Hobie Cat co-op advertisement in The New York Times really paid off."

Flagship Marine Atlantic Highlands, N.J.

"As a result of our ad in The New York Times I can see a big increase in our boat sales," writes Hartley Squires of Flagship Marine.

"We have sold five boats to people in the area who did not even know we sold sailboats. Another great thing is that our ships store business has increased because of the added exposure. Count us in on the next ad."

Want to know more about the New York Times special ability to make sales for boat advertisers? Get in touch with Jim Dingee, manager, Boat Advertising Department.

Fall is the time people think about new cars -and The New York Times does something

On Sunday, October 10, The Times is publishing its annual news-and-advertising automobile industry section . . . an ideal setting to showcase all your models to more than 3,000,000 Sunday Times readers in the New York market.

These are your best prospects: 78 percent of car-owning Sunday Times readers in this market own at least one car purchased new. And 47 percent own two or more cars. Take advantage of this special selling-sea-

Lease your car from Mercedes-Benz people-

they're definitely committed to your satisfaction!

Every car we lease carries our own individual commitment of customer satisfaction.

Perhaps that's why we've been so successful and enjoyed the patronage of discerning drivers for more than 20 years...and leased hundreds and hundreds of fine Mercedes-

As for leasing plans, we have them all-from 24 to 48 months and we'll be glad to "tailor" one to your specific needs.

So-if you're interested in leasing and if you're very particular about your individual plan-come visit us at · either one of our two salons ... because the cost could be pleasantly surprising.

Challenge Avis.

See if our deal on a '77 car stacks up against your deal.

It's one thing to get a good price. And another thing to get a good deal. Because If the price fits but the lease doesn't, you won't be happy-

At Avis, we think we can fit you exactly. So before you sign anybody else's lease, ask about aurs. After all, we've got a reputation for trying harder. Make us live up to it.

Pengeot 504 Diesel List Price: $8,260*

There are two makes of diesel car sold in America.

Ours lists for some $3,000 less.

Front headroom: 39.7 ront legroom: 40:9 d fuel mileage: 35 mpg highway, 27 mpg city Velour upholstery

> Sliding sunroof standard Metallic paint standard lectric front windows standard.

List Price: $10,278

Front legroom: 42.0 EPA estimated fuel mileage: 31 mpg highway, 24 mpg city** Vinyl upholstery.

Sliding sunroof $378 extra Metallic paint $435 extra. Electric windows (front and rear)

The price difference between our Peugeot Diesel and a comparably equipped Mercedes 240 D is, perhaps, the most obvious difference between them.

Both cars are similar in size and roominess. Both can be had with many of the same comforts (although, with Mercedes, you'll have to pay some $1,100 over the base price to have them).

Both cars give you power assisted four wheel disc brakes for fast, sure stops. Both give you four wheel independent suspension and steel-belted radials for a smooth, stable ride. Both Mercedes and Peugeot give you the benefit of decades of experience with diesel engines. Since its first production diesel in 1928, Peugeot has built more than a million light diesel engines. Both the Peugeot Diesel and the Mercedes Diesel give you all the operating economies of an engine that has no carburetors to be adjusted and no spark plugs, points, or condensers to be replaced. And of a fuel that averages nationally 64-74 less per gallon than unleaded gasoline.*** The significant difference is, Reugeot gives you all this for some $3,000 less (counting Mercedes $1,100 plus extra charges for essentially the same kind of equipment that's included in Peugeot's list price).

Because people quick to recognize quality in a car have always snapped Volvos up quickly.

But this year, we have some '76 Volve left. And with our '77 models coming in soon, we have to move them out.

So we'll be making deals on Volvos like we've never made before.

Unlike a lot of sales, this one does feature remnants. You won't end up with some odd-colored, stripped dow or about-to-be-discontinued model the nobody wants.

You'll be able to make a deal on a wic selection of fully-equipped Volvos.

You can choose a 2-door, 4-door or station wagon. From either our 240 series. Or from our luxurious 260 serie-

No matter what you choose, you'll end up with a car that has become legendary for its safety, comfort and intelligent design.

on modest incomes who like to travel together or are lonely (newly widowed, perhaps) and crave companionship or a brief diversion from sadness. However, the tours also attract many married couples and children, Grossman said, and some single young adults - foreign visitors, for example, who want a brief slice of Americana but don't know how to arrange it

"There's something peculiarly charismatic about a motor coach tour," said a high school teacher who had been on the same Casser tour to the Pennsylvania Dutch country three times, "You start out as strangers, butby the time you're three hours down aged companionship. They put me in the pike you have latched onto someone. Soon everybody knows everybody else, at least a little."

Autumn Leaves: A Budget Ramble

By DAN CARLINSKY

As surely as the leaves turn each year, Easterners by the millions take the arrival of October as a signal to head north for the fall foliage display and a last fling at puttering around the countryside before winter sets in.

For those to whom "north" has always meant upstate New York-or possibly Massachusetts or Vermont-I offer an alternative. The leafing territory of New Hampshire provides a worthwhile change of pace. True, the best of it-the northern half of the state-is a few hours' extra drive for New Yorkers. But there are extra dividends. Consider the White Mountain National Forest: mammoth mountain ranges alive with crystal waters and rich in a variety of trees that make for autumn viewing at its best.

One good way to mix scenic drives with "things to do" is to spend a few days touring the small lopsided oval that cuts through the heart of the White Mountains, an oval formed by U.S. 3 and 302 and State Routes 16 and 112. It includes awe-inspiring Mount Washington, the highest peak east of the Rockies and north of the Carolinas; the magnificent Kancamagus Highway, clean and supremely scenic, and a couple of highway strips with more than enough shops, restanrants and children's attractions to satisfy any itchy traveler.

The White Mountains are crowded during early October (and will be until someone devises a way to make the leaves turn for, say, six months at e time), but no more so than other popular areas. Anyone planning to visit during the first two weeks of October, prime foliage viewing time, should read the box on Page 14 for a few hints about motels, ims, campgrounds and mountain huts and then phonedon't write-for reservations.

Possibly the most spectacular attraction in the entire state is the cog-railway ride miles up the side of Mount Washington to the summit, 6,288 feet above sea level. The special mountainclimbing trains belch coal smoke as they chug for an hour and a half up grades so steep it's tough to stand in the cars. The views on the way up are outstanding, and from the summit well above the treeline, exhibirating if the weather happens to be clear. Round-trip fare: $9.95 for adults, $5 for children.

Who can say the ride isn't worth the money? But the budget-conscious will cry for cheaper ways to enjoy the wonders of the White Mountains and there are plenty of them. Herewith, a sampling of simple pleasures along the lopsided oval that are calculated not to break you on your jaunt in search of autumn foliage. No charges unless otherwise noted.

ROCK OF AGES - About 15 years ago, Charlie Kimball, a native of the Granite State, was coming down out of the mountain woods on a piece of his property at the edge of U.S. 3 in North Woodstock, It was raining, and Kimball thought he saw a bear. Closer investigation showed the "bear" was a nun, kneeling in the downpour at a spot where she said she had had a vision of the Crucifixion. Kimball was so moved be built a tiny one-room church some 20 feet up atop a huge boulder. He still keeps the church in tiptop shape, and every so often a couple will show up there with a justice of the peace and their immediate families for a wedding ceremony. Visitors are invited to climb a flight of steps up the boulder for a look around. The mini-church, on the west side of U.S. 3, next to the Maple Museum (which isn't a museum anymore), doesn't appear in guidebooks or on tourist maps.

LORI-LYN BAKERY - Diagonally across the road from the church on the rock is Lori-Lyn, which sells fresh corn muffins and cranberry muffins, a quarter each. Fifteen cents buys a spicy homemade "hermit" laced with raisins. Delicious. Open weekends. only, Labor Day through Columbus

We can tell you about our fall foliage in black and white.

But you have to come to Pennsylvania to see it in color.

Pennsylvania has more kinds of beautiful leaf colorations in autumn than any other state. Our 127 varieties of trees, over 15 million acres of them, turn bright red, burnt orange, sunny yellow—no wonder the early settlers called it flaming foliage.

The first two weeks in October you'll find the best colors in the northern part of the state, weeks two and three in the central sec-tion; and weeks three and four in southern Pennsylvania.

And while you're here to see the trees, you can still take in Bicentennial events. They're still in full swing. We could go on and on, but come see it yourself. In color. And bring your camera.

On a recent 30-day Amtrak trip, I toured the country from coast to coast with visits to relatives in Colorado and California. Inside my money belt was folded folding money, travel checks, passes and other valuables. I carried a minimum of cash in my pocket and was able to make withdrawals from the belt in restrooms during the trip. So it seemed that the only way I could lose my money, heaven forbid, was to lose my pants.

To the Editor:

Add unforgettable encounters: in Budspest this August we saw a man with a falcon in the subway. Trains in the Budapest metro come every few minutes, and this one was not crowded. The man was young and he held the bird, fastened by a chain of metal rings, in his leather-gloved hand. He spoke softly to the hird and stroked it with his other hand. He entered the train, set down and left after two stations.

Subway riders in Budapest must be more jaded than those in New York, for nobody else seemed to pay any attention.

Notes: Will Mexico Really Cost Less?

By STANLEY CARR

Mexico's decision to float the peso and then to peg it at 19.90 to the dollar had travel agents and tour operators doing a Mexican hat dance in frustration last week as they tried to determine exactly what the change would mean to American tourists.

For more than 20 years the peso had been pegged at 12.5 to the dollar. devaluation made goods and services, in theory at least, cheaper to visitors. But reports about the long-term effect on tourism were conflicting. The main puzzle concerned inflation and to what extent rising salaries and prices south of the border would swallow up the increased strength of the dollar. But in any event pocket money now goes farther m Mexico, making it "a good buy" for some months to come at least. And there is a possibility that some package tour prices will be reduced.

Vince Hodgins, director of the Mexican National Tourist Council, wasnot unnaturally-optimistic. He hoped hotel and restaurant prices, which can be changed only with Government approval, would hold firm. "A room that used to cost $40 a day is now about $25 because of the fall in the peso's value," he said. "Tour operators should be able to reduce the prices of their new packages. The over-all benefits will be substantial."

Another spokesman for Mexico. however, thought that rates would be allowed to rise gradually to reflect inflation, but not as far as to negate the 37 percent drop of the peso. The spokesman added that air travel within Mexico would certainly be cheaper now for Americans.

Bob Cordero, general manager of Asti Tours in New York, said: "I doubt that our prices can come down because our hotel contracts are made in dollars and, of course, American air fares remain the same. Furthermore, hotels we do business with have raised their rates during the summer and I think Mexican prices generally will continue to go up."

Though worried by reports of Mexican inflation, René Pouteau of Tradewind Tours in Greet Neck, L.L. expected reductions of 15 to 25 percent in the cost of land arrangements in 1977. (One-week O.T.C. packages to Acapuloo to be run by Tradewind this winter are currently priced at $339 a person.) Mr. Pouteau did not think that rising prices in Mexico would wipe out the benefits to Americans of the cheaper peso.

Another agent, Grace Markusen said her company was holding off on the production of its Mexican tour folders until it was clear just what Mexican hotel rates would be. The National hotel group, for one, which includes the El Presidente in Mexico City, has stated that it would hold to the new peso rate. "If the Mexican Government freezes prices," she added, "I think there will be considerable savings and, as a result, lower prices of tours."

Other travel spokesmen said they believed that while Mexican prices were increasing, American vacationers' spending money would now go farther and there would be a surge in American tourism.

SMALLER PASSPORT

Starting next January, all newly issued United States passports will be smaller than the ones currently in use. The reduction in size is the first step in the transition toward a machin readable document to be developed through further research and modernization. The 1977 passport will measure 4.92 by 3.47 inches compared with the current size of 6.12 by 3.75 inches. Other features of the new passport, in accordance with the recommendations of an international panel, will be the elimination of the bearer's height and hair and eye color which are deemed unnecessary. The document will con-tinue to include the bearer's sex. The Passport Office estimates that the Government will save more than $200,000 a year in production costs as a result of the reduction in size. Another benefit, of course, is that the passport will fit more easily into travelers' pockets, handbags and wallets.

CARTS AND SHELLS

For travelers looking for a vacation that steers clear of hotel and large resort, here are two ideas, one from France, the other from Italy.

In Provence, Joel Moyne rents roulottes, or horse-drawn gypsy carts, plicants. We couldn't offer life on a 10,000-acre ranch down the road aways from the Grand Canyon or bluegrass and racehorses. Obviously they had seen us as the bourgeois suburban blahs we really were and rejected our application.

Four months passed. We had forgotten all about the program when suddenly in June a communique arriveda form letter: "Dear American Host." Family: Congratulations! Your guests will be WERNER AND GABRIELLE HERZIG OF BRAUNSCHWEIG, WEST GERMANY. They will arrive in DAN-BURY on AUGUST 5. Please make arrangements to meet them at the BUS."

Along with this came the data that the Herzigs would be spending one week with Colonel and Mrs. So-and-so of Washington, D.C., and one week with Mr. and Mrs. Such-and-such of -Larchmont, N.Y., before coming to us. for two weeks. Both the other hosts' phone numbers were given so that we could telephone them to make travel arrangements. It was also suggested that we write the Herzigs immediately. extending them a warm personal welcome and filling them in on what they might expect and how they could best prepare for life with us.

Europe has so many countries—we hadn't expected our guests to be from . Germany. Many Jewish Americans bristle at the idea of any personal relationship with anyone or anything German. Pete's case is more pointed: He spent his childhood in Nazi concentration camps, from the Riga Ghetto to Bergen-Belsen. His father died in Buchenwald. It's a clear tribute to my mother-in-law's stubborn toughne that she pulled her two sons through and, with a second husband, was able to make it to America after the war. They started life over again here; Pete and his brother are so Americanized now that it's hard to believe they aren't native born, but they aren't, and their memories of Germany are bitter. Not only were we going to have to confront our own feelings about having the Herzigs but we were going. to have to consider theirs as well. To conceal Pete's background would be .. wrong, but I didn't see how we could manage to work the subject of concentration camps ever so adroitly into a friendly letter of welcome. I dashed off a breezy missive aimed at painting an accurate portrait of the Sterns en famille, in all our suburban amhience.

We received a cheerful reply in English from Gabrielle, who wrote that she taught the language, along with arithmetic and swimming, at a Volkschule-something like an American junior high school. Werner was not a teacher but a manufacturing engineer for an electrical company. By the way, she inquired, our name sounded German, Were we Americans of German origin, and did we by any chance Deutsch sprechen?

the war. He has unpleasant memories after all. A search was currently un-

for them. Midway through July a second smudged vellow carbon came, A.H.P. was breaking it to the Herzigs that the family in Maine that had been found to replace the people in Larchmont had also developed a case of "other commitments." The Herzigs would now be going to spend the middle part of their American visitfamily in New Jersey.

Thus Werner and Gabrielle arrived in Danbury, having ridden the bus up from somewhere in South Jersey. Our first hours together were marked by consummate politeness on both sides. We showed them their room, which normally serves as the family study. It has a floppy old couch that opens into a bed, but every other inch of available space is taken up with books, letters, notebooks, magazines, art sapclub. The Herzigs looked perfectly contented. I noticed that they seemed to have packed their suitcases by the same random cram-and-stuff method we use ourselves. With exaggerated distaste Werner held something up from his bag and made a wry face et his wife. It was a pair of scarlet shorty pajamas, decorated with valentines and lovebirds. .

"Oh yes, you see" she explained to us, "I got him those for our wedding anniversary, but he would never west? them, so when we came on this trip to America I didn't pack any others for him. Don't you think they are all right, really?" I assured her they were lovely. Also, I admired her strategy. Pete flashed Werner a look of masculine compassion.

To allow them to stretch their legs after the long bus ride we took them for a ramble through the back roads and woods that surround our house. Predictably, we bad walked only a quarter of a mile when our son Joe. aged 2½, declared in a loud voice, "No way," and refused to take another step. Werner simply picked Joe up and swung him onto his shoulders, and there he stayed for the next three miles, laughing delightedly; Werner trotted happily along chuckling and repeating to himself the wonderful new American phrase-'No way, no way." Gabrielle took the chance to make friends with our dog, Jefferson D., s foolish weimaraner that persisted in racing circles around her and barking frantically to get her to chase him.

After dinner, when Joe had been put to bed and the dog had insinuated his 60 pounds into Gabrielle's lap, we asked the Herzigs how they would like to spend the next two weeks. They didn't know exactly, they said. They just wanted to get a feeling for America. I tried a reverse approach. Could they perhaps tell us what they didn't want to do?

Relief showed on their faces. Yes, said Werner, could they please not be taken to see any more old things. The Americans they had met so far seemed to think that anything dating to the Revolution was quite remarkable. "You know," he pointed out apologetically, "for us in Europe there are many houses that date to the Middle Ages. Old for old's sake is not so special."

We understood and said so, which seemed to encourage them to say more. Their stay in Washington had been quite pleasant. The colonel had four lively kids, they had seen all the proper attractions of the capital andhad been kept husy; the second week had been spent in a Jersey bedroom community. The husband was busy all day at his job, the teen-agers were off doing their own thing, and the wifestayed home and cleaned, and expected the Herzigs to keep her company. She didn't want them going off without her-she would have felt hurt, and didn't want to take them anywhere either.

All this indicated that our guests were perceptive people, but it didn't help put together z schedule. We switched to desultory conversationthe fact that Pete used to do much the same type of work as Werner, the problems of teaching kids who plan to drop out at age 15, our political frustrations. At length the small talk

Cruise the South Seas on ships as friendly and warm as Polynesia.

No other vacation can match the splendor of a South Seas cruise with the friendly Americans, the SS Mariposa or SS Monterey. And no other cruise can rival the incomparable service and friendly spirit found only aboard these two proud ships of the U.S. Registry.

The ships. The SS Mariposa and SS Monterey were specifically designed for Pacific cruising. They're large enough to have everything luxury liners should have yet small enough (with just 330 passengers) to offer a cordial, intimate atmosphere.

Isn't that the way you'd like to see the South Seas?

The service. With a crew member for almost every passenger, we have time to pamper you in our famous grand manner. First initiated by sister ships over 90 years ago, it's a way of life that has become the hallmark of luxury cruising in the Pacific.

The spirit. It's our famous Aloha Spiritas friendly and warm as the people you'll meet Down Under. It's this spirit of hometown

In 43 days round-trip from San Francisco or Los Angeles you'll cruise 15,000 miles of peaceful Pacific. And experience all the enchantment of the fabled South Seas. Or you can board in Honolulu for a 31-day round-trip, with sailings Jan. 8 and Feb. 14. *49-day cruise March 13.

jon, 2, We also have a special longer cruise with an alternate 14-port itinerary that includes Tasmania and Mar. 13 both the South and North Islands of New Zealand. ## Marriott introduces Barbados' newest resort. It started back in 1820.

That was the year the infamous pirate, Sam Lord, built his castle on Barbados, perhaps the loveliest island in the Caribbean. Certainly the one with the friendliest

ways. So they invited Marriott to come and turn Sam Lord's into a new resort; one of the most beautiful on Barbados.

Marriott left the castle the way it was, and added a village of 200 deluxe guest rooms. And that's not all. Now there're 7-lighted tennis courts (all free), 3 pools (one especially for children) and, of course, the beautiful mile long beach. Nearby golf facilities can be arranged. As well as horseback riding, sailing, scuba and snorkeling. At Marriott's Barbados Resort, you can enioy 4 restaurants and lounges. Dancing and music every night. Along with a handicraft center and duty-free shops. So you see, when it comes to making you happy, our new resort and the Bajans make a marvelous combination. Because Marriott makes it their business to make people happy. And the Bajans make it a way of life.

EAST MET WEST—Born oLD CHINA — In the rural New encounter between a brash Empire and a decaying dynasty, Hong Kong to-atinnes to reflect its mixed with China visitors can catch e adjusted of the Decision Republic glimpse of the People's Republic, whose rigidly disciplined society is in stark contrast to the freewheeling atmosphere of Hong Kong. A tour of the New Territories should include a visit to the 10,000 Buddha Monastery above Shatin, which contains literally thousands of statues of Buddha, and to the Kam Tin walled village, constructed in the 1600's and still inhabited exclusively by members of the Tang clan. The village affords a look et e China that has long since vanished within the borners. ders of the People's Republic. ders of the People's Republic. There are also vestiges of old China at Aberdeen, the colony's main fishing village, on the southern side of Hong Kong island. The fisherfolk are born, live and die on their boats, though more and more of the younger generation are abandoning this form of life.

RESTAURANTS—Hong Kong of-fers a variety of excellent cuisines. The most popular fere is Cantou-ese. The Man Wah restaurant, atop the Mandarin Hotel, offers fine Cantonese food and a superh view. Dinner for two, shout $40. Yung Kee on Wellington Street, which is known for its roast goose, and Yaik Sang on Lockhart Road. famous for crah and lemon chicken, famous for crah and lemon chicken, are popular with the local folk. Dinner for two can easily he kept under $20. Chiuchow cuisine is also very popular here, undoubtedly hecause of a large Chiuchow population. Specialties include a goose dish known as lo shui ugor: s comhiustion plate of deep fried crabmeat bells and ehrimp balls, and a Chinese cabhage roll stuffed with mushrooms. Two of the hest Chiuchow restaurants are the Chiuchow restaurants are the Siam Bird's Nest Restaurant at Causeway Bay and the Chin Chau Chinese Restaurant in the basement of the Hyatt Hotel in Teim-shatsui. Dinner for two well under $20. Devotees of Northern Chinese food crowd an establishment with the unlikely name of the American Restaurant, on Lockhart Road in Wanchai. Its specialties are roast of dumplings and huns, It is customary to order a disb of fried noodles to supplement the dim sum. The Luk Yu Teahouse, on Stanley Street, ic excellent, while the ones in City Hall and the Gloucester Building in the Central District offer good food at convenient locations. Yum cha is econvenient locations. vemiant locations. Yum cha is economical; a meal for two can be had for as little as $8.

HOTELS—Despite the many first-class hotels that have mushroomed in the past decade, the old Peninsula in Kowloon is still unsur-passed for grandeur and elegance. The ambience of the Tea Lounge in the vast, high-ceilinged lobby is reminiscant of the Palm Court in New York's Plaza Hotel. It is frequented by movie sears and frequented by movie stars and other celebrities and bence is an excellent spot for people watching.
Double rooms range from $40 to $72-2 night. There is no dearth of other fine hotsls. Both the Mandarin (a double etarts at $40) and the Hilton (double, $37) are convaniantly located in the Cantral District. The Hilton, one of the busiest spots in town, has a heated outdoor swimming pool. There are also a large number of good heately outdoor swimming pool. There are also a large number of good hotels that charge less than $25 for a double. They include the Amhsssador and the Imperial in Kowloon and the Singapors and Harbour Hotels ou the Kong Hong side of the harbor. For those on a tight budget, there is the Y.M.C.A., with rooms ranging from $5 to $20, double.

SHOPPING—Hong Kong is no longar the shopper's paradise it need to be, but bargains can still he found. Some products, imported duty free, are cheaper than in their country of origin. This is true of radios, cameras, watches and cas-sette recorders. Visitors would do well to ohtain the "Stop and Shop Bargain Guide to Hong Kong," which coutains the list price of many brand-name items. The guide is available free at Hong Kong Tourist Association offices. There are offices et Kai Tak Airport and the Star Ferry Concourse and the the Star Ferry Concourse and the association's headquarters is et Connaught Centre. CURRENCY—The curreccy in use is the Hong Kong dollar, which is worth roughly 20 cents. Credit cards and traveler's checks are spring chicken, ouion pancake and dumplings. A substantial meal can he bad for as little as $10 for two. In the fall the Shanghai Lao Ching Hiug on Kai Chin Road offers freshwater crah, a Shanghai dish. The price fluctuates according to supply and demand, but it is in the neighborhood of $6 per crab. For excellent continental cuisine, there's Gaddi's in the Peninsula Hotel and Hugo's iuthe Hyatt, which happen to he two of the most expensive restaurants in Hong Kong. An appetizer, soup, antree and dessert will cost shout $20 a persou at either Gaddi's or Hugo's, drinks extra. The San Francisco Steak House, ou Peking Road in Kow-loon, serves superb beef and a meal costs about $12 a person. Jimmy's Kitchen is an old Hong Kong institution, and now there are three: in the Central District, in Tsimshatsni and in Wanchai. Jimmy's offers such specialties as Oysters Kilpatrick and Escargot Bordelaise. About $8 e person, not including drinks.

DIM SUM-The most popular form of lunch in Hong Kong is yum cha, which consists of dim sum, or snacks, carried on trays by waitresses who move among the patrons. Yum cha literally means "drink tea," and generous quantities are uenally consumed by diners. Served from morning to late afternoon, the snacks; about 30 cents each, include such items ae spring rolls and various kinds ing e purchase. Those prepared to bargain may get a 10 percent reduction ou their purchase. At Harbor Village, a handicrafts can-ter in Star House in Tsimshatsui, local artisans demonstrate their skills. Department stores scattered skills. Department stores scattered eround Hong Kung that carry products made in China offer excellent value. China Arts and Crafts in Star Honse, the Yue Hwa and the Chung Kiu Departmant Stores in Kowloon have a wida range of merchandise, includting silk, embroidered articles, antiques and jewelry. Around Cat Street, for years the preserve of antique collectors and bargain bunters, the visitor can spend hours just browsing through the many stalls selling everything from antique jade to blue jeans.

NIGHT LIFE—The Thester Restaurant in the Miramar Hotsl in Tsimshatsui offers beautifully choreographed Chinese dances and selections from traditional Peking operas. The 88 charge includes the price of dinner. Hong Kong's largest nightcluh (seating 940) is the Palace in the new Couvention Ceutre. It presants e lavish 90-minute international revue twice nightly (8:30, 10:30). Charge: $17 a person, including dinner. The nightly (8:30, 10:30). Charge: $17 tage of enjoying two sets of bull-days each year, Chinese and West-ern. The most important festival is the Chinese New Year, which falls next year on Jan. 18 and heralds the Year of the Snake. All of Hong Kong takes e few days off-to celebrate, and almost every-one sugages in the ritual of viett-ing relatives and friends, Children are the main haneficiaries, since customarily give them red packets of "lucky money." By custom, all dehts are paid hefors New Year's Day so that the new year can spotless and everyone refrains from saying anything inauspicious for fear of ruining the outlook for the whole year. On April 5 the Chiuese celebrate Ching Ming. Ancestral graves are visited and fixed yet). The feetival takes place on Cheung Cheu, one of Hong Kong's many outlying islands. Held hy the island's fisherman, it includes religious ceremonies, Chinese opera and a carnival parade through the narrow streets of the village. The high point strives when young men storm 60-foothigh hills of pilcd-up huns and grah as many as they can carry to guarantee good luck in the eneuing year. The ooe-hour ferry ride to the island costs less than $1 and tourists are welcome to guese Macao, tiny even by Houg Kong standards, Macao's 300,000 people inhabit an area of only 10 square miles, which includes Macao island proper and three offshore islands. The anciant streets, many of whose houses look as if they hadn't been painted since the area was ceded to Portugal in the 19th cantury, are quiet, even somnolent, compared with bustling Hong Kong. Yet the city bolds one irresistible attraction for the many weekend and boliday visitors from Hong Kong: its gamhling fecili-ties, including casinos, greyhound races and jai-alai, which are illegal in the Crown Colony. For the tour-ter minterested in gambling Marso. ist uninterested in gambling, Macao offers such sights as the ruins of St. Psul's Cathedral, an old fortress, Chinese temples and the bome of Dr. Sun Yat-sen, the first Presi-dant of the Chinese Republic. For euto recing enthusiasts, there's the Mscao Grand Prix held every November. Hotel prices are considerably less than those in Hong Kong, with the best hotels, such as the Lishoa, Sintra or the quieter Matsuya charging $20 or $25 for a double. The Pousada Inn, one of Macao's finest Portuguese restaurants, offers auch specialties as African chicken and grilled prawns, to be washed down with a bottle of Dao or Mateus. Dinner costs about $12 a persou.

Parker tours, for example, the occupants of the rear seats move to the freeze carecyone else moves back one row. On our Casser tour, however, Bill said that with only 27 passengers he felt we should have the option of staying in the seats to which we had originally been assigned or moving around at will, since there was lots of room.

Bill told us that on the first evening the main object was not sightseeing but to get to Reading, where, he assured us dourly, "they roll up the sidewalks at 6 o'clock." We never ectually saw Reading, except from a distance, ecross the Schuylkill River. Our home for the two overnights of the tour was the Reading Motor Inn in a western suburb called Wyomissing.

The guest rooms were tastefully furnished. They had color television and beds that would vibrate if you put a quarter in a slot. But the motel is beyond walking distance from downtown Reading or anyplace else one would want to explore, so anyone without access to a car is stuck there when the tour bus stops for the night.

When we arrived at 10:30 P.M., the motel seemed like fun, but most of us were too tired to enjoy it. The supper club on the premises had a small hand, and it seemed as if all the swiogers in the Reading area were there. But on Saturday night, wheo many of us tourists were ready to swing, the only action was in a private dining room, where the class of 1926 of a nearby high school was holding its 50th reunion. "Where is everybody?" Jeanne, the social worker, asked as she aashayed into the maio dining room in a long cocktail gown. She crdered a crème de cacão, then embarked on a long monologue about past loves. Occasionally she would pause abruptly, look around wistfully and say: Where is everybody? Where's it all

Saturday was our first day of sightseeing. We left the motel on our hus at 8:10 A.M. Bill sat silent, able to concentrate on driving, since we had been joined by Kay Leaman, a 62-yearnld housewife from. Mount Joy. Pa.. who works part-time as a guide.

Kay encouraged us to call her hy her first name. She talked incessantly for almost two days. She said she was herself of Pennsylvania Dutch stock and she sounded authoritative when she described the history and customs of the Amish and the Mennonites and the other folk of Lancaster County, where we spent most of the day. The Amish are e fundamentelist offshoot of the Mennonites, who are evangelical. Protestants noted for pacifism, Usually Casser sends its own guides (they're called "tour escorts" in the trade), but Kay works for Brunswick Tours of Lancaster, which Casser uses as a subcontractor in the Pennsylvania Dutch country. "There's one thing Brunswick insists upon," Kay said, "and that's that we always tell the truth. If we are asked a question and we don't know the answer, we are required to say so.

Most of our attention that day was "plain people" who are famous for somber dress and horses and buggies and who shun most things modern, such as electricity, television and automobiles. They also believe that it is against God's wishes to be photographed. This means that publicity pictures of people in Amish dress are generally not of real Amish but others

"Frankly," said Kay, "the Amish wish that the tourists had never come."

But the more the Amish seem to crave alcorness, the more the tourists do come. The Pennsylvania Dutch country has become one of the most popular destinations for hus tours out of New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington. It's popular because it's colorful, quaint and extremely convenlent for tourists with limited time and budgets.

The sharp upsurge of tourism in recent years has meant a mushrooming of tourist attractions-farm restauranl, horse ind-bugg, rides, steam railroad excursions, food and flea markets, to name a few. Bus tours have become so prevalent, however, thet it's sometimes extremely difficult for an individual or family traveling independently to get admitted to a popular

Take Wheatland, the home in Lancaster of James Buchanan, the 15th President of the United States (1857-61]. It cannot accommodate more than about 45 sightseers (a busload) at a time. It is listed on both the Parker and Casser itineraries, which means that the Pennsylvanie Dutch tours of those companies had hetter stop there or be prepared for passenger ire. So the tour operators phone ahead and arrange a specific arrival time: in our case, 10:45 A.M. That Saturday morning was so hus-busy that a Wheatland guide cooceded to me that an independent traveler would probably not be able to get in because of all the commitments to package tours. To get a relatively close look et the Amish in their own environment, we stopped at the Amish Homestead, a 71-acre farm just off tha Lincolo Highway east of Lancaster. The farmers there are a family named Stoltzfus. and they are indeed Amish. But they are actually tanants who farm for the owners, R. M. and A. R. Flory, who are not Amish and are in the tourist business and thus doo't miod visitors at all. The farmhouse has several parts. One part, in traditional simple Amisb decor, is where the Stoltzfus family does not live. It is open to tourists. The part in which the family does live is closed.

Stoltzfüs, which in franslation means "proud folks," is a common name among the Pennsylvania Dutch generally, not just the Amish. We had Saturday lunch at the Stolizfus Farm Restaurant, run by a Mennonite family not related to the people who farm the Amish Homestead. The restaurant is situated near the town of Interconrse. "It used to be called something else," Kay said, "but they renamed it Intercourse because two main routes cross each other there. It's really a legitimate name. It wasn't put there for fun.

Lunch was served family styleeight of us at a loog table, helping ourselves from bowls that we passed around. The restaurant had perhaps 100 tables, which members of the family kept filled in rotation as bus after hus disgorged its passengers in the large parking lot outside. We were supposed to have the "seven sweets and seven sours" of a traditional Pennsylvania Dutch meal, I lost count, but i do remember cole slaw, chow-chow, cold corn niblets, fried chicken, German sausage, string beans, apple butter, regular butter, home-baked bread, apple sauce, choice of iced tea, bot tea, coffee or milk and cherry pie or shoo-fly pie (molasses and brown sugar) à la mode. Theoretically we could eat as much as we wanted, but half an hour after we arrived, the bus

After lunch, we stopped for 45 minntes in Leacock at the Meadowbrook Farmers' Market There are several long-established food-and-antique markets in the Peonsylvania Dutch country, but Meadowhrook, a relativa newcomer, had clearly been built to cetch the tour-bus overflow. A small aection specialized in Peonsylvania Dutch cooking, baking and butchery, but most of the long building was devoted to run-of-the-mill "collectibles" of dubious quality but substantial price.

When we arrived in midafternoon. Meadowbrook was overrun with bus tourists. Outside stood coaches of Casser, Domenico, Paragon Tours of New Bedford, Mass., and the Wery Travel Service of Milwaukee, to name a few. Nearly two dozen of the huses were under charter to clubs and lodges whose members pushed about inside. A loudspeaker frequently interrupted with announcements like: "Mrs. Dugan and Mrs. Vandenberg from the Tennessee Baptist Church, please meet your bus." Or, "For all you nice people who came from New York on Bus 534, please return to your bus. We have more goodles to show you. This is Gus, your guide."

At 3:30 P.M., with most of us visibly weary, our bus parked outside the National Wax Museum, four and a half miles east of Lancaster. Kay egged us inside. "Anybody who comes out in 15 minutes," she said, "didn't see all of it. Besides, it has cool, nice restrooms and lots of cold water."

So inside we went, and, to my surprise, it was fascinating. There were audiovisual tableaus of historical events from Indian times to the present, culminating lo an excitiog mohile demonstretion of the way old-time . Pennsylvania Dutchmen raised a baru.

From the museum we went to the Sturgis pretzel factory in Lititz, a country town founded by the Moravians. It was 5 P.M. and the factory would have been closed, except that our tour was expected. So a young employee pretended to teach us how to roll and twist pretzels. He concentrated on the nun, who, in her habit, was appealing to the photographers among us.

Back on the bus as we were leaving, Kay walked down the aisle and handed each of us a tan piece of paper inscribed."Official Pretzel Twisters Certificate." It said that each of us had earned it by "successfully twisting pretzels at the Julius Sturgis Pretzel House."

At precisely 5:20, for the first time thet day except at lunch, Kay sat down. "I don't have anything to say for a while," she said over the hus loudspeaker. "You get pretty tired standing up there. Especially when you're 62 years old."

Forty minutes later we were back at the Reading Motor Inn.

Sunday, the final day of our tour, was devoted to Hershey. We left the motel at 8:10 A.M.—precisely the same hour as on Saturday. An hour and a quarter later we arrived at the chocolate capital of the world, the manufacturing city and resort built by and named for Milton Spavely Hershey (1857-1945). We stopped first at an exhibition builting called Chocolate World, where an automated ride carried us past displays that showed how Hershey's chocolete products are made. We learned, among other things, that by that morning the exhibition had hed 4,360,836 visitors since it was opened on June 30, 1973. Next we went to the Hershey Museum of American Life, a largely unimpressive collection of American Indian, Eskimo and Pennsylvania Dutch artifacts. The exit, as in so many tourist attractiona, was through a gift shop.

Then came the climax—at least in the opinion of Kay, our guide. We spent 45 minutes at Founders Hall, a $20 million tribute to Hershey and his wife, Catherine, at the school that they founded in 1909 for needy boys.

"Tha restrooms are fabulous," Kay said as we parked outside the hall. "I've never seen such beautiful restrooms. So please go to the restroom, whether you have to go or not." Most of us went. We also saw a magnificent rotunda, a spacious chapel-auditorium with carillon and organ, a luncheon hall for the school and two broad louoges.

We drove past the Hershey resort hotel and the Hershey Motor Lodge and Convention Center. We got a glimpse of the Hershey rose gardens and arboretum, but were denied a chance to visit Hersheypark, one of the prime amusement centers in the

It opened in 1912 to a blast of skyrockets shattening the night. Guests danced till dawn tippling champagne. The throngs were unmanageable.

Manila had reason to celebrate. Now visitors had a regal hotel offering baronial feasts, suites with private butlers, even newfangled telephones. Everyone came. Princes, maharajas and presidents. The heyday lasted generations.

THAT MANILA HOTEL'IS WITH US AGAIN. Renewed, restored and expanded. The spirit of 1912 blazes unquenched. In spacious rooms with high ceilings. Filigree and four-poster beds. Rattan and capiz. Penthouses. The new 18-story tower deftly blended into the 1912 plan. There's still a butler on-call in the corndor. Dining in four restaurants on cuisine that intermingles the best of four continents. Or in a pavilion floating on the water.

Acres of palatial gardens guard the waterfront, a swimming pool, tennis, golf, health spa and other resort niceties. Sightseeing, sailing, fishing, nightlife, gambling on a casino-ship are yours when you ask.

Don't miss it. The Manila Hotel is a must for any visitor to the Far East. See your travel agent for the details.

one of several large commercial operations in the area featuring kiddy rides, animals, shows, gaudy gift shops and the like. (It's hard oot to notice the various bumper stickers, seemingly on every second car. That's because the preger outrits hire boys to work the parking lots, affixing stickers to autos while their owners are checking things out.) Clark's is unusual in that it has a family of oative black bears that perform on lofty platforms and are fun to watch. What's more, the halfhour act can be seen for free from the parking lot, saving thrifty folks the $2.25 fee ($1.25 for children) that it costs to go inside and see the rest. Performances at 12, 2 and 4 P.M., weather permitting; weekends only during foliage season.

THE FLUME - A stunning natural gorge, it runs nearly 800 feet along the side of Mount Liberty, with 60foot-high granite walls, flowing water and two beautiful waterfalls. A hus goes from the entrance on U.S. 3 part way into the woods, then well-kept footpaths lined with maples, birches, ashes, spruces and poplars lead to the Flume, the equally wondrous Liberty Gorge and Cascade and e lovely pool fed by rushing waters from the cliffs above, All told, a mile and a half of delightful, woodsy walking. Admission to the area: $1.25 for adults, 75 cents for children aged 6 to 12, free under 6.

THE BASIN - Marked only by a small sign on the west side of the highway a bit north of the Flume, it's a big circular bowl eroded in a granite sheet over the years by stones and sand caught in an eddy-sort of e 20foot-wide pothole. Paths enable visitors to explore the surrounding aree to the accompaniment of the soothing sound of rushing water. A great cool drink cao be had from the flowing mountain streamlet that trickles out of the stone at the side of the short access road just below the sign. Nearhy are a few picnic tables, which in good weather are usually taken early in the day.

OLD BRIDLE PATH - The White Mountains claim the highest concentration of hiking trails anywhere. Opposite Lafayette Place, e campground and picnic area on U.S. 3 north of the Basin, is the start of the Old Bridle Peth, one of the easiest, Even rank amateurs can make the four-mile trek to the top of Mount Lafayette without straining. Allow several hours for the climb up, a stroll along the peak (looking down to the autumn colors) and the return. Temperatures drop swiftly; it's wise to dress for the occasion.

BEAVER TALE NATURE TRAIL -For those not up to the Old Bridle Path there is, af Lafayette Place itself, a three-tenths-of-a-mile nature path, built around a beaver bog. Half an hour will do for this one.

OLD MAN OF THE MOUNTAINS -Farther north, the profile of a man's face in granite, 48 feet from forehead to chin, looks out from a beight of 1,200 feet on Cannon Mountain, Best viewing spot is from Profile Lake, just off the road. This geological accident wasn't seen by white settlers until 1805; now it's the state's most recognot, but it has a certain fascination. Free view; telescopic look-see for a known as the Giant of the Hills.

> ABBIE GREENLEAF LIBRARY-A detour off U.S. 3 on State Route 18, a scenic, less-crowded road, leads to Franconia, a genteel and peaceful town with several good inns and restaurants. The local library, near the center of town, can provide a pleasant interlude for inveterate browsers. It's a very pretty building of light-colored brick, with marble-fronted fireplaces and a neatly manicured lawn. The Gale River flows gently, on the other side of the road. > SUNSET HILL HOUSE-Just off State Route 117 at Sugar Hill, this inn boasts one of the finest views in New Hamoshire. The two-room cocktail lounge is a good spot to sit and, for the price of a drink, take e long look out the window westward to the Green Mountains of Vermont. Sunset, needless to say, is the best time of day

> BEAVER BROOK RECREATION AREA-U.S. 3 leading north to Twin Mountain is uncluttered and affords excellent views of the peaks. Thick trees hug the road on both sides. At Beaver Brook, a tiny wayside station, there's a hand pump thet delivers cool, refreshing water. Also picnic tables and restrooms. Just a nice spot to pause in the outdoors.

MOUNT WASHINGTON - Even if thet $9.95 price tag on the train ride to the summit seems too steep, the six-mile drive from U.S. 302 to the railroad base station is worthwhile in itself: a scenic, paved road that slices through the wilderness with scarcely a sign of civilization. If the thought of reaching the summit of the Northeast's highest peak is irresistible, there are other ways of doing it that are less costly then the cog railway. A drive up the scary auto toil road, accessible from the other side of the mountain, costs $5 per car plus $1 for each person inside. A lift in an official station wegon costs $5 e head (half price for children under 12). Io good weather the gutsy can hike up free elong several paths; the easiest is the Jewell Trail, which begins near the railway ticket booth. The climb is gradual but count on a long day of it: four hours each way plus whatever time is spent pausing and taking in the beauty close up. Dress very warmly: the ground at the top is frost-covered ran down leaving an awkward silence. The Herzigs looked at each other. They had been waiting to bring something up. It was Gahrielle who spoke first. There is something we must ask," she said carefully, "Are you Jewish?"

CRAWFORD NOTCH STATE PARK -U.S. 302 goes through this notch (New Hampshirese for mountain pass) named for Abel Crawford and his sons, who built the first hotels there and turned the White Mountains into a resort area. # Putting Hospitality to the Test

"Yes," I answered warily. "We thought so," she went on, "from what you said in your letter. And Pete, you were in the coocentration camps?" He nodded. "We had to be sure," she said. Werner was frowning.

"You know," he told us, "I have read everything about it I could find. They didn't teach about this in school but I needed to understand for myself. how so much insanity could happen. I still cannot understand." He stopped. We didn't have any answers either, but the lines of communication were

They were both anxious to delineate their own place in history. They, weren't epologizing or denying but just establishing who they were. The Herzigs were both a few years younger than we: Werner was a baby during the war and Gabrielle wasn't born until afterward. Her father had heen a colonel in the Wehrmacht, a regular Prussian, with cropped hair and dueling scars that he was still proud of.

Werner told us that his father died in .1942. His stepfather was a schoolmaster, e very kind and idealistic man, hut by the same token a Nazi, "He didn't understand what they were when he joined the party," Werner said. "He was oot worldly enough to see what kind of people they were." There wasn't anything more to say: it had been a difficult conversation for all of us and no one wanted to hear or repeat pletitudes, so we said good night and shook hands and went

Next day, coincidentally, we got e call from a friend who was spending the year io Boston, She often visited us on weekends and holidays because her home was in Alabama, too far away to get back too easily. She woodered if we were free because she had a few days off. We heve another small. room in addition to the study. Pete told her to come on down and meet the company.

Odessa (who is black) and I first met in 1963 when we lived in the same dorm at summer school, I had finished. college and was taking a crash program of education credits so I coold get a teaching job. She was a teacher already, et an all-black high school in Birmingham, and was going to school in the North for two months. In September we returned to our respective cities hut we had become close enough friends to stay in touch permanentiy, even when we were e. thousand miles apart.

In 1963 Birmingham was so oppressively segregated that Odessa walked into her classroom ooe day and found her entire 12th-grade civics class missing—they were all in jail, having been arrested by Bull Connor for sitting in at a lunch counter. She turned the experience into an object lesson on the Bill of Rights. Shortly afterward, however, she quit hoth teaching and the South to take a community development job in New York. For several years we saw e great deal of her, until a former student convinced her to return: They could use her help with e new social welfare agency that was came north for a visit and announced that the South was starting to change for the better.

By 1973, 10 years after we first met, Odessa had risen to be director of a regional poverty program covering four counties. The Ford Foundation awarded her a fellowship to study Urban Administration in Boston and, she especially relished this irony, before she left, the City of Barningham held a testimonial dinner in her honor.

Werner and Gabrielle were fascinated with Odessa. They seemed amazed that she would prefer to go back to Alabama to live. Gabrielle told me afterward: "We are learning things. In Germany we are hearing so much about black and white in America, and about North and South But people are really more complicated than that. We would enjoy meeting more of your friends like this."

We promised to do what we could and in the next two weeks tried to get the Herzigs together with some of the people we think are really special. We took them up to see our friends John and Marian. John used to be an auto mechanic but recently he went into business repairing and restoring antique clocks; Marian keeps the books and helps pay the bills by working as a dental hygienist.

Pat and Don came up from North Carolina where they are both in graduate school. Pat is a New Yorker who was once a student of mine in high school; her husband is a gangling 6foot-3-inch-part-Cherokee, part-red-oeck-Florida-good-old-boy who graduated college at 18 and is finishing up a Ph.D in classics. He entertained us all mimicking an entire seminar on Herodotus in which the class was desperately trying to convey to its professor - e semi-senile gentleman who shuffled about the campus with a crablike gait—that he was forcing the same student to present the same paper for the third week in a row.

One day we piled into the car and drove to Bostoo to stay overnight with my husband's brother, camping out on the livingroom rug. Sam Stern is e teacher-administrator at Boston University, his wife Doris an electron microscopist there. In addition to providing a crash pad, they organized our day: Sam arranged for us to have a guided tour of an M.I.T. lab thet Werner was interested in; Doris took the day off and shepherded us around, from shopping at the Harvard Co-op to riding the swan boets in the Public

The following evening we drove to the Harvard Married Students Apartments to have dinner with some other old friends, Gail and Earl. Earl had refused to report for induction into the Army during the Vietnam War and they had spent the first two years of their marriage waiting for him to be arrested et any moment. Then, unexpectedly, he was granted Conscientious Objector status; he applied and was edmitted to Harvard Law School. One week before classes began he was summarity ordered to report to Los Angeles to do alternate service as an orderly in e mental hospital. He did his two years and returned to Harvard. Now he and his wife have a 2-year-old child, another on the way, a pile of debts and one more year of law school

We took one more trip with the Her-

we went down to New York, not so much to see the city as to pay respects. Again we camped in electing bags in my mother's living room walked around town and looked at everything, had dinner, saw a show. The next day we went to visit Pete's

. It was a tense situation for us: We were bringing the children of a Wehrmacht colonel and a Nazi idealist to have afternoon tea with the survivors of Bergen-Beisen, and we did not know what to expect. My in-laws were unusually formal, but graciously so. They made a point of offering everyone Lowenbrau beer and cold cuts from a German delicatessen to make the guests feel at home. To hide their nervousness. Werner and Gabrielle played with our son. It was apparent that they really liked hem, which pleased his grandparents; and I think the grandparents were impressed also with what we had come to like so much-Werner's integrity, natural courtesy and whimsical humor, as well as Gabrielle's high spirits, along with her capacity to be an attentive and appreciative listener.

Nothing profound was said, but when we left it was clear that the goodbyes were warmer and more genuine than the hellos had been. Pete asked his stepfather about the encounter afterward, wondering if he had felt any misgivings about having our visitors there. He thought for a moment and said, "No, they were only children, and how can you hate the childreo? On the Herzigs' last night with us we sat outside in the dark, listening to crickets and reminiscing about all the people they had met. They were moved by the readiness of everyone. to whom we introduced them to share themselves and go out of their way for strangers. They elso admired the determination and fixedness of purpose with which the people they met went about pursuing whatever it was that had meaning and importance for them. Each of these people was listening in some sense to e different drummer, life hadn't been easy for any of them, but they were resilient and hopeful for the future. Seeing this through foreign eyes, I felt that it was the real American opportunity, the real America that Werner and Gabrielle were hoping to find. It's just ironic that so many of us are too caoght up in getting and spending to hang

That last night's conversation was e long one. The Herzigs spoke of their own families back in Germany and their plans for the future. It was late when Werner said, "You know, it was very generous of your parents to have us to their home and to treat us with such kindness. It means a lot to us."

"We were wondering," Gabrielle edded, "do you think those other people we were supposed to have stayed with -the ones in Larchmont and Mamedid they not want to have us because we're Germans?"

"It's possible," I said.

"Ah, we thought perhaps this was so," Gabrielle said. It was the only time, apart from the first night, that we ever touched on the subject of the past or acknowledged the barrier. Now, by virtue of our being together and caring about each other, we bed made our separate peace.

AIR-INDIA ANNOUNCES ANOTHER CHOICE LONDON THEATRE SEASON.

Tf you're looking for an 8-day London Theatre Tour, choose the one that gives you some choice.

The Air-India 8-day London Theatre Tour.

We give you four theatre tickets. Three tickets to any plays you want to see. If the play's running and if there are tickets available, you've got it. (Only exceptions: no opera, ballet or Royal Shakespeare Company.)

The fourth ticket is to a performance at the exciting new National Theatre. And a guided tour is included.

How does all this stack up to other airlines theatre tours? Well, some of them don't give you as many tickets. And some of them don't give you as much choice. In fact, some of them don't give you any choice at all

An Air-India 8-day London Theatre Tour also gives you a great flight round-trip, 7 nights in a good hotel with private bath, an Avis car

THE PRICE OF DRIVING

partment of Transportation in Washington, D. C., based on maintenance. and other costs in suburban Baltimore, Md., provides some information. The cost of running a new standard-size car in 1976 that cost $4,864 will be $2,716, Laurence L. Liston and Tony Aiken report in a booklet published by the department. The figure allows for $1,215 in depreciation, which is always greatest-about 24 percentin the first year of a car's life. The total cost per mile in that first year is 18.73 cents.

During its anticipated 10-year, 100,-000-mile trip from assembly line to junkyard, a standard-size 1976 car's owning and operating costs-based on current prices-will total $17,878.96 or 17.9 ceots a mile. (In 1974, when the authors made their last study, the cost per mile was 15.9 cents.) The booklet adds that it will cost the owner of a 1976 compact $14,561.46 or 14.56 cents a mile during its 10-year life; the owner of a 1976 subcompact will pay $12,638.35 or 12.64 ceots a mile during the same period.

During the 10 years, Liston and Aikeo report, the standard-size car owner will pay $4,668.7 for 6,667 gallons of gasoline, $3,664 on maintenance and repairs, $1,678 for insurance and $2,209 for garaging, parking and tolls.

The authors took 60.1 cents as the current average price of unleaded gasoline. They put insurance on a new car at $214 in the first year, sliding to $140 for each of the tast five years with the abandonment of collision coverage. The value of the car after 10 years was assumed to be $35. The Continued on Page 22

INTRODUCING SAS VIKING VENTURES FROM $421 to $1015

Tours have always been considered a good way to see Europe.

Unfortunately, a lot of people come home remembering all the things that went wrong on their tours instead of what went right.

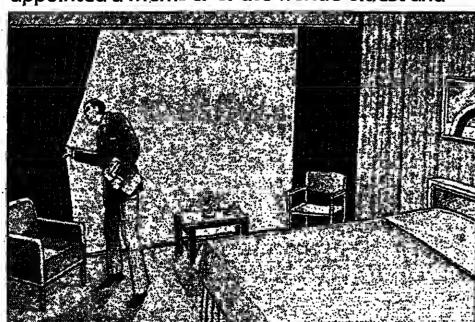

JUST BECAUSE YOU'RE FLYING ECONOMY.

Well, at Scandinavian Airlines, we make a habit out of making sure the only memories you have of a vacation are good ones.

You see, we've made money 13 years in a row. And one reason we've been so successful at running our airline is that we know something about tours.

Tours that are well planned and put together by leading travel agents. Tours that are reasonably priced. Tours that deliver everything we say they will.

On SAS, for example, you fly with one of the most intensively trained flight crews in the industry. You enjoy food so superb, we've been appointed a member of the world's oldest and most respected food society - "La Chaine des Rotisseurs".

While in Europe, you'll never lose a night's sleep over a hotel on our tours. Every hotel is checked inside and out. And if there's anything that isn't right, we won't send you there.

If the thought of getting up at 7 in the morning and being herded around all day has kept you off a tour until now, it shouldn't keep you off an SAS Fall/Winter vacation.

Our vacations give you time to see the sights that we think are important and then plenty of free time to explore things on your own. Naturally, if you'd like some suggestions on places to go, we help.

For this fall and winter, we have 11 vacations you can choose from. Including ones that offer Scandinavia alone or in combination with other parts of Europe.

AND TIME TO DO WHAT YOU THINK IS.

If you'd like more information, clip out the coupon. Or call a travel agent and ask about SAS.

We'll give you a good price on a European vacation. Without making you pay for it in the long run.

Icelandic has more to offer than the lowest jet fares of any scheduled airline to Luxembourg, in the heart of Europe.

We also have excellent hot meals, complimentary wines, after dinner cognac and attentive, courteous service.

In short, we have the same kind of service you'd get from other airlines, without the same high costs. Because our air fares aren't just a little lower. They're a lot lower. For example, on a 1-13 day trip we can save you $281 (Cost: $395). On 22-45 days we can save you $105 (Cost: $359). And on our APEX fare, we save you $52 (Cost: $310).*

That's a lot of money.

And it stands to reason, the more you save on the way to Europe, the more you'll have to spend when you get there.

Take a Caribbean cruise American Express style.

Take a 13/14-day winter cruise on the TSS Atlas.* American Express wants your Caribbean cruise to be an all-out success. So first we chartered a ship. Not just any ship. We chartered a beauty. She's everything a 14-day cruise ship should be.

Three swimming pools. Five bars. Three lounges. A theater. Shopping gallery. Sauna. Discothèque. And staterooms that convert to sitting rooms by day. Plus 20,000 feet of open deck space.

In fact, she's the flagship of the Epirotiki Line. Nothing less would do for you and American Express.

Then we refined the menu. We saw to it that the menus were deliciously Continental with an occasional Greek specialty. . In short, we made this a very appetizing 14-day cruise.

> We handpicked our cruise director.

We singled out an experienced man to make sure the service wasn't just up to par, but above. To be certain . the entertainment was first-rate. From the authentic Greek musicians to the swinging dance band.

To make sure your Caribbean cruise was an all-out success.

> We charted an enviable itinerary.

Fly/cruises from New York $895-$1900

Everglades, Florida, for 14 days to Cap Haitien, Ocho Rios, Aruba, La Guaira (Caracas, Venezuela). Grenada, Barbados, Guadeloupe and St. Thomas. A special 15-day Christmas cruise, at an additional cost, embarks Dec. 18 and includes Trinidad. A 13-day cruise leaves Jan. 2 (excluding Barbados). 14-day cruises sail Jan. 15, 29, Feb. 12, 26, March 12.

> We priced it right only $895-$1900.

The price looks even better when you consider that most statemoms are outside and have two lower beds. Rates are per person, double occupancy, and include air fare from N.Y.

This cruise is sold by travel agents and American Express Travel Service offices. Simply mail coupon for brochure. We've done everything else.
